

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

DURING

THE MIDDLE AGES.

THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF
GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND
DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHORITY OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

ON the 26th of January 1857, the Master of the Rolls submitted to the Treasury a proposal for the publication of materials for the History of this Country from the Invasion of the Romans to the reign of Henry VIII.

The Master of the Rolls suggested that these materials should be selected for publication under competent editors without reference to periodical or chronological arrangement, without mutilation or abridgment, preference being given, in the first instance, to such materials as were most scarce and valuable.

He proposed that each chronicle or historical document to be edited should be treated in the same way as if the editor were engaged on an Editio Princeps; and for this purpose the most correct text should be formed from an accurate collation of the best MSS.

To render the work more generally useful, the Master of the Rolls suggested that the editor should give an account of the MSS. employed by him, of their age and their peculiarities; that he should add to the work a brief account of the life and times of the author, and any remarks necessary to explain the chronology; but no other note or comment was to be allowed, except what might be necessary to establish the correctness of the text.

The works to be published in octavo, separately, as they were finished; the whole responsibility of the task resting upon the editors, who were to be chosen by the Master of the Rolls with the sanction of the Treasury.

The Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, after a careful consideration of the subject, expressed their opinion in a Treasury Minute, dated February 9, 1857, that the plan recommended by the Master of the Rolls "was well calculated for the accomplishment of this important national object, in an effectual and satisfactory manner, within a reasonable time, and provided proper attention be paid to economy, in making the detailed arrangements, without unnecessary expense."

They expressed their approbation of the proposal that each Chronicle and historical document should be edited in such a manner as to represent with all possible correctness the text of each writer, derived from a collation of the best MSS., and that no notes should be added, except such as were illustrative of the various readings. They suggested, however, that the preface to each work should contain, in addition to the particulars proposed by the Master of the Rolls, a biographical account of the author, so far as authentic materials existed for that purpose, and an estimate of his historical credibility and value.

INTRODUCTION.

INTRODUCTION.

The plan on which the three preceding volumes were edited has been followed in this. Every case which occurs in the Liber Assisarum or in Fitzherbert's Abridgment has been traced and noted. The rolls have been searched, as before, for the records of the cases reported, and the foot notes and the Index of Persons and Places will show in how many instances the search has been successful, even where the reports are silent as to the names of the parties.

The MSS. which have been used for the text of the present volume are the Temple MS., the Lincoln's Inn MS., the Additional MS. in the British Museum numbered 25184, and the Harleian MS. No. 741. They have already been described in preceding volumes, but there are some points in relation to them which may need further notice. The Additional MS. No. 25184 does not contain any reports of the fifteenth year of the reign, and could not therefore be collated for the reports of Hilary Term.

The MSS. used.

Although one MS. fails during a part of the period, another is, during a part of the period, almost equal to two. The portion of the MS. Harl. 741, which relates to Michaelmas Term, 14 Edward III., contains in many instances two reports or abridgments of the same case. Some of these agree with reports or abridgments in the Temple MS., beginning with No. 5 of the latter MS. They are not, however, in precisely the same order, as several other cases are interposed in the Temple MS. Of most of the cases so interposed there are also different reports or abridgments occurring in a different order in the Harleian MS. ; and sometimes the Harleian report appears to be an abridgment from the same source as the reports in the Lincoln's Inn MS. and the Additional MS. No. 25184. Sometimes also, when there is a report or abridgment common to the Harleian and the Temple MSS., there is another report or abridgment in the Harleian, and in that case usually a little fuller and with more frequent mention of names.

In using the Harleian MS. the following plan has been adopted. It has been, throughout the term, collated with the Temple MS. where collation was possible. All the cases which are reported in it, but not elsewhere, have been printed. A few cases which occur in it in two forms, and which occur only in it and in the Temple MS., have been printed in the two forms. It happens, however, most commonly that a form of report occurring only in the Harleian MS. is superior to other forms only in showing the names of the parties, and as those names can be more authoritatively ascertained from the record, the Harleian reports of this class have been omitted where the corresponding records have been found.

There are also in Hilary Term, 15 Edward III., a few cases of which there are two reports or a report and an abridgment in the Harleian MS., but it is needless to make any further general statement on the subject, as the foot notes show the facts in detail, and, where the reports are comparable, show how far the Harleian agrees with or differs from each report found in the Temple or the Lincoln's Inn MS.

Variation of Fitz-herbert's Abridgment from the known
MSS.

Attention has been called, in a preceding volume,¹ to the numerous instances in which there are found in manuscript independent reports of the same case differing inter se. As a rule the text of Fitzherbert's

Abridgment could be traced to one or other of the MSS. now in existence. Some of the cases, however, which are printed in the present volume appear in Fitzherbert's Abridgment in a form differing considerably from that in which they occur in any of the MSS. above mentioned. This fact is a confirmation of the suggestion previously made that there was not any reporter whose authority was generally recognised, or that, if there was, he had many rivals who were not without patrons in the legal profession. It seems that reporting was an open profession, and that some Judges and Counsel possessed reports in one form, others in other forms.

As in previous volumes, the order of the reports in the Temple MS. has been followed in the text, in cases of which reports exist in that MS. To this rule, however, one exception has been made. The case numbered 109 in Michaelmas Term has been placed last in that term, and nineteen cases which do not occur in the Temple MS. have been interposed between it and No. 89. The reason is that in case No. 109 Willoughby appears as an accused person deprived of office, and in some of the intermediate cases as a Judge. To have placed the case anywhere but at the end of the term would therefore have been to suggest the idea that Willoughby was acting as a Judge while a prisoner.

The order of the reports.

The fourteenth and fifteenth years of the reign of Edward III., though they have not attracted the special notice of historians, are in many ways memorable. In the fourteenth year one of the distinctions between the Norman or French ruler and the English subject was abolished by Statute.¹ The Presentment of Englishry, which had long survived the Conquest, upon which Bracton² dilated in the reign of Henry III., and which Fleta and Britton described in the middle of the reign of Edward I., had been for generations a degrading mark of servitude. The township or hundred was fined when any person was found slain within its limits, unless it could show that he was of English birth. The original object had been to prevent the murder of Normans or Frenchmen by Englishmen, which was, no doubt, frequent immediately after the Conquest. It served, however, afterwards to mark the difference between conquerors and conquered, a trace of which lingered still longer in the use of the French language in Courts of Justice and on solemn occasions. The inscription on the tomb of the Black Prince in Canterbury Cathedral, made in accordance with his own will, is a lasting monument of the pains with which the French language was cultivated at Court, even at a time when the Court did not despise the English of Chaucer. Perhaps there was never afterwards lavished so much care on a French memorial of anyone born in England. But, even many years after this, French was the language in which a petition was addressed to the Chancellor; and the Act by which an end was put to the Presentment of Englishry was not merely a formal recognition of a condition of society which had long preceded the enactment. It is, no doubt, recited that mischief had happened through ignorance as to Presentment of Englishry in some places, where fines had been inflicted by the Justices in Eyre for omission to make it. This may, however, be explained by the infrequency of the Eyres, by forgetfulness of the manner in which they should be met, and by the fact that the mode of presentment differed in different counties,¹ rather than by the existence of any difficulty in perceiving the difference between a French Prior and an English yeoman.

The King of England
assumes

It was no mere coincidence that Presentment of Englishry was abolished in the year in which Edward III.

¹ See Bract., 135, b. The words of the Act are so explained in Staunf., Cor., 18.

assumed the title of King of France, giving the title a place second to that of King of England. His claim, and the wars connected with it, had no small effect upon English society. He assumed the position of an English King ruling Frenchmen, which was the converse of that of the Conqueror, who had held the position of a French King ruling Englishmen. The pressing need of money for the purposes of the conflicts in which he was engaged prompted measures of conciliation to all classes of Englishmen from whom supplies could be extracted, and the Acts of the period commonly illustrate this policy, which was sometimes pursued in a manner not altogether consistent with dignity.

The Treasury was in a deplorable condition through the exhaustion caused by wars with the Scots as well as with the French. The King's jewels were in pawn;¹ the ordinary modes of taxation had been strained to the utmost; and it became necessary to devise some new expedient in order to carry on the government. Extraordinary taxes were as unpopular in the fourteenth century as they are in the nineteenth, and the manner in which they were imposed partook of the nature of a bargain. The Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Commons granted to the King, for two years, certain ninths—the ninth lamb, the ninth fleece, and the ninth sheaf in agricultural districts—the ninth of the goods and chattels of the inhabitants of cities and towns by assessment;² but the grant was not made without something in the nature of an equivalent.

Certain concessions, in fact, preceded the grant, taking the form of other Acts,³ in which it was made to appear that the King, remembering the hardships endured by the people of his realm during the evil years of the wars, had great compassion for them, and was willing to show favour to them, so that they might the better aid him. At their request, therefore, he released and pardoned various arrears due, up to the time at which he had passed to Brabant, in relation to the chattels of felons and fugitives, escapes, fines, issues forfeited, trespasses contrary to the forest laws, reliefs and scutages, amercements for murder, and debts due to himself.

The abolition of Presentment of Englishry was one of these concessions.

The abolition of the Presentment of Englishry was, in fact, another of these concessions, and preceded the Acts in which the ninths and other taxes were imposed. It is recited in the Act in which the ninths were granted to the King that it was in consideration of these precedent Acts that the grant was made. It is plain, therefore, that, when the life of the Englishman ceased to be of inferior value to that of the Frenchman in the eye of the law, it was by special favour under exceptional circumstances, and that a high price was paid for the boon.¹

¹ There is a well-known passage in the Dialogus de Scaccario (Lib. I., c. 10) which may, perhaps, be cited in opposition to the above remarks. It is to the following effect:—"Now" (in the reign of Henry II.), as "the English and Normans dwell" together and intermarry, the two "nations are so intermixed (I" speak of those of free condition) "that Englishmen can hardly be" distinguished from Normans—"except only the ascriptitii, who" are called villeins." This statement can be interpreted only in one way. It cannot mean that the Normans had become assimilated to the English, because, if so, they would have become assimilated to the unfree as well as to the free. It can only mean that the free English (differing in that respect from the unfree) had become assimilated to the Normans, sharing their privileges and speaking their language. It was, of course, the fact that the Court, the courtiers, the lawyers, and all holders of important offices (whatever their birth) had to speak French, and it was the fact that some persons of English descent held office and went to Court. These may well have been said to be indistinguishable from Normans. These, however, constituted but a very small portion of the population, and it is incredible that the English tongue had ceased to be spoken except by the bondmen. Had that been so, the language could never have been revived except by a revolution such as never occurred. The text of the Dialogus, as printed by Madox from the copies in the Black Book and in the Red Book of the Exchequer

Nothing, however, could serve to make the new taxes popular. The tax-gatherer was believed to be, and often was an extortioner. The more the taxes the wider was the field for his misdeeds. One of his devices appears to have been to levy the tax twice over. An example of this occurs in the present volume.¹ The collectors having already taken certain wool, as the moiety of wool shorn at a certain time, subsequently took other wool, and justified the taking as that of the same moiety. In this case the person aggrieved, having had a verdict given in his favour, recovered damages, and writs issued for the arrest of the collectors. From the complaints which were rife against all officers at this period, there is reason to believe that this was a typical and not by any means an exceptional instance of official misconduct.

There were grievous complaints made in Parliament, on behalf of the clergy, to the effect that the collectors had demanded from them the ninths granted by the recent Act, when in fact they had already paid tenths of the same things, and that they were thus taxed twice over in respect of the same matters. As a temporary measure writs issued to the collectors directing them to stay these proceedings against the clergy.² It was afterwards agreed that "the Ninths and the Tenths granted to the King should be paid in manner as they were granted, that is to say that those who held of the King by Barony and ought to come to Parliament, by summons, should pay the Ninths, and the persons

(of which he pointed out some of the imperfections), must be inaccurate in this as well as in other particulars. It cannot be reconciled either with later records or with the plain words of Bracton (134, b.-135, b.), of Fleta (Lib. I., c. 80), and of Britton (Lib. I., c. 2, § 15, and c. 7), which show the Presentment of Englishry to have continued in full operation, without distinction between free and unfree, at least as late as 1292—less than half a century before its formal abolition.

 “ of these temporalities they were to pay the Ninth, so “ that in respect of things for which they paid the one
 “ they should not be compelled to pay the other.”¹

Payment of taxes anticipated by a forced loan.

So great were the King's necessities that he could not even wait for the payment of the Ninth according to the terms in which they were granted. Almost immediately after the passing of the Act the Earls of Arundel and Gloucester and “Monsieur” William Trussell came from beyond sea and represented in Parliament the mischiefs and perils with which the King was threatened, through his inability to pay divers large sums to the commonalties of towns in Flanders and Brabant and to individuals who were his allies, unless he should be more quickly aided than he could be by the levy of the Ninth. Parliament accordingly granted 20,000 sacks of wool to be taken proportionally without delay, in every county of England, in the hands of whomsoever the wools might be found, provided always that satisfaction should be made to every one, of whom the wools should be so taken, out of the first money arising from the Ninth of the second year.²

Society
nearly dis-
organised.

There was thus a forced loan in addition to heavy and unusual taxes. Notwithstanding all the efforts made, the King was not successful in his foreign enterprise, and the elements of discord were multiplied on every hand. Laity and clergy alike were discontented by reason of the burdens imposed upon them, and the King was dissatisfied because even these burdens were inadequate to supply him with all that he needed. If the laity complained of the conduct of the King's officers, so also did the clergy; and the laity grudged even the ordinary payments to the clergy for commutation of penance, for probate of wills, and for performance of the marriage ceremony.¹ In short, society, such as it had been, was in danger of becoming completely disorganised, and it cannot be doubted that strong measures were required in order to effect a remedy.

¹ Rot. Parl., 15 Edw. III., No. 32.

Unsuccessful in his expedition abroad, and indignant that he had been compelled to abandon it at a moment when, as he believed, he might, if duly supplied with the means, have brought it to a prosperous issue, Edward III. returned unexpectedly to England.² He knew that there had been mismanagement in many places, and he suspected maladministration almost everywhere. He caused a number of persons, many of high position, to be imprisoned, and various Commissions to be issued for the purpose of enquiring into the supposed misdeeds of his officers. The enquiries were to extend over almost the whole field of the English body politic and social.

The agitation which was thus caused rises even to the surface of the reports themselves, commonly in some dry detail which would be unintelligible without illustration from other sources, but in one instance in a very striking and picturesque manner.

previously appeared in the reports as a Judge, appears in a report of Michaelmas Term, 14 Edward III.,¹ as a person accused of very heinous offences. He is brought before Justices of Oyer and Terminer in the custody of mace-bearers. He is reproached with having sold laws like cattle. He is not allowed to find bail, and he is led about from one county to another, a prisoner.

It is, however, necessary to look beyond the report for an explanation of the circumstances. The commission by virtue of which Willoughby was arraigned was a commission of Oyer and Terminer² (though not a commission "ad inquirendum"), directed to Sir Robert Parning (who had been Chief Justice of the King's Bench and had recently been appointed Treasurer), Sir Robert de Sadington (who was Chief Baron of the Exchequer), and Sir William Scot (who had just been appointed Chief Justice of the King's Bench). These appear to have been men on whose integrity the King supposed that he could in some sort rely, though, as will hereafter appear, not absolutely.

The commission was not to try Willoughby alone, but to try also Stonore (late Chief Justice of the Common Pleas), Shardelowe and Sharshulle (late Justices of the Common Pleas), whose names are familiar in the Year Books, Thomas de Ferrars, Nicholas de la Beche, Constable of the Tower, John de Pulteneye, Alderman of London, William de la Pole, late Baron of the Exchequer, John de St. Paul, and Michael de Wath (of whom the two last named had been Masters of the Rolls and joint Keepers of the Great Seal with Thomas de Baumburgh), John de Thorpe (who had been the locum tenens of the Treasurer in the twelfth year of the reign), Henry de Stratford, and Robert de Chigwell, late Clerks of the Chancery.

It is recited in the commission that it had come to the hearing of the King that these persons had, in the exercise of their respective offices, conducted themselves deceitfully and unfaithfully towards him and his people, and that he had therefore caused them to be arrested and kept in safe custody until enquiry should be made and justice done.¹ The manner in which the King became acquainted with the alleged facts was by common report and clamour of the people, and likewise through divers petitions presented against some of the accused before him and his Council as well in parts beyond sea as in parts within sea.²

Nature of
mission.

The accused were to be arraigned singly, at the suit of the King, on the matters contained in the petitions. The Commissioners were also to hear and determine all other misdeeds committed by these ministers, in respect of which the Commissioners could have information, by means of inquisitions to be by them taken, or in other lawful manner,³ whether at the suit of the King or at the suit of any other persons whatsoever desiring to complain or prosecute. All the Sheriffs of the Realm were to obey the Commissioners and cause jurors to come for the purposes of the enquiry.

It will be observed that there appears in the report, as the name of one of those who constituted the Court, Lord Wake ("le Seigneur de Wake"), although his name does not appear in the commission. As no commission or writ of association has been found, the explanation seems to lie in another record of a remarkable character.¹ It is an enrolment of Letters Patent to the effect that Thomas Wake of Lidell and other "mag-nates" and peers of the realm should not be accused, troubled, molested, or oppressed by the King, his heirs, or ministers (any more than they and their ancestors, peers of the realm, had previously been burdened or troubled in the time of the King or his progenitors) for certain causes. These were that they had taken upon themselves, at the King's request, for the advantage and tranquillity of the people of the realm, to sit and enquire touching damage and trouble caused to the King and his people by his ministers and others, and touching other acts in excess of authority.

Their
names.

This instrument appears to indicate that the peers mentioned in it, whether by virtue of a general commission or otherwise, may have exercised the functions of assessors to the Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer, who had to try Stonore, Willoughby, and the other Judges. Each of them was named² in one or other of the "Grand Commissions" described below. Though, however, the other Commissioners were numerous, the indemnity was granted to these alone. They were Baron Wake, Henry of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, and William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton (both kinsmen of the King), John de Veer, Earl of Oxford, Richard, Earl of Arundel, William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, Hugh de Courtenay, Earl of Devon, Gilbert de Umfraville, Earl of Angus, Thomas de Berkeley (Baron Berkeley), Anthony de Lucy (Baron Lucy), and Robert de Clifford (Baron Clifford).

This may be accepted as a list of the leading men in England in whom the King had the greatest confidence for it seems clear that he did not implicitly trust any Commissioners who had not the special protection. It is even said that Wake himself was imprisoned for a short time on suspicion.³ From the tenour of the commissions, indeed, it can hardly be supposed that the King had any reliance upon any holders of office in the kingdom.

Be this, however, as it may, Wake was clearly sitting on the Bench during the trial of Willoughby, and taking an active part in the proceedings. He was not disposed to listen with favour to any points of law which he might consider too technical; and he had adopted the principle that if the King made an accusation, whether rightly or wrongly, the proper course for the accused was to ask for pardon. The case, however, has points of general interest apart from the question of the guilt or innocence of any particular person.

Not least remarkable among the features of the report of Willoughby's arraignment is the occurrence and repetition of the phrase "clamour of the people." Sir Robert Parning, who presided in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, addressed Willoughby in a tone not unlike that in which a judge in a French Court of Justice might now address an unconvicted prisoner. He stated the charge, and further alleged that the facts had "by clamour of the people about the same" been shown to the King. Willoughby contended that there was technically nothing against him, because there was no indictment (the words ad arenandum being substituted in the Commission for the usual form ad inquirendum) and no suit by a party. Parning, however, repeated that the King was informed by clamour of the people, implying, of course, that this was sufficient accusation.

This was not the first time that the expression "clamour of the people" had been heard in the Courts, but it was an expression of evil omen, and seems always to have boded that the settled laws of the realm were in danger. In the reign of Edward II. it was maintained that, if treasonable deeds were notorious and well known in the realm, the King might record the fact, and that when the fact was recorded judgment might be pronounced, without trial, against the offender.¹ This doctrine, in which the extremes of democracy and despotism met, was modified in one important particular when applied to Willoughby's case. It was not asserted that the notoriety of any particular actions was sufficient to warrant judgment against the actor without trial, but only that it in itself constituted an accusation without the intervention of any of the usual forms.

He protested, but afterwards threw himself on the King's mercy.

Willoughby, it is clear, did not admit that even this modified proposition was law, but he did afterwards throw himself on the King's mercy because he would not plead with his liege lord. Lord Wake remarked that this was the wisest (le plus sage) plea that Willoughby had ever pleaded. So it was, without doubt, in the interests of Willoughby's life and liberty and future welfare, but the circumstances would not justify the translation of the French words as "the most learned." At that crisis law was one thing, policy another, and Willoughby judiciously bent to the storm. For this reason there appears to have been no express decision on the particular point which he had raised. Possibly, too, he may have been released in consequence of the agitation in Parliament and elsewhere caused by the proceedings on the numerous Commissions which issued about the same time.

He was accused of taking bribes from persons indicted: his view of the relations of Justices to indictors.

Among the most striking points in the proceedings against Willoughby are the statements made by others and by himself with respect to indictments. It was alleged that he procured the indictment of certain persons and stated to the indictors² that the persons indicted should not be delivered otherwise than by them, but nevertheless took bribes from the persons indicted for delivery by persons other than the indictors. Parning, who was presiding, said that, in cases of indictment, there should be upon the jury to try the accused both indictors and others. Willoughby did not deny this, but threw the blame upon the Sheriff, whose duty it was to cause a good jury to come. Parning still maintained that, in the interest of the King, care should be taken to have indictors on the jury. Willoughby then tried to clear himself by saying that if there were none, it was at most but an error, and no indication of improper motive in the Justice. Counsel pointed out that this excuse would not serve, because Willoughby had acted differently in other cases. Willoughby, then, apparently referring to the allegation concerning his dealings with the indictors before the persons indicted were brought to trial, made this very memorable statement which seems to have passed unchallenged:—"It is the custom for a Justice to go to the "indictors to encourage and inform them."

As to the fact that presenters or indictors commonly sat on the jury which tried the accused there need be no sort of doubt. The custom had descended from the earliest days after the abolition of Ordeal. It is strange, but it is perfectly clear, that little or no improvement had been effected in the trial of persons accused of criminal offences in the interval between the reign of Henry III. and that of Edward III. It is certain that the accused could still be tried by his accusers, or at any rate by a jury composed in part of his accusers. It was in accordance with law that he should in certain cases be allowed to challenge them, if he wished, but no less clear that in other cases a challenge was denied him. This is shown by the Rolls of Parliament of the period of these reports, as will presently appear.¹ It is, therefore, not at all difficult to believe that the King's Justices believed they were acting in accordance with their duty, in the interest of the King, when they went "to encourage" the indictors. One of the charges against Willoughby, it will be observed, was that he had done (though for bribes) precisely that which from a modern point of view ought to have been done—that he had taken measures which debarred persons who had already made an accusation from finding a condemnatory verdict against the persons whom they had denounced.

Issue of General
Commissions to enquire, hear, and determine.

It is not certain whether the whole of the Commissions which issued at this period were enrolled, and there is some reason to suspect that Baron Wake and the Peers mentioned with him may have had Commissions which do not appear on the Patent Roll. The Commissions, however, which do there appear are numerous, and are mostly a few days earlier in date than the Commission to arraign Stonore, Willoughby, and other Judges. Among the many Commissioners for the various counties were, in addition to the Peers already named and other persons, Sir Robert de Bouchier (the Chancellor), William de Kyldesby (the Keeper of the Privy Seal), Sir Robert Parning (the Treasurer), Sir Robert de Sadington (Chief Baron of the Exchequer), and Sir William Scot, who was appointed Commissioner just before his promotion to be Chief Justice of the King's Bench.

In these Commissions maladministration was alleged against the Justices of the two Benches, of Forest Pleas, of Assise, of Gaol Delivery, and of Oyer and Terminer, Escheators, Sub-escheators, Coroners, Sheriffs, Under-sheriffs, and their subordinates, Taxors, Sub-taxors, Admirals and their deputies, Vendors, Assessors, and Receivers of the Ninths and other Subsidies, Barons of the Exchequer, Clerks of the Chancery, of the Exchequer, of the Receipt, and of other Courts, Keepers of Forests, Verderers, and their subordinates, Collectors of Customs, Controllers, Weighers of Wool, the King's Butlers and their deputies, Receivers of the King's money in the country, Masters of the Horse and their grooms, Stewards and Marshals of the Household of the King and of his son Edward, Duke of Cornwall, Clerks of the Market, Purveyors of the Household of the King, of his Court, and of the Duke of Cornwall, Keepers of Gaols,

Electors, Triers, and Arraiers of men-at-arms, hobelars, and archers, Bailiffs errant and others the King's Bailiffs and Ministers.¹

The order in which the officers are mentioned in the Commissions has been observed in the paragraph next preceding, though it does not seem to follow any rational classification. It will, however, be seen that the Army, the Navy, the administration of Justice, and the collection and appropriation of the Revenue were all objects of suspicion.

Apart from the terms, "oppression, extortion, damage, "annoyance, and acts in excess of authority," there are more specific allegations relating, some apparently to the whole of the officers under suspicion, and others to those of particular departments. The charge of taking sums of money and other gifts which had been extorted by officers for the due execution of their offices, or in order that they might excuse or favour the givers, appears to be of general application; and the charge of omitting to answer to the King for sums of money received to his use appears to be hardly less extensive.

Particular stress is laid on evasions of the laws affecting wools, from which a considerable part of the revenue was derived. It was alleged that the King's officers and others had fraudulently exported, in large quantities, wools not duly cocketted, and with the customs and subsidy thereon unpaid. This was said to be to the grievous loss of the people, and to the manifest disadvantage and impoverishment of the State.

Enquiry was also to be made as to maintenance and champerty, and all injuries done by means of conspiracies, confederacies, and pleas undertaken for a share of the matter in demand. The maintainors of false assises, pleas, and other complaints are coupled in the same sentence with malefactors who went about armed in fairs, markets, and other places, public or private, beating, wounding, maiming, and extorting ransoms by threats of death and other duress.

And as to officers.

The misdeeds of clerical officers were also not forgotten, and the power of the Commissioners extended to oppressions and extortions alleged against Archdeacons, Officials, Deans, Sequestrators, and their Commissaries and officers.

Courts of Oyer and Terminer:
General
and Special.

It is strange that, where terms of art are of so much importance as in the law, the definitions given in respect of Courts of Oyer and Terminer should differ so widely as they do in different places. The books do not agree in the statements which they contain with regard to the meaning of the words "general" and "special" as applied to these Courts. Coke, for instance, describes as Courts of Special Justices of Oyer and Terminer only Courts raised by the Statutes 36 Edward III., c. 4., 1 Richard II., c. 6., and 39 Elizabeth, c. 4. and c. 6.¹ Hale, on the other hand, says that Special Commissions of Oyer and Terminer are of several kinds,² and classifies them under six heads. One of his chief distinctions between the general and the special, however, appears to be that the General Commission applies to a whole county, and the Special to a particular town, hundred, or other precinct.³ Again, the term Special Commission is commonly applied to a Commission issuing under special circumstances to try particular persons, as, for instance, the Commissions to try Anne Boleyn's alleged paramours, and many others in the Baga de Secretis.

and Particular.

There is, however, a distinction drawn by Coke, and fairly maintained, between General and Particular Commissions of Oyer and Terminer.⁴ In the far-reaching Commissions of the year 14 Edward III., above described,

² 2 Hale, P. C., 10.

³ 2 Hale, P. C., 10-23.

⁴ 4 Inst., 162-3.

we have examples of the General Commission on the one hand, and in the Commission to try Willoughby and those mentioned with him (exceptional though it was), an example, on the other hand, of the Particular Commission.

It is not, however, easy to fix the time at which there arose the distinction between the General Commission of Oyer and Terminer and the Particular Commission. Both were, in the reign of Edward III., of very great importance, and throw much light upon the history of the law and of the people. Some of the proceedings on a General Commission in the forty-second year have been reported.¹ Among other matters it appears how one of the presentments made under the General Commission was that one J. S., of E., with the assent and aid of a certain "Monseigneur J. At Lee," had taken one T. S. with certain goods and chattels, and imprisoned him, and had subsequently conducted him to Gloucester Castle, and there imprisoned him for four weeks until he had made a fine to them of 40*l.*, of which he had to give 20*l.* to J. S. in part payment for his release. J. S. was put to make answer to this. He said that a Commission came from the Chancery to him and others to take T. and T.'s goods and chattels, and conduct T. to Gloucester Castle, by virtue of which he took and conducted T. thither, together with certain goods and chattels, that is to say, woollen cloths to the value of 100*s.*, which were taken by the constable of the town of T. and four other good men, and delivered to John Oliver, the Sheriff, by indenture between them, without this that he took any fine. And he demanded judgment whether in respect of that taking there was any tort. And he produced the Commission [from the Chancery]. And the Justices said that this Commission was contrary to law—to take a man and his goods, without indictment, or suit of party, or other due process. Therefore they retained the Commission in their possession, and said that they would show it to the Council of our Lord [the King]. This illustrates in a remarkable manner the relations of the Council, the Chancery, and the Courts of General Oyer and Terminer.

It appears in this case and elsewhere¹ that, when the Commission was general in the fullest sense, it was to enquire into and hear and determine all treasons, felonies, conspiracies, champerties, grievances, extortions, deceits, and other offences or wrongs against the King and his people, as well at the suit of the King as at the suit of party.

The Statutes relating to Particular
Writs or Commissions of Oyer and Terminer.

The Acts in which mention is made of Justices of Oyer and Terminer by that name are, like the later books, obscure in more points than one, and need careful comparison with those which have been supposed to refer to Justices of Trailbaston. In the Statute of Westminster the Second² it is enacted that a writ of Trespass "de audiendo et terminando" shall not be granted before any Justices except Justices of either Bench and Justices in Eyre, unless (nisi) for enormous trespass, when it is necessary to provide a speedy remedy. In the Statute of Northampton³ it is recited that Commissions or writs to Justices⁴ of Oyer and Terminer had been granted to persons procured by the parties concerned, contrary to the previous Act. It was therefore provided that Oyers and Terminers should be granted only before Justices of either Bench or Justices in Eyre, and that only in case of injury by violence⁵ or horrible trespass, and by the King's special grace.

The most reasonable interpretation of these words seems to be that in its strict technical sense a writ of Oyer and Terminer was not general but particular,

³ 2 Edw. III., c. 2.

⁴ The French word translated

in so far as it followed on the complaint of a particular person. Any one who felt himself aggrieved or had some animosity against his neighbour might, apparently, before the Statute of Northampton, have gone to Chancery and sued out a writ of Oyer and Terminer as of course. He might also, by representing that the matter was urgent, have excluded the Justices of either Bench, and procured nominees of his own to try his own case. The Statute provided an effectual remedy by requiring that, in all writs or Commissions of Oyer and Terminer, the Justices of either Bench or in Eyre should be named, and that the writs or Commissions should not issue as of course.

Thus after the passing of the Statute of Northampton it was of the essence of a particular writ or Commission of Oyer and Terminer, under the second chapter, that the names of certain Justices, but not that the names of any other persons should be included. In the Commissions of Enquiry with powers to hear and determine, to which the names of Grand Commission and Commission of Trailbaston appear to have been given in the reign of Edward-III., it was necessary, under the seventh chapter, that certain persons, in French termed "Grantz," and in Latin "Magnates," should be appointed together with some of the Justices of one of the two Benches, or others learned in the law.¹ The constitution of the Court would therefore, in ordinary course, have been widely different in the two cases, and might have been wholly different. A Court of Oyer and Terminer in its strictest sense might have consisted wholly of Justices of either Bench or Justices in Eyre, and a Court of Trailbaston wholly of Peers and Sergeants-at-Law.

The difference between a Court sitting by virtue of a particular writ of Oyer and Terminer, and one sitting by virtue of a General Commission of Oyer and Terminer or Trailbaston.

For a special reason the words "writ or Commission" have been used above in relation to Oyer and Terminer, the word "Commission" in relation to Trailbaston. It seems to be certain that there could be no Trailbaston without a Commission under the Great Seal, but that there might be Oyer and Terminer by writ. There might also of course be Oyer and Terminer by Commission. It is asserted by Chief Justice Hale that the Justices of Oyer and Terminer in criminal cases could "not be by writ, but must be by Commission under the Great Seal."¹ He appears to rely on a case, cited also by Coke,² in which a writ was directed to the Justices of Labourers, in the forty-second year of the reign of Edward III., to enquire of champerties, conspiracies, and the like. In virtue of this writ there was an indictment, but it was held by all the Justices of the King's Bench that all the proceedings were bad because the Justices had no warrant in the absence of a Commission.³ It will be seen that this doctrine is quite in accordance with the fact that there was always a Commission by Letters Patent to Justices of Trailbaston who always had criminal jurisdiction.

The various forms of Commissions and Writs to enquire, hear, and determine.

A distinction has sometimes been drawn not only between Commissions of Trailbaston and other Commissions of Oyer and Terminer, but also between Commissions of Oyer and Terminer, and Commissions of Enquiry.⁴ The fact, however, is that, as a rule, all were Commissions of Enquiry with certain variations in their scope, the Justices being appointed ad inquirendum, that is to say to take indictments or presentments. Sometimes, indeed, Commissions of Enquiry have been classed as Commissions of Oyer and Terminer even when the words ad audiendum et terminandum did not occur in them, as in the case of enquiry touching broken sea walls.⁵

These Commissions (or in some cases writs) took different forms, and appear to have acquired different names according to the shape in which they were drawn.

Thus the recital might be in general terms at the beginning (quia datum est nobis intelligi) and throughout (quod diversa, oppressiones, extortiones, &c. sunt illata). It might be in the like general terms at the beginning, and partly particular and partly general afterwards (quod A. et B. . . . ac alii ballivi . . . se male gesserunt). It might be in particular terms at the beginning (ex gravi querela A. accepimus) and in general terms afterwards (quod quidam malefactores parcos frugerunt). It might be in the like particular terms at the beginning and partly particular and partly general afterwards (quod B.C. et D. et alii malefactores vi et armis insultum fecerunt). It might be wholly in particular terms (ex gravi querela A. accepimus quod B. bona et catalla ipsius A. vi et armis cepit et asportavit). Even these forms were not immutable, but the general or particular facts or allegations might be differently expressed. In any case, however, the Justices were to enquire, and usually to hear and determine. The Commission to try Willoughby and others was exceptional, and was not strictly a Commission of Enquiry, being ad arenandum and not ad inquirendum, though it was a Commission of Oyer and Terminer.

It is worthy of notice that Coke in his chapter on the Court of the Justices of Oyer and Terminer has not mentioned the remarkable Commissions of the year 14 Edward III. as Commissions of Oyer and Terminer, but has, apparently, devoted three lines to them in his chapter on the Court of Justices of Trailbaston.¹ He states, however, in general terms, that Justices of Trailbaston sat by virtue of Commissions of Oyer and Terminer. In order to understand the matter it is necessary to dismiss from consideration the modern practice of directing Commissions of Oyer and Terminer, as of course, to the Justices of Assise. At the period of the reports in the present volume the Justices of Oyer and Terminer were quite distinct.

Jurisdiction and Proceedings under Commissions of Trailbaston.

The Court of the Justices of Trailbaston was, so to speak, a connecting link between the ordinary Courts of Justices of Oyer and Terminer and the Court of the Justices in Eyre. Every Court of Trailbaston appears to have been a Court of Oyer and Terminer, though every Court of Oyer and Terminer was not a Court of Trailbaston. The ordinary functions of a Court of Oyer and Terminer, under a particular Commission, at any rate, were to hear and determine particular offences, or trespasses. The Court of Trailbaston seems to have had in addition some sort of general jurisdiction in actions between party and party, even where land was concerned, though there is nothing to show that this jurisdiction extended beyond cases of trespass.

There is a reported case of the second year of Edward III.¹ in which some question relating to land was brought before Justices of Trailbaston. In this the action was commenced by bill, and the defendant pleaded the general issue Not Guilty. A real action could not have been brought by bill, and the plea of Not Guilty could not have been pleaded by any tenant in a real action. There is, therefore, nothing to show that the Justices of Trailbaston had any such jurisdiction in common pleas as was possessed by the Justices in Eyre. It was, however, distinctly laid down that, so far as the authority of the Court of Trailbaston went, the Justices were, as it were, Justices in Eyre ("sont en leur case come Justices en Eire").

The Statute of Rageman.

If, as has been commonly supposed, the Commission of Trailbaston was grounded upon the "Statute of Rageman" it was a general and not a particular Commission of Oyer and Terminer, and it appears to have been regarded in this light in the earlier part of Coke's

chapter on Justices of Trailbaston.¹ In relation to this subject it is of some importance to set forth clearly what were the provisions of the so-called Statute of Rageman. It commences thus :—²

“ It is agreed by our Lord the King, and by his “ Council, that Justices do proceed throughout the realm
 “ to enquire of, hear, and determine plaints and actions
 “ for trespasses committed within these twenty-five years “ passed before the feast of St. Michael in the fourth “ year of the reign of King Edward, as well in respect “ of the King’s bailiffs and officers as of other bailiffs “ and all other persons whatsoever, except appeals of “ felonies and except plaints and actions pending else“ where before the King’s Justices, or in the County “ Court, by writ or without writ, so nevertheless that “ they do hear and determine the causes brought before

 “ as well in respect of outrageous takings and of all

 “ the King and others mentioned in Inquests hereto“ fore made by command of the King, as of trespasses “ committed since, and particularly of trespasses com“ mitted since, by any bailiffs whomsoever, against the “ good men by whose oaths Inquests shall have been “ made. And the King willeth that for relief of “ the people and for speedy execution of justice the “ plaints of every one, as well by writ as without “ writ, be heard before the aforesaid Justices and “ determined according to the articles delivered unto
 “ the same Justices. And this is to be understood as “ well within liberties as without.” Offences against Statutes were also placed within the jurisdiction of the Justices. In cases in which imprisonment lay the provisions were :—“ Let the trespassers be put by good

"mainprise to appear before the King at the Parliament next following, if they can find mainpernors, and, if not, let them remain in prison."

Coke remarks that the Commission under the Statute of Rageman had long since vanished, partly, as he supposes, on account of its reference to the next Parliament, and had been left out of the Register as not to be put in execution.¹ He, however, assigns the Statute of Rageman to the year 33 Edward I.,² confounding it with the Ordinatio de Trailbastons, or directions as to the mode of proceeding in Trailbaston, which appear on the Roll of Parliament of that year.³ Its true date appears to be the year 4 Edward I. Moreover, there were certainly proceedings under it before the year 33 Edward I. There still exist records with the heading "Placita domini Regis de Quo Warranto et Ragemann" of earlier date.⁴ Many of the cases, though not all, were before Justices in Eyre. That, however, might well be, as the Commission of Trailbaston was nearly akin to the Commission to Justices in Eyre, and there was considerable resemblance between the two Courts.

It does, nevertheless, seem that another Act took the place of the Statute of Rageman early in the reign of Edward III. Both were restricted in application, to time past, and this fact may explain the complaints afterwards made as to the issue of commissions⁵ touching matters of more recent occurrence.

Coke’s mode of referring to the Commissions, which he describes as Commissions of Trailbaston, is somewhat obscure. It was no fault of his, however, that he was not imbued with the ideas of historical accuracy which prevail in the nineteenth century. He not unfrequently cited a worse authority when he might have cited a better. It has already been shown that he cited the try Willoughby, and a Commission appointing Justices in Eyre.

Red Book of the Exchequer for a record of the early part of the reign of Edward III. when the Red Book of his time contained only a not very accurate copy of the instrument made about the time of Henry VI.¹ So here, although he mentions the Patent Roll, he must have taken his information from some imperfect copy or calendar, and not from the roll itself. His words are:—² “A Commission of Trailbaston was granted to “ Robert Parning, Treasurer, and others in London, “ Middlesex, and Surrey, and like Commissions were “ granted in other counties,” and he refers to membranes 2 and 8 of the Patent Roll.

In the Commission relating to the three counties, Parning, though one of the Commissioners, is not the first named. He is the third, and the names of Sir Robert de Bouchier, the Chancellor, and of William de Kyldesby, the Keeper of the Privy Seal, stand before his.³ On the other hand, Parning is the first named among the Commissioners for the arraignment of Stonore, Willoughby, and others,³ and is also the first named of the Justices in Eyre at the Tower of London.⁴ There is thus a confusion which it is somewhat difficult to disentangle. It may, however, be regarded as certain that Coke did not speak of the Commission by which the Justices in Eyre were appointed as a Commission of Trailbaston, for the following reasons. The Commission of the Eyre occurs on a different membrane ⁴ of the Patent Roll to either of those to which he has referred, and there is no reference in it to the three counties of London, Middlesex, and Surrey. Nor could he have spoken of the Commission relating to Willoughby and the others as a Commission of Trailbaston, because there is not in that any mention of the three counties. Indeed, there is some ground for suspecting not only that Coke never saw the roll, but also that he was not aware that there had been a Commission to Justices in Eyre in the 14th year of the reign of Edward III., that the Eyre was held in the 15th year, or that Willoughby and other Judges and eminent men had been arraigned in a Court of Oyer and Terminer.

By a process of exhaustion, therefore, it is possible to arrive at the conclusion that the "Commission of Trail-
"baston" to which special reference is made is that in which the Chancellor was the first-named Commissioner, and for the purposes of which a jury was to be summoned from the three counties of London, Middlesex, and Surrey.¹ This is confirmed by Coke's other reference, as similar Commissions relating to other counties do in fact appear on the membrane which he mentions.² So far, therefore, as Coke was acquainted with these Commissions or with abstracts or copies of them, it seems to have been his opinion that they were Commissions of Trailbaston.

The recital in these Commissions is in the general form, quia datum est nobis intelligi, and no particular individuals are named in them, though there is a long catalogue of officers who were supposed to have committed misdeeds in the exercise of their offices. There is good reason to believe that Commissions of this nature are rightly termed Commissions of Trailbaston. There is considerable resemblance in their forms to the language of the Statute of Northampton, c. 7, cited above.³ There is a reference in that Act to the Commissions appointed in the reign of Edward I. There is also a stronger resemblance in that than in any other Act to the Statute of Rageman, which is commonly associated with the Commission of Trailbaston. Last of all, Commissions of Trailbaston (one of which has been

If this reasoning be correct, the definition of a Commission of Trailbaston (whatever the meaning of the word Trailbaston may be) is a Commission of Oyer and Terminer of the most general kind. It might, perhaps, have differed in form according to the particular exigencies of the time at which it issued, and the attention of the Commissioners might have been specially directed to a particular class of offences, and even particular classes of officers at particular times; but it seems to have been always general in the sense that it contained no mention of any particular person as one to be tried. The Commissions which issued in the year 14 Edward III. were in the following year termed "Grand Commissions,"³ and this seems to be a very correct mode of describing them. That kind of offence which might now be colloquially described as brigandage appears to have been always included in the jurisdiction.

An Eyre

Closely connected with "Grand Commissions," with the general charges of corruption, and, perhaps, with the accusations directed against the Judges, was the proclamation of an Eyre early in the fifteenth year of the reign. The Commission to Parning and his associates⁴ is dated the 17th of January in the 14th year, and directs them to hold Common Pleas as Justices in Eyre, at the Tower of London, hac vice. They were also (as Justices in Eyre had previously done) to hear and determine matters relating to franchises, as well as trespasses, and the complaints of all persons complaining or desiring to complain of any bailiffs or officers of the King or his immediate predecessor or others, and to make sufficient amends in accordance with law and with the Articuli Itineris delivered to them. They were to commence their sittings at the Tower on Monday in the second week of Lent, and so did, as appears by the record.

At first sight it may appear a misnomer to describe as Justices Itinerant Justices who, by the terms of their Commission, were to sit only in one place and that the capital. The functions of the Justices in Eyre, however, were not simply to travel but to exercise a certain and peculiar jurisdiction. It was undoubtedly with a view to the creation of the jurisdiction that the Justices were appointed and the Eyre proclaimed. When the Eyre was in any county the jurisdiction of other Courts in the particular county was suspended,¹ excepting that of the King's Bench,² but not excepting even that of the Common Pleas. Effect of the Proclamation of an Eyre.

Whenever Justices in Eyre were appointed a writ was sent to the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas directing them to adjourn all the pleas of the county in which the Eyre might be into the Court of the Eyre, to be there determined by the Justices in Eyre. Thus there appears on the Plea Roll of the Court of Common Pleas of Hilary Term in the fifteenth year of the reign of Edward III. the King's writ close³ to the Justices commanding them to adjourn all pleas touching the citizens and other persons of the City of London before the Justices in Eyre appointed to hold common pleas at the Tower.

After the proclamation, the authority of the Court of Common Pleas over pleas of the county in which the Eyre was proclaimed ceased for the time absolutely. No proceedings of any kind, whatever the stage at which an action might have arrived, could be permitted. Even if a person sued on a Statute Merchant had been imprisoned, and had, upon showing indentures of defeasance, obtained a writ of Audita Querela directed from the Chancery to Justices of the Court of Common Pleas, they could not take any action whatever. They could not even summon the creditor with the object of adjourning him into the Eyre, but the Court of the Justices in Eyre would grant the writ of summons. It was said too, and the statement appears to be consistent in principle, that, when proclamation had been made, it was the Sheriff's duty to return all writs returnable in the Court of Common Pleas, not to that Court, but to the Court of the Justices in Eyre.¹ Moreover the custody of the Plea Rolls of common pleas in the Eyre was committed to a particular officer during the King's pleasure.²

The name of Parning, which, as already remarked, occurs first in the Commission of Oyer and Terminer to try Stonore, Willoughby, and others, occurs first also in the Commission appointing the Justices in Eyre, and the name of Scot, the recently appointed Chief Justice of the King's Bench, occurs in both. Thus, although the Justices of the Eyre were more numerous, they had among them the leaven of the other Court, and there was obviously a common object in these two Commissions and in the Commissions of Trailbaston.

Reasons
for apply-

of a Court

London.

If it be asked why the City of London in particular was selected as the scene of an Eyre there are two answers to the question. In the first place, it was provided in the Statute of Northampton, c. 7, already cited, that no prejudice should arise to the City by reason of the Commissions mentioned in the Act. It therefore became necessary, unless London was to be exempted altogether from the enquiries which were to be made, that some other mode of action should be employed against it. As has already been shown, the Court of the Eyre resembled in some respects the Court of Trailbaston, and, when a Commission of Trailbaston was inapplicable, it was only natural that a Commission to Justices in Eyre should be brought into operation. In the second place, the King had not been so well pleased with the recent conduct of the City authorities that he would be disposed to show them special favour.

The City, which had, since the expulsion of the Jews in the reign of Edward I., been, no doubt, regarded as one of the chief sources from which money could be caused to flow into the King's coffers in time of emergency, had recently conceded only a fourth of the King's demand for a loan, and that not without great reluctance and strong pressure.

On Ash Wednesday, in the fourteenth year of the reign of Edward III., a messenger came to Andrew Aubrey, the Mayor, requiring him, and the Aldermen, and the wealthiest persons of the City, to appear before the King and Council on the following Thursday. When they appeared the King desired them to lend him 20,000*l.* for the purposes of the war beyond sea. They prayed permission to consider the matter, but were required to be prepared with their answer on the next day (Friday). They agreed that they could not lend more than 5,000 marks, which sum they offered. The King refused it, and peremptorily commanded the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty to be better advised on the matter, or else to bring the names of all the wealthiest citizens, in writing, before him and his Council at Westminster on the Sunday following, so that he and his Council might assess them as to the sum of 20,000*l.*

The Mayor and a number of the wealthiest men of the City met soon after sunrise on the Sunday, and agreed, "although it was a hard thing and difficult to "do," to lend the King 5,000*l.*, should he be pleased to provide sufficient security for re-payment at a certain date. Sir John de Pulteney the Alderman, Andrew Aubrey the Mayor, and the Recorder waited on the King to inform him of the decision. The King graciously accepted the offer, having regard to the tallages and aids which the citizens had already paid him. He commended the citizens, to all appearance, in friendly manner; the assessment was made, and the money paid;¹ and the King said nothing, though he may have thought much, of the unlent 15,000*l.*

Smarting with the sense of failure, which he believed might have been averted had sufficient supplies been furnished to him, the King was, on his return to England in November, not unmindful of the reluctance which the citizens had shown to lend in the spring. The Eyre was an extremely disagreeable engine of punishment to any person or corporation holding any sort of franchise. The right to enjoy the accustomed franchises was immediately called in question. The highest persons in the county had to attend the Eyre, which, in the absence of the Court of King's Bench, enjoyed even higher functions than the latter Court, as it could hear and determine real actions, and all common pleas, as well as pleas of the Crown. It was, in fact, very nearly what the original Curia Regis had been before division. It was thus a very august tribunal, and was approached with fear and trembling, and with every outward demonstration of respect.

Course of proceedings in an Eyre at the Tower.

From the earliest times the Court of the Justices in Eyre, when it visited the City of London, appears to have been held at the Tower. It sat there in the fifth year of the reign of Henry III.,¹ and again in the twenty-eighth year.² There also it sat in the fourteenth year of the reign of Edward II.³ The formalities usual on the opening of the Eyre, as observed on the last-mentioned occasion, were the following. The "probi Barones" of London sent six of their number to the Tower "ad Justiciarios Domini Regis welcomandos et salutandos." They had to pray leave of the Justices to enter the Tower in safety and security, saving their liberties and customs. This the Justices granted. Then the Commission was read, and the business of the Eyre began. The citizens, however, set great value on their privilege of having their own porter, usher, and serjeants. They claimed to have their own porter outside the Tower gates, while the King's porter was within, and their own usher within the door of the hall in which the pleas were held (in order to introduce the "Barones" and other persons of the City who were known to him), while the King's usher was also within. They also claimed "quod habeant servientes suos cum virgis suis, et quod nullus serviens domini Regis se intromittat coram Justiciariis, de aliquo quod ad officium servientis pertineat." So also in this Eyre of 14 Edward III. there was a similar claim with respect to the "hostiarius" or usher.⁴

It does not, however, appear by the record that anything of exceptional importance happened at this Eyre, and there is reason to suspect that all the Commissions came to a somewhat hurried conclusion. The Eyre, at any rate, seems to have sat on one day only. The Mayor and Commonalty of the City of London subsequently presented a petition that the King would be pleased to lay aside any rancour and indignation which he might have conceived by reason of any trespass or excesses committed by them, and grant his pardon. To this he graciously acceded. They further prayed that the Eyre, as held on Monday in the second week of Lent, might be considered to be an Eyre concluded. This also the King granted, and granted further that no other Eyre should be held at the Tower of London within a period of seven years.¹

of the Clergy to the King's policy :
Excommunication of the King's advisers.

The difficulties of the King's position were at this time increased by the conduct of the Clergy and, in particular, by that of the Archbishop of Canterbury, John de Stratford, who had held the office of Chancellor. He, as alleged by the King, had, after advising the war with France, neglected his duties in the matter of supplies and so frustrated the King's plans at a critical moment. When the King summoned him to come and render an account he refused to appear except in Parliament.² He published certain articles of Excommunication in which were included all laymen who should lay violent hands on the persons, lands, goods, or houses of clergymen, all who should violate the liberties of Holy Church, all who should lessen the privileges granted to the Barons in Magna Charta, all who should falsely accuse him, or any Bishop or person of his Province, of Treason or any other crime.³ He wrote to the King in a tone which was, from a modern point of view, by no means becoming in a subject addressing his sovereign. Denying the charges against him, he asserted that the King was surrounded by evil counsellors, and held up as a warning the fate of Edward II. Perhaps, he was not pleased to see his brother succeeded by the first lay Chancellor (Bourchier) and a Bishop succeeded by a Judge (Parning) as Treasurer. He complained too that men of Church as well as others had been imprisoned. "And because such as be near you or favour your cause are not afraid to lay treason and falsehood to our charge we denounce them to be excommunicate."¹

This method of meeting an accusation by the excommunication of the accusers was not very novel and not altogether successful. It had, moreover, the effect of obscuring the more reasonable suggestion of the Archbishop that the Prelates, Peers, and Nobles of the realm should be summoned and make strict enquiry as to what had become of the supplies voted, and that no one should be deemed guilty of wrong-doing until his answer had been given, and due investigation had been made.

The Archbishop was especially indignant at the imprisonment of St. Paul, Wath, Chigwell, Thorpe, and Stratford (mentioned in the same Commission of Oyer and Terminer with Willoughby), all of whom were clerks. This, he said, in another letter² addressed to the King and Council, endangered the souls of those who gave their counsel or consent thereto. It is, however, only just to add that he prayed the King and Council to release not only them, but also all lay persons who were of free condition and had been taken and detained contrary to Magna Charta and the laws and customs of the realm.

The King practically answered the Archbishop in certain Letters Close³ (described in a subsequent instrument as "Letters Excusatory") in which he commanded the Bishop of London and other Bishops and Deans and Chapters of the Province of Canterbury to publish the statements therein set forth. He again threw the blame of neglecting to send supplies on the Archbishop, and pointed out the necessity of enquiring into the conduct of the Archbishop and other his officers. "Whereupon, directing our attention to the chastening and correction of such our officers, we have caused to be removed from their offices (as well we might), some of them, whom for probable reasons we suspected of maladministration, subversion of justice, oppression of our subjects, corruption in the way of receiving bribes, and other heinous offences. Others also, of inferior degree, who were to be blamed in respect of these matters, we have caused to be detained in safe custody, lest by their craftiness the execution of justice should be overturned, and enquiry of the truth cunningly set at naught, should they enjoy their accustomed liberty." As to the Archbishop himself, the King had commanded his presence, with a safe-conduct,¹ and without threatening or intending any mischief to him, and the Archbishop had refused to obey the command. The King recited many of the previous actions of the Primate, and added that should he "still persist in his haughty obstinacy and stubborn rebellion" an opportunity would be found to cause his misdeeds to be made more clearly manifest.

The Archbishop holds to the excommunications, and declines to be tried by any secular judge.

The Archbishop made a very lengthy reply to the King, with copious references to the Scriptures. In relation to the sentences of excommunication which the Archbishop had directed to be published in places of resort, it had been charged that the Archbishop had designed to destroy the good repute of the King, to defame his ministers, to stir up sedition against him, and to alienate from him the hearts of Earls, Lords, and Barons. To this the Archbishop said that, inasmuch as it seemed to cast the crime of Treason upon his head where no King or temporal Lord could be his competent judge, he did not intend to prejudice his position, "but wholly to decline the trial of any " secular judge whatever."¹

Thereupon the King sent Letters Close² to the Bishop of London and others, as before, in which he commanded them, notwithstanding any mandate of the Archbishop to the contrary, to publish the matters contained in his Letters Excusatory. Moreover, as the Archbishop was endeavouring to take away from him the jurisdiction which notoriously belonged to him, he forbade them to make any publications of the Archbishop's sentences of excommunication or any denunciations or monitions derogatory or prejudicial to his right and royal prerogatives, and commanded them that, if anything of the kind had been attempted, they should forthwith revoke it.

A few days previously the King had written,³ in a tone not less firm to the Bishop of Exeter, reciting the misconduct of officers of the State. "Wherefore," said the King, "on our return into England, we caused certain of our officers (whom we had under suspicion in this behalf, for evident reasons,) to be taken and kept in safe custody in order that we might the more easily draw out the truth as to their conduct. And we assigned our Justices, in divers places and counties, to enquire speedily, as the matter demands, touching the acts of our officers aforesaid and others. And although it is no part of our intention to infringe the liberty of the Church, or unduly to oppress anyone, you nevertheless, in what spirit we know not, but with the object of defaming Us and Ours, and of hindering our

 “ de Courtney, Earl of Devon, and his fellows, Justices

 “ officers in certain counties, your letters patent con“ taining denunciations and publications of sentences “ of excommunication, and monitions which were in“ jurious and very prejudicial to the right of our Crown
 “ and our royal dignity.”

The King declared this to be an attempt to deprive him of the jurisdiction which belonged to him. He said further, that, whereas it was of urgent importance that the enquiry touching the officers should proceed with the utmost despatch, the Bishop had been too ready to inhibit the Justices from swearing anyone during Lent to speak the truth in the premises, when for reasons so strong and for avoidance of such pressing danger it had been meritorious to swear and speak the truth at any time, especially as delay imperilled the enquiry and its execution.

The Bishop was therefore commanded (considering the nature and danger of the times) to revoke at once the denunciations and sentences of excommunication, and monitions, and all proceedings whereby the King's progress beyond sea and the enquiry and its execution might be delayed, or the King's lieges be excited against him. “ And unless you are careful so to do, we shall

 “ you, as our enemy, and rebel, and a disturber of the “ peace of our realm.”

Reconciliation of the King with the Archbishop.

During the session of Parliament, on Monday, in the Quinzaine of Easter, in the fifteenth year of the reign, the King came into the Painted Chamber, and thither came also the Archbishop of Canterbury and the other Prelates, and the Magnates, and Commons. And there the Archbishop humbled himself before the King. He then prayed the King to grant that, inasmuch as he was notoriously defamed throughout the realm, he might be arraigned in full Parliament before the Peers, and there answer. To this the King consented, but said he wished business touching the state of the realm and the common weal to be first set in order, and other business afterwards.¹

Two years later, however, the King commanded that all matters touching the arraignment of the Archbishop should be annulled and set aside as being neither reasonable nor true.² Thus the Archbishop was received again into favour and the quarrel was apparently forgotten. The King, however, though strong in will and firm of purpose, was in no condition to alienate permanently a body so powerful as were still the clergy of England. It is by no means impossible that the somewhat abortive ending of all the Commissions which had issued may have been to a very considerable extent due to clerical influence.

It might, perhaps, be thought, from a modern point of view, that accusations touching every officer and every kind of office refuted themselves by the assumption of universal guilt, and therefore the state of society could not have been such as the Commissions of Eyre, Trailbaston, and Oyer and Terminer would imply. This opinion might be plausibly supported by the fact that many of the persons accused were subsequently reinstated in office. The Common Pleas Judges returned to their previous places two years afterwards, Stonore as Chief Justice, Sharshulle, Shardelowe, and even Willoughby as Justices, and it does not appear that very severe punishment was inflicted in other cases.

There is, without doubt, good reason to believe that the persons who were accused were not all equally guilty. Stonore, in particular, was a man of whom it is impossible to believe that he was not of as high integrity as any of his contemporaries. He was certainly not a self-seeker, certainly not a man who feared to do right at the risk of making powerful enemies. In the very important case of Staunton v. Staunton he evidently maintained his own opinion in opposition to the direction of Parliament, and absented himself from Court when a decision was to be given which was contrary to his own convictions.¹ Had he been bribed, it is hardly to be supposed that he would have considered himself bound to uphold the cause of the bribers at the risk, or rather with the certainty, of placing himself in a most unenviable position in the eyes of the Council and the Parliament. In the only act of his private life with which there is reason to believe that we are acquainted he appears in the light of a benefactor. He enriched a nunnery, and at the same time made provision for his daughter and sisters, one of whom subsequently became the Prioress.²

A man of the stamp of Stonore would, in such an age as that in which he lived, probably have many accusers as soon as there appeared to be an opportunity of doing him an injury. The greater the corruption of the times, the more certain was it that the innocent would be confounded with the guilty. It is when mankind is at its worst that the worst things said of it are most true. Then, if ever, are applicable the words of the satire:—

“ Wrong’d shall he live, insulted o’er, oppress’d,

“ Who dares be less a villain than the rest.”

general
corruption not therefore disproved.

Nevertheless, the fact that some persons may have been accused who were, according to the code of morals of their day, of exemplary character, does not in any way disprove the general corruption, but is, on the contrary, rather a proof of it. Moreover, the greater the corruption, the more difficult must it be to convict those who are really guilty of it, because all the guilty persons have a common interest in shielding those as guilty as themselves, and are not restrained by any scruple from attempting to throw the blame on the guiltless.

Thus if, on the one hand, the issue of the Grand Com- Unpopu-missions, Commissions of Oyer and Terminer, and Com- larity of mission to Justices in Eyre indicates a belief in wide- the Eyre, spread corruption as well as in a general disposition to Trail-perhaps, had a greater regard for their own particular interests than for any abstract ideas as to good government and official integrity. The Commissions and the proceedings on them, too, were not untainted with the general laxity, and thus gave a legitimate ground of complaint.

Willoughby had without doubt public opinion in his Com-favour when he protested against his arraignment because plaints there had been no indictment, and nothing alleged regarding against him at the suit of a party. The Commons com- them in plained¹ in a strain not altogether unlike that of the Parliament.
Clergy that the Great Charter, the Ordinances, and the Statutes had been discredited in many ways, and less well kept than they ought to have been, to the great peril and prejudice of the King and damage of his people, inasmuch as clerks, peers of the realm, and other free men and persons of estate had been arrested and imprisoned without having been either appealed or indicted, and without any suit of party having been affirmed against them. Therefore it was prayed that the persons who had suffered might be delivered from gaol, and restored to their estates so that each might stand to the law according to his condition.

All this was reasonable enough, though, from a modern point of view, the prejudices of class were even here brought out in strange relief. Some of the other complaints in Parliament were also, from the point of view of those who complained, not unreasonable. The scope of some of the Commissions which had issued was, according to the statements which appear on the Rolls of Parliament,¹ to enquire touching officers who were Peers of the Realm, as for instance the Chancellor and the Treasurer. A very strong protest was made against arraigning Peers or bringing them to judgment except by their Peers.² It was said further that power was in certain Commissions given to enquire touching divers general points of an Eyre in a manner not usual without the assent of Parliament, and that the Justices appointed had put officers convicted before them to grievous fines without regard to the extent of the offences. They had, as alleged, charged the Sheriffs to return [to serve on the juries] all free men, as well lords of villas as others, without any distinction between residents and non-residents, and had charged the Sheriffs to answer for issues to the value of the lands of those who did not appear, even though non-resident. The persons indicted before them had not been able to obtain an acquittal otherwise than by verdict of those who had made the indictments, and had not been allowed to challenge these indictors. It was therefore prayed that the King would revoke whatever had been put in force contrary to law and usage, and cause that which had been done by the Commissioners contrary to law to be redressed. It was further prayed that, should the King be pleased to issue other and lawful Commissions, with the assent of his

Parliament, in respect of the points in which he might feel himself aggrieved by his officers or others, men learned in the law and others of the country who had knowledge of the conduct and condition of the officers in the respective offices might be appointed.¹

In this last prayer there is, as elsewhere, an obvious desire that the general laws of the realm should not override local influences and local prejudices. Impartial enquiry is clearly deprecated, and it is plainly suggested that if a man is strong enough to hold his own in his own neighbourhood there ought to be no interference from any other quarter.

Perhaps, however, the most remarkable demand made by both Lords and Commons had reference to the conservation of the peace. This they evidently considered of less importance than the danger to turbulent persons of good estate which might ensue from the "Ordinance" of Northampton. "Whereas it was agreed," they said, "for a time, by the Magnates of the Realm being in Northampton, in order to maintain the peace while the King was beyond sea, that thieves and ill-doers being of ill fame and notorious should be attached, and that, after attachment, enquiry should be made concerning them, and under cover of this Ordinance other attachments have been often made on persons of another condition, therefore the said Magnates and Commons pray that the said Ordinance be repealed, and utterly annulled."²

It is not clear to what "Ordinance" this reference is made. It can hardly be to the Statute of Northampton passed in the second year of the reign, because the King was not at that time proceeding beyond the sea, and because the words quoted are not in precise accordance with any chapter of the Statute. Nevertheless, though not in precise accordance, they approach somewhat closely to those of the sixth chapter which confirmed the Statute of Winchester (13 Ed. I., Stat. 2.), c. 14. It happens, too, that the 5 Edward III., c. 14, which was made not at Northampton, but at Westminster, three years after the Statute of Northampton, corresponds still more nearly with the alleged tenour of the Ordinance of Northampton. "Divers robberies, homicides, and felonies, have been lately committed by persons called Roberdesmen, Wastors, and Drawlatches. Therefore it is agreed and enacted (establi) that if anyone have suspicion of ill in respect of any such persons, be it by day or be it by night, they be immediately arrested by the constables of towns . . . and kept in prison until the coming of the Justices assigned to deliver gaols."

If, as seems to be implied, there was an Ordinance of Northampton subsequent to this Statute, it may have been made during the Parliament at Northampton in the twelfth year of the reign.¹ Still it could hardly have involved any serious grievance, real or imaginary, beyond those involved in the previous enactments. Whatever the facts of the case may have been, however, it was an accepted axiom about this period that an "Ordinance" was of a more temporary nature than a Statute,² and a prayer for the repeal of the "Ordinance" might have been regarded as more reasonable than a prayer for the repeal of the Statutes.

It appears by the Rolls of Parliament that the King expressly agreed to many of these petitions, and in particular to the repeal of the obnoxious "Ordinance" of Northampton.³ The whole proceedings, however, were most remarkable. It is said that, on the King's answer, "the underwritten Statutes [including 15 Ed. III., Stat. 1.] were made by the Magnates and Commons and shown to our Lord the King," and that they were "read before the King." The Chancellor, however, and Treasurer, and some of the Justices protested that they did not assent to the making or to the form of the Statutes, and that they could not observe the Statutes if contrary to the laws and usages of the realm which they were sworn to keep.¹

This protest was practically to the effect either that the law could not be changed by an Act of Parliament, or that there could not be a good and operative Act of Parliament if the Chancellor, Treasurer, and Judges were opposed to its provisions. In either case it was not a mere brutum fulmen. It seems to have been used for an important purpose, and to have been of material service in the subsequent repeal of the first Statute of 15 Edward III.

Before the year had expired the King took measures to repudiate the Statute by means of a writ or Letters Close directed to the Sheriffs of all the Counties of England. He did not, it will be observed, forget to mention that protests had been made.² The whole instrument, however, is so remarkable that it will best speak for itself.³ "The King to the Sheriff Greeting. Whereas ² It appears more clearly in Letters Close which he sent at the same time to the Archbishop of Canterbury that he himself (as well as the Chancellor, Treasurer, and Judges) made some kind of protest. Rot. Lit. Claus., 15 Edw. III., p. 3, m. 25 d. (Printed by Brady, App., 83.

In relation apparently to this writ Coke has observed in a note :—¹ “ Where the printed books suppose that there “ was another Parliament in anno 15 E. 3, whereby “ the former Statute was repealed, the truth is the Par- “ liament was holden at Westminster 15 Pasch. an. 17 “ E. 3.” There, no doubt, were printed books in Coke’s time, in which it was supposed that “ by another Sta- “ tute made 1 Octobris anno 15 Edward 3 the foressaid “ Statute was repealed because it was made without “ the King’s consent.” The fact, however, that the editors of these printed books may have failed to distinguish between a writ or Letters Close and a Statute does not efface the existence of the writ or in any way diminish its importance.

The writ incorrectly described in the old books as a Statute.

It was evidently claimed in this writ that the King might, with the advice and consent of a Council selected by himself, upon statement of sufficient grounds, revoke a Statute or declare it null. The importance of this claim in the history of the constitution can hardly be over-rated, and it is strange that Coke should have missed the point. It is doubly strange because the passage in the Rolls of Parliament to which he refers indicates that the claim was contested.

The right therein claimed not admitted.

Had the writ to proclaim the revocation or nullity of the Statute been commonly acknowledged as good and sufficient, it is clear that there would have been an end of the matter. It is no less clear that the subject was subsequently discussed in Parliament, and that Parliament supposed itself to have some interest in the consideration of its own acts. Neither the protests which had been made nor the wishes of the King and his Council were set at nought, but Parliament agreed (and in so doing asserted the right to a voice) that the Statute “ shall be wholly repealed, and annulled, “ and lose the name of a Statute, as being prejudicial operative.

Even in this formal agreement that the Statute should be repealed there appears a recognition of the right of the Justices to pronounce whether a proposed Statute was in accordance with the laws and usages of the realm, and consequently whether it ought to become operative as a Statute. Justices had in the first instance protested against the Statute, and in the end it was agreed not only that the Statute should not be law as a whole, but that any parts of it which might be thought good and reasonable should be embodied in a Statute only with the advice of the Justices. There seems thus to be hardly any possibility of doubt that, in the reign of Edward III., the persons who had to administer the law were supposed to be entitled to a real and not merely a nominal hearing in the making of laws. This is not the place to discuss the question whether the fourteenth century idea was or was not in accordance with the dictates of sound common sense.

Advice of Lords and Commons touching the Grand
 sions.

Apart from the matters embodied in the first Statute of 15 Edward III., thus repealed two years afterwards, there is also enrolled on the Roll of Parliament the advice of the "Magnates and others" as to some points contained in the Commissions appointing Magnates to enquire concerning oppressions, extortions, grievances, and excesses committed by the King's officers and others.²

¹ Rot. Parl., 17 Edw. III., No. 23. | ² Rot. Parl., 15 Edw. III., No. 42.

As elsewhere expressed,¹ it was advised by the "Magnates and Commons" that (should it be the King's pleasure) the Justices appointed in the Grand Commissions should thenceforth stay proceedings in respect of all matters contained therein except matters touching the King's officers and those who had exported wool or other merchandise not cocketted, and without payment of custom dues, contrary to the King's prohibition. It was advised that all those who had been fined, when absent, in the Courts of the Commissioners, and were unwilling to pay, should be discharged of the fines, and stand at common law before the same Justices or in any other place where they ought reasonably to answer.² It was advised that writs should issue, at the suit of any who desired them, to stay, until the next Parliament, Exigents which had issued or were to issue in respect of matters not touching felony or trespass committed against the peace.³ It was advised that, inasmuch as the Justices had given commandment to cause to come all the free men of the Counties in which their sessions were and had been, and had charged the Sheriffs to answer for the issues of the lands even of those who were not resident and of those who were sick indeed and without deceit, there had been error, and the Justices ought to redress it. It was advised that should Sheriffs, through malice, return in panel the names of persons non-resident or sick, the Justices should make enquiry touching them, and cause such Sheriffs as should be convicted at the suit of party to be reasonably punished.⁴

The most remarkable part of the advice of Lords and Commons was, however, that whereas persons indicted could not obtain their acquittal except by a jury composed in part of those who had indicted them, it were well, if anyone so indicted would challenge any of his indictors upon the taking of the jury for his deliverance, that the challenge should be allowed until the next Parliament, and that none of such indictors should be upon the juries against the will of those who were so indicted or to be indicted in the meantime, and that certain law should be then ordained as to that which should be done in such case.¹

Trial by jury, in criminal charges, had, as yet, made but little progress.

This shows clearly (like the report of Willoughby's arraignment) that, in criminal charges, trial by jury had remained in nearly the same condition as that in which it appears soon after the abolition of Ordeal. It shows, however, also, that there was some slight awakening of public opinion to the fact that there could not be strict justice when any man was condemned on any accusation by the verdict of his accusers. The right to challenge jurors, indeed, though it seems to have been recognised as early as Bracton's time,² seems to have been recognised only in cases in which life was at stake.³ It was certainly a healthy sign that there was a desire to extend this right, and to give all accused persons something more nearly approaching the semblance of a fair trial. This wish, nevertheless, had but little practical effect, and it was long before trial by jury assumed its present form.

Numerous cases of importance in the volume.

So much space has been occupied in the attempt to describe the exceptional features of a most remarkable period, and their place in the history of the law and of the constitution, that none remains for lengthy comment on the many important cases of a more ordinary kind which occur in the present volume. It would, however, perhaps, be remissness on the part of an editor to leave them all quite unnoticed.

A case¹ which may be worth some attention is the action for Trespass or "Contempt" brought by the Abbot of Furness against Robert de Radeclyf, who was described in the writ as Sheriff of Lancaster. The Abbot alleged that he had the Sheriff's Turn by grant, and that the Sheriff had nevertheless distrained the Abbot's tenants to present matters presentable at the Turn. Apart from the merits, certain questions arose as to the status of Radeclyf, who was in fact Under-sheriff to Henry, Earl of Lancaster. There was, on this ground, a plea in abatement of the writ, which was not allowed, because Radeclyf, as acting Sheriff, took the Sheriff's oath in the Exchequer. Radeclyf in the end, prayed aid of the Earl on grounds stated in the reports and in notes from the records appended. It may, however, be of use to show from other sources, and a little more in detail, what was the position of the Sheriff of Lancaster and of his Under-sheriff.

The Sheriff
in fee and the Under-sheriff of Lancaster.

In early Great Rolls of the Exchequer² a Viccomes commonly, but not quite regularly, appears as returning an account for the "Honour" of Lancaster. In the sixth year of the reign of Henry III. the return is made as for the County of Lancaster. For the last quarter of the fifty-first year of the same reign Edmund, described as brother of Edward I. (who had come to the throne before the account was completed), renders an account, reciting that King Henry had given him the County by charter dated the 30th of June. For the first twelve years of the reign of Edward I. his brother Edmund still makes a return for the County, sed tantum de debitis Regis. From the thirteenth to the nineteenth year of the reign the King's brother disappears, and Gilbert de Clifton renders the account as Sheriff, and from the twentieth to the twenty-sixth year Ralph de Mountjoy, also as Sheriff.

¹ Mich., 14 Edw. III., No. 35.

² 11 Hen. II., and successive years,

² Great Rolls of the Exchequer, | Tit. Lanc.

In the 27th year of the reign of Edward I. Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, son and heir of Edmund the King's brother, appears as Sheriff, but Richard de Hoghton makes the return for him; and in every subsequent year as far as 13 Edward II. the Earl also appears as Sheriff, but another person (not styled Under-sheriff) makes the return for him. From the year 14 Edward II. (after the death of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster) to the twenty-first of April, 1 Edward III., the Earl of Lancaster disappears from the Rolls, and other persons make the returns as Sheriffs. From the 21st of April, 1 Edward III., to Michaelmas in the same year, Henry, Earl of Lancaster, appears as Sheriff, but Geoffrey de Werberton makes the return for him. In the year 2 Edward III. the same Earl appears as Sheriff, but in that year first occurs the mention of an Under-sheriff as returning on his behalf.

After this time an Under-sheriff commonly returned on behalf of Henry, Earl of Lancaster, described as brother and heir of Thomas, late Earl of Lancaster. Robert de Radecluf, against whom the action was brought, was Under-sheriff in the twelfth year of the reign, in the thirteenth, and in the fourteenth, during the whole of which time it is stated that the Earl was Sheriff de feodo.¹ It seems clear, from the facts above stated, that it had at one time been the practice to describe the acting Sheriff, and not the Sheriff in fee, as Sheriff, even in the Rolls of the Exchequer, but that the practice had not been uniform. This appears to explain the description of Robert de Radecluf as Sheriff in the writ of Trespass, and to afford an additional reason for holding the writ good.

A remarkable case of Trespass.

The thirty-eighth case in Michaelmas Term also presents many features of interest. It was an action of Trespass (for cutting and carrying away trees) in which the defendant alleged a prescription that those seised of his freehold had a profit in a certain wood such that they might (if the first comers) take and carry away the branches, up to the trunk, of any tree blown down or felled, and he asserted that he had done no more. Issue was joined upon his plea.

There is here also a curious illustration of the tone and manners of the Bench. Willoughby, J., cited a particular case with respect to which Sharshulle, J., remarked "that is not law now." Willoughby replied, in words which would hardly be thought courteous in the present day, "One more learned than you are adjudged it."

Among other matters which may be considered worthy of notice may be mentioned a case¹ in which Waste was alleged to have consisted in (inter alia) "exulando per graves et intolerabiles districtiones" certain tenants in villenage. With regard to attainder the doctrine was laid down that when a person commits felony, and is attainted, the attainder relates back to the day on which the felony was committed, and that, if the person who committed it comes into possession of land in the interval, the land escheats to the lord.² A *Quare impedit*³ of some importance was brought from Ireland, by writ of Error, into the King's Bench in England. Some questions relating to tenure in capite, ut de corona and otherwise here assume prominence. From other points of view there are many other cases which may possibly be thought of not less importance, but it may be hoped that the Index of Matters is sufficiently full to show their nature and the subjects which they illustrate.

I have again the pleasure of offering my best thanks to the Benchers of the Honourable Societies of the Inner Temple and Lincoln's Inn for the loan of their valuable fealty and by the services of 15*d.* by the year, &c., and that the tenant had ceased &c.—Pole. One W. de T., whose estate you have in the seignory, enfeoffed us, by this deed, of a moiety of this land, before the Statute,¹ to hold by the services of one halfpenny by the year for all services, and enfeoffed us of the residue by another deed, which is here, in the same manner, and so this tenancy, which you suppose to be held by one entire service, is several and held by different services ; judgment of your writ.—

Gayneford. You hold it as one entire tenancy ; ready sition to the deed of him whose estate you have in the seignory any more than in a case of avowry ; and even if this were a case of avowry we should be discharged by this deed which is here as much as by a Ne injuste vezes, or by a Contra formam feoffamenti, even though you had alleged seisin by our own hand ; wherefore &c.

A.D. 1340. SCHARDELOWE. In a case of Contra formam feoffamenti, the writ is given by Statute¹ that no one shall be distrained contrary to the form of his feoffment; but it seems that you shall not oust him from the averment which he offers in maintenance of his writ by the deed of one to whom he is altogether a stranger, to which deed he cannot have any answer.—W. Thorpe. Sir, though he cannot have answer expressly to the deed, as by denying or confessing it, nevertheless he can have averment of a matter which is equivalent, as by saying "We never had anything of the gift of this same W."—And to this WILLOUGHBY and SCHARDELOWE agreed, saying that it had been many times adjudged that in opposition to such a deed averment should not be had either upon a writ of that nature or upon an avowry, that is to say, in opposition to the deed of one whose estate the person tendering the averment himself had in the seignory.—But Pole passed on gratis, and said that the tenant held this land by the services of one penny by the year for all services, in respect of which nothing was in arrear on the day of the purchase of the writ; ready, &c.—Gayneford. You held of us by such services as we have counted; ready, &c.—SCHARDELOWE. Upon this writ issue cannot be taken on the quantity of the services, for in respect of that the tenant ought to save himself by protestation, &c.—And afterwards the issue was received on the quantity of the services, as the parties tendered it.—This agrees with a case in Trinity Term in the 8th year, upon a like writ, per HERLE.²

The case is not similar; for in the case which you put he is ousted by Statute² from avowing or distraining contrary to the feoffment; but in this case you are at the common law.

Disseisin.

(2.) § An assise of Novel Disseisin was brought against John, son of Nicholas Trymenel, and a man and his wife, and others, before SIR R. WILLOUGHBY, and ROGER DE BAUKWELL (the presence of Robert de Sadington not being expected) by writ of the Lord the King quod si non omnes, upon which writ SIR ROBERT SADINGTON was not present, but the other two were. And thereupon the parties came, and the husband and his wife pleaded to the assise, and all the others pleaded nul tort, &c., except Henry, brother of Nicholas Trymenel,³ who said that the plaintiff ought not to be answered, because he had been outlawed upon a writ of trespass in the Common Bench. Thereupon he had a day over to produce his record.

A.D. 1340. And, as to the others, the assise was respited for default of jurors. On another day the parol demurred without day through absence of the Justices. Therefore the parties were reattached to appear on another day, on which day SIR R. DE WILLOUGHBY was not present, but SIR R. DE SADINGTON and ROGER DE BAUKWELL were. On that day the husband made default, and the wife¹ was admitted to defend her right, and, as tenant, pleaded to the assise.—And Henry, brother of Nicholas Trymenel produced a release from the plaintiff by which the plaintiff had released to him all manner of actions; and the date and the witnesses to the deed were in another county.—The plaintiff said:—He shall not be admitted to that since he has previously pleaded a record by way of bar of the assise, and now the assise is reattached on the same point, wherefore he shall have no other plea but maintain his first bar.—To that Henry said that at the time at which the record was pleaded, he was under age, and still is, wherefore that plea shall not be prejudicial to him.—Thereupon the parties were adjourned into the Bench.—And they came, and Henry produced the release, as above.—Pole demanded judgment as above, since Henry had failed to produce the record which he had alleged, and prayed that he might be held a disseisor, and prayed the assise against him for damages according to the Statute.²—*W. A.D. 1340. non omnes serves once for all, pending the plea. And then they abode judgment, inasmuch as he had first of all pleaded the outlawry in bar, whether he should now be admitted to plead another plea in bar. And it was said that he was under age. Thereupon they were adjourned. And on the day given SADINGTON and BAUKWELL came, and WILLOUGHBY did not come, but he sent the record to them, and the same plea as before was pleaded.—Thereupon they were adjourned into the Bench, where Thorpe alleged that the plea was discontinued, because when at first the assise was arraigned before WILLOUGHBY and BAUKWELL and the plea was pleaded before them, as above, and WILLOUGHBY did not come, but SADINGTON and BAUKWELL came, whereas BAUKWELL alone could not record what was before WILLOUGHBY and himself, and it would not be found that WILLOUGHBY who was Chief, with whom the record remained, sent the record to them by legal process, that is to say, by writ, therefore what they did at that day was null.—This objection was not allowed.—Quære.—Thorpe. Still it seems to us that the party must be put to answer the outlawry, for this is what was at first alleged against him ; and you do not find by record that the record of the outlawry was denied, nor that the party answered it ; for the words of the record are only “he was told to have “ the record,” which is a phrase of the Court, and not an issue joined by the party, like a denial of the record.—WILLOUGHBY. It is not so ; for the Court would not tell him that he should have his record if it was not previously denied ; wherefore it cannot be understood but that the record was denied. Besides, it is a common way of pleading to say, Have your record ; by which words it is understood that the party denies the record. And because it appears to the COURT, by inspection, that he who makes use of the deed is still under age, he can plead it ; wherefore, Is it your deed ?—And note that he was not tenant nor had he taken part in the disseisin.—Pole.

Right. (3.) § John, son of Henry de Gloucester, brought a writ of Right on Disclaimer, whereupon he counted that the lands, &c. were his right and inheritance, for the reason that the tenant against whom the writ was brought held of him by certain services, &c., whereof he was seised in time of peace ; and he alleged the esplees as of rent ; and he shewed how on a certain day and in a certain year he was summoned to answer the tenant, in a plea of taking of beasts, for the taking of a horse, when he came and avowed upon the tenant &c., because the tenant held of him certain land which is the same land as is demanded ; and he rehearsed the whole of the avowry ; and so he avowed as in parcel of the tenements holden of him &c., and said that they were parcel of the tenements now demanded ; and thereupon the tenant disavowed and absolutely disclaimed holding of him ; wherefore he was amerced, and the other recovered damages ; and by this disavowal and disclaimer an action accrued to the demandant to demand the tenements in demesne ; and that such is his right by the disavowal and disclaimer aforesaid he has suit and good deraignment.—Pole demanded view.—Thorpe. You ought not to have view, any more than in a Cessavit, for the action arises by your disclaimer.—The COURT was of this opinion.—Wherefore Blaik denied the right absolutely, and his seisin of which he had counted further as of fee and of right, namely of the fealty and of the rent, &c., and put himself on God and the Grand Assise of our Lord the

§ A writ of Right on Disclaimer was brought against Richard Crullyng, and so much land, &c. was demanded. — R. Thorpe counted that it was his right, and for the reason that the said R. held of the demandant by fealty and by the services of 20s. a year, &c., of which services, &c., and alleged the esplees as in the receipt of fealty and of rent, &c., and suit for deraignment. — Blaik defended, &c., and rehearsed the count, and imparled, and came back, and rehearsed the count, and defended, and demanded view. — *R. You ought not to have view, for this action is given to us by reason of your own disclaimer, and you ought not to be uninformed as to what were the tenements that you disclaimed, &c.; for upon a writ of Intrusion, or upon a writ De quibus, by which a tort is supposed in your own person, you shall be ousted from the view; so also here.—Blaik. Sire, you see clearly that the writ supposes the lease to have been made by the husband and his wife, which cannot have been unless it was by fine, and he does not show that the lease was so made; judgment of the writ.—WILLOUGHBY. For anything that you have yet said, it may be that the lease was made by fine, so their writ is good on that intendment; and you have not disproved it; wherefore answer.—Rokell. This writ cannot be maintained except by reason of a lease made by fine, and no one can have such a fine as that in this Court; judgment of the writ.—Pole. Besides, this is by the King's charter, and the tenements are held of him in capite.—WILLOUGHBY. Answer to their writ.—Pole produced the deed indented of the husband and the wife and the third person, purporting that those three persons leased to him for term of his life, saving the reversion to them and to the heirs of one of them, and demanded judgment of this writ which supposed the inheritance to be to the three.—Gayneford. To that we say that, before the lease, we three were seised in our demesne as of fee and of right, and so the reversion, whatever may be the words of the deed, is to us three by reason of the lease; wherefore, &c.—Pole. Thorpe, ad idem.* It seems that the inheritance shall be adjudged to him to whom the deed limits it, for when any one puts his seal to a deed in which others are named, and assents to the acts and words of the others in the deed, the deed is good against him as well as against the others, for if a rent had, at the time of the lease, been reserved to one alone, none of the others would have had an avowry for that rent, but only he to whom the deed limited the rent; so it appears with respect to the reversion.—Gaynesford. That is not similar to this matter, for that is something newly accrued by covenant limited on the lease, but a reversion by common right rests with the lessors.—Pole. It seems now that he has abated his own writ, for the husband and his wife cannot lawfully lease except by fine; and now he has himself admitted that the lease was made in pais; wherefore we demand judgment of his writ.—WILLOUGHBY. You have passed beyond that, and your plea, if any there be, is to their action; and suppose the three who leased had entered as upon their reversion, I think that, notwithstanding the deed, they would be adjudged to be in their original position, just as, if tenant in tail or tenant by the curtesy of England had leased in that way, and on the lease a reversion of the fee simple had been reserved to them, their entry would place them in their original position.—*W. A.D. 1340. wife cannot have an action upon a lease made by husband and wife by deed in pais, because she is put to her Cui in vita.—WILLOUGHBY. If the husband aliene the right of his wife who is under age, and the wife be named in the deed, and make livery with him, when the wife is of full age they shall have their recovery by writ of Entry dum fuit infra ætatem, and we have seen such a writ in this Court.—W. Thorpe and Pole denied this.—Therefore quære.—SCHARDELOWE. But if the husband, being under age, and the wife, being of age, aliene the right of the wife, in such case the husband and the wife shall have an action.—W. Thorpe. Certainly not, Sir, for the wife shall never have an action with her husband where action is saved to her by Cui in vita after his death.—ALDEBURGH. Suppose the husband and wife aliene in fee tail or for term of life to hold of them, rendering to them a certain rent by the year, and after the death of the husband the wife agrees to the rent, she shall have a good avowry, and if she agrees to the rent she shall be barred as to the land.—William Thorpe and Pole said that she would not.—Therefore quære, &c.—Pole, as above. We do not understand that in opposition to the deed you shall have the averment.—WILLOUGHBY. It seems that they shall, for the deed does not prove the reversion, because, if the three were in the inheritance and leased, it is clear that the reversion is to those three.—SCHARSHULLE. With regard to that, be it as it may, but it seems that the other cannot say that, for before the lease he had no reversion, but the reversion commenced by the deed; then it seems, inasmuch as the reversion commenced by deed, that he shall not say the reverse.—WILLOUGHBY. § Waste, for a man and his wife and a third person, to their disinherittance. And note the opinion of the Court that husband and wife shall have an action of Waste on their own lease.—Thorpe. Judgment of the writ; for we tell you that, whereas the writ supposes the waste to be to their disinherittance in common, the three leased by this deed, &c., saving the reversion to them and the heirs of the third, so that the disinherittance should be supposed to be of him alone.—Gayneford. We tell you that, at the time of the lease, these three had the inheritance to them and their heirs, so the land is to revert to them as they were seised.—You cannot say that; for your deed supposes the contrary.—Gayneford. The reversion is saved by common right in such a lease; and the deed only serves to give an estate to the tenant for term of life.—Thorpe. If one of the lessors had limited the estate by way of remainder over to the others, his interest in his portion would have vested by that remainder, or one of those who had fee might have released to his fellow, and thereby an estate in two parts would accrue to the latter; and so likewise it seems that their portion ought to vest by this deed, since by their deed they limited an estate to the heirs of one of them.—SCHARDELOWE. Then is it the case that all three had a fee simple at the time of the lease?—SCHARSHULLE. He has nothing to do with the estate which they had before the lease, for the reversion was saved by the lease, and it commenced then; wherefore it seems that he cannot, in opposition to their deed, be admitted to say that the reversion is in any one other than the deed purports.—WILLOUGHBY. The right is not challenged by the deed; for the reversion cannot be saved or limited in any course other than that in which the right was before the lease; wherefore it is not proved by the deed how the reversion belongs to them; wherefore, neither the deed nor the lease ousts him from the averment.

Inasmuch as they have pleaded to judgment, and since made default, by reason of which default they are distrained to hear their judgment, there is no plea here, and Protection saves a person only when a plea is pending, and inasmuch as the husband does not now come, which non-coming shall be adjudged a default, we pray that they be distrained to attorn. — Blaik. There is still a plea pending here, for if we would answer for the husband and for the wife we could save the default, or we could plead your release subsequently made; and as the wife has appeared, and the husband could not come (for the King records that he is in the King's service), it is reasonable that proceedings be stayed. — Stouford denied what he said as to the release. — Quære. — SCHARDELOWE. We have no regard to the appearance of the wife, for that is immaterial if the Protection lies, and if we disallow the Protection, and adjudge the attornment, she will not be able to attorn without her husband; and, as to your statement that there is no plea pending, that is not so; wherefore, &c. — And afterwards the parol was put without day, &c.

A.D. 1340. (6.) § Note.—Detinue of chattels.—The plaintiff recovered damages and not the principal, because all things may be resolved into damages, as an equivalent.

Execution of a Statute Merchant stayed until the plaintiff should come into Court to answer as to a deed conditional.

(7.) § The executors of Thomas Russel by attorney sued a writ, upon a Statute Merchant, to take the body of one R., who executed the statute, the writ being returnable in the Common Bench. — The Sheriff returned that R. was dead.—Thereupon a stranger¹ came and produced a writ from the Chancery setting forth that there was a deed conditional in defeasance of the statute, and that the King commanded the Justices, that having called before them those who they should consider ought to be called, they should further, &c. — Therefore the COURT stayed execution, and a writ issued to cause the executors to come to answer to the deed.

Statute Merchant.

§ Note that one sued execution on a Statute Merchant.—The Sheriff returned that the obligor was dead. Afterwards, he who executed the recognisance came, and said that the recognisance was made on a certain condition, and prayed a writ to warn the other to show cause why he sued contrary to his deed, and had it. And, because he brought a writ from the Chancery to the Justices, he had a Supersedeas to the Sheriff to stay execution, for execution had been previously awarded by the Court.—And note that he found mainprise to answer for the debt.

A.D. 1340. (9.) § Sir Hugh de Hastynges brought a writ of Escheat. cheat against Robert de Lascy, and counted that the tenements were his right and his escheat, because one Roger de Wygenhale, who held of him, committed felony, for which Roger was outlawed, &c. And he showed the record of the outlawry sub pede sigilli, and a writ, &c.—Gayneford. This Roger de Wygenhale did not hold of you on the day of the commission of the felony; ready, &c.—W. Thorpe. That is no answer if you do not say, nor at any time afterwards—Gayneford. Your own writ gives me the averment, and from the day of the commission of the felony until the day of the attainder all are accounted as one day in law; wherefore, &c.—SCHARDELOWE. If Roger de Wygenhale committed felony, and was attainted for it, and between the commission of the felony and the attainder thereupon he came into possession of this land and held it of the demandant, understand well that the demandant has reason for having the escheat; wherefore, &c.—Gayneford. He did not hold of the demandant on the day of the commission of the felony nor at any time since.—W. Thorpe. Ready, &c., that he did.—Gayneford. You shall not have any averment but that he held of the demandant on the day of the commission of the felony.—WILLOUGHBY. He shall have it for you yourself by your plea give him the averment.—Therefore the issue was entered as W. Thorpe tendered it.

And so note that when one person holds of another, and commits felony, and is attainted, the lord has a cause for entering upon the whole of the land which the person attainted held on the day of the commission of the felony and at any time since, for the day of the commission of the felony and the day of the attainder are one and the same day in the law, as appears in this plea.

And before the damages were levied two of the co-parceners died, wherefore the third sued alone to have the damages. And thereupon the defendants came by garnishment, and said that the damages were accessory only to the tenements recovered, and, since the plaintiff had only a third of the tenements recovered, they demanded judgment whether she ought to have execution in respect of more than a third part of the damages.—Pole. Perhaps our co-parceners have died without heirs of their bodies, and their estate in the tenements recovered has descended, and in that case there is no one nearer than us to have the damages.—PARNING (JUSTICE). In that case you have their estate by descent and not by recovery ; therefore sue execution for the third part of the damages.—And according to some this writ ought to have abated, and she ought to have sued a writ jointly with the executors of the others who were dead, by which writ all the tenants should have been warned.

(12.) § The King brought his Quare impedit in the King's Bench against Richard Bishop of Durham, for that it belonged to him to present to the prebend of West Merington. § Quare impedit for the King.—He took his title in that a prebend became vacant because the prebendary was elected Dean, and it remained so vacant until the temporalities, by reason of the vacancy of the Bishopric of Durham, came into his hand, &c. And it was traversed, the defendant saying that the prebend was not vacant, &c. The finding was for the King; wherefore he had a writ to the Bishop.

alleged.

(13.) § One A., executor of B., had execution of a Statute Merchant, on a writ returned in the King's Bench.—Afterwards W. de Laughford and John de Newington, tenants of the lands of the obligor, who had been ousted by the execution, sued a writ out of the Chancery upon a suggestion that he who had execution had been outlawed before the execution had been sued.—The writ was directed to the Justices that, having called before them, &c., they should do right to the parties. And other suggestions were comprised in the writ.—Thorpe produced the writ, and certified the Court of the outlawry, and prayed restitution of the lands on the ground that every action was extinguished in the person of the executor.—PARNING. The outlawry does not prove the lands in your hand to be discharged, and you ought not to have advantage of the outlawry, for that which belonged to the outlaw accrues to the King and remains with the King until he who has right thereto sues it out of the King's hand, as if he have other execution it belongs to him to sue out execution.—Thorpe. If we had come by process we should have rebutted him from his action, and though the Statute¹ gives execution without process, that ought not to injure us.

Sir, you see clearly that at common law such a writ as this was given only for a parson, and by the Statute¹ it is given to those who cannot have any other recovery, and who have not a college, and inasmuch as he himself has not shown himself to be in the case of the Statute, we understand that he ought not to be answered as to this writ.—SCHARDELOWE. The writ is now given to him, and, if you will say more, plead your plea, &c.—Pole. Sir, we tell you that at the time at which he has supposed that John de Bassyngbourne, his predecessor, was seised and aliened, there was a college in the same hospital, and a common seal, in which case you can have your recovery by writ of

A.D. 1340. Entry sine assensu patrum et sororum; wherefore, judgment of this writ, &c.—W. Thorpe. Since you do not fix upon us that there is, at this day, a college, and a writ of this kind is given me by the Statute, judgment whether the writ be not sufficiently good.—Pole. Your action must arise at the time at which you suppose the commencement, but at that time you would not have been able to maintain this writ since there was then a college (only that now you have expelled the brethren), and the Statute was made to remove the mischief suffered by those who had no recovery as Wardens and Chaplains of Chantries and of Chapels which had no chapter or college; wherefore, &c.—And to this SCHARDELLOWE agreed, and he said that this was the intention of the Statute.—W. Thorpe. We tell you that we have this wardenship by the King's collation by commission out of the Chancery, and since you do not deny that we are elected, nor that we now have a college, as to what you say about the expulsion, that is nothing to the purpose, and cannot make an issue between us; wherefore judgment, as above. Besides, the Statute expressly gives us a writ of this nature. (And the Statute was read, and was in accordance with that which W. Thorpe said.) And we understand that even though it were as you say, which we do not admit, it would be now at our election to take our recovery by the one writ or by the other; wherefore, &c.—And SCHARSHULLE said the same.—Pole. Sir, if he now maintains this writ, the finding will, perhaps, be in his favour, while, perhaps, at the same time I have a ground to recover by the deed of this same John de Bassyngbourne, his predecessor, made in my favour with the consent of his brethren during the time when there was a college.—ALDEBURGH.

But at the time of the alienation there was a college with a common

¹ The passage relating to the voucher in the record differs considerably both from the above report and from that which follows. The defendants vouched Matilda and Margery, daughters and heirs of Matilda, late wife of Robert "ad Fontem," with their respective husbands. The plaintiff counterpleaded the warranty on the ground that one Robert "atte Welle" (the same person as Robert "ad Fontem"), who was a villein (servitus) of the Hospital, married

Matilda, and begot upon her one William atte Welle, likewise being a villein of the same Hospital, and William had issue one Giles, who was still living, and who was the plaintiff's villein as in right of the Hospital. The plaintiff prayed judgment whether Matilda's two daughters could be vouched when Giles was living. Issue was then joined as to whether there was any such Giles living.

A.D. 1340. seal; judgment of the writ.—This objection could not be allowed, unless the defendant would say that there is now a college and a common seal; for otherwise an action by writ of Entry is not given.—Therefore the tenant vouched two daughters as heirs; and the existence of their brother was alleged.—And afterwards, in Easter Term in the 15th year, the woman was admitted to defend her right on the default of her husband,¹ and she vouched one J. son and heir of her feoffor.—Thorpe. We tell you that J. is our villein; judgment whether our villein ought to be made a party as to us, for then he would be enfranchised.—Pole. We vouch at our peril, and between us an issue can not be taken as to whether he be a villein or free.—Thorpe. It can be for the purpose of ousting you from the voucher; but that will not be binding as between the lord and his villein. And whoever purchases ought to be aware of the condition of his feoffor; and if you were to take an estate from my villein, and I had an action for the land, and I were to bring a writ against you, it would be unreasonable that by voucher you should make my villein a party as to me, for then he would be enfranchised.—HILLARY. That is true, therefore answer whether he be a villein or not.—Pole. Then we tell you that the predecessor of this same plaintiff and the Brethren and Sisters, in the time when there was a college and a common seal, by their common deed, which is here, gave the tenements to the grandfather of this same person whom we vouch and his sons for ever, and the vouchee is issue of one of his sons; judgment whether in opposition to the deed it can be said that he is a villein.—HILLARY. And, if he were in the Court of the lord of Ancient Demesne, the Protection would avail him; so also it seems here.—Pole. If the protection is to avail him, it must put the parol without day, and this Court cannot grant a re-summons because they have not the original writ. The deed was not made to save or limit the reversion, but only for the freehold which passed to the tenant for the term of life; then, since nothing passed but a freehold, the fee is where it was before. And suppose that a man leases for term of life saving the reversion to himself for term of life or in fee tail, that reservation is of no avail.—STONORE. Suppose that they had rendered by fine as above, I say that no other person would have the inheritance of the reversion but the heirs of the husband, nor consequently in opposition to their deed, for the deed is admitted.—WILLOUGHBY. A deed may be avoided by the party, but a fine can not be.

We are on both sides strangers to the deed; wherefore we will maintain our writ.—And it appeared to the COURT that he should not be admitted in opposition to the deed. But he waived the exception of his own accord.—Thorpe. We hold of him by the services of one penny and not by those services whereof he has counted; ready &c.—And the other side said the contrary.—SCHARSHULLE. Upon this writ issue can not be taken on the quantity of the services.—WILLOUGHBY. Why not?—Gayneford. He shall not have such a plea without answering as to the seisin.—But this was denied.

The count is none the less good, and I hold it to be better.—W. Thorpe, for the Earl. It is not so, as it appears to me, for if we had to consider the question of making an avowry, you would not compel us to make an avowry upon you unless you showed how you were in by very title ; no more here.—BASSET. I am of opinion that whosoever may be tenant of the land, even though he may have been a disseisor, can, upon this writ, well plead as to the estate of him upon whose seisin the demandant wishes to maintain his action.—And they were adjourned, &c.

Escheat. § Hugh le Despenser brought a writ of Escheat against John de Warenne, Earl of Surrey,¹ and Joan his wife, and demanded against them two parts of two parts of the manor of Buckland ; and by another Præcipe he demanded the third part of same manor against Eleanor who was the wife of Guy Ferre the elder ;² and by another Præcipe he demanded the third part of the two parts against Ela¹ who was the wife of John Claroun, and he counted that John de Claroun held the manor of him³ and died without heir.—Gayneford. Eleanor tells you that she holds the third part in dower, of the endowment of G. Ferre the elder, effected at a time earlier than that of the seisin of John Claroun on whose seisin you demand ; ready to be intendent to whomsoever the Court shall adjudge.—Gayneford was blamed for saying that she was ready to be intendent.—Therefore he waived that, and said :—thus she holds of a higher estate ; judgment whether, while she is living, you can demand anything.—And Ela¹ gave a like answer—that she held of the endowment of John Claroun.—*W. And he died without issue, wherefore Guy Turreis, cousin and right heir of Guy the younger, entered and enfeoffed us; judgment whether you can demand anything against us.—Stouford. Guy the younger was an alien, who cannot by the law of this realm have any heir other than heir of his body; and you have admitted that he died without issue; so your estate, that is to say by feoffment, is by abatement; judgment whether it lies in your mouth to say that John Claroun had only a fee tail. And inasmuch as you do not deny our seignory, nor that John Claroun died without heir, we demand judgment, and pray seisin of the land. On the other hand, you do not show by very title that you are our tenant; wherefore, if you do not make yourselves privy to us, you ought not to be admitted to say that.—Thorpe. There lies in the mouth of every tenant an answer to rebut the demandant from his action, and this action is not maintainable on the seisin of tenant in fee tail, or of tenant for term of life.—Stouford. According to what you say, we shall in that case be ousted from action of escheat and from action of seignory, for, according to what you say, no one had anything but a fee tail by the fine.

§ Escheat against three persons by different Præcipes, supposing that the demandant's tenant died without heir.—Thorpe. A fine was levied between him whom you make your tenant and one G., by which G. rendered to A. who, you say, was your tenant, to hold to him and the heirs of his body, and if he

We tell you that J. died without heir; judgment whether such a plea lies in your mouth; for, if you had said no more than that he had only a fee tail, that would not be a plea if you had not made yourself privy in order to allege that matter. Now we have destroyed the cause whereby you think to have the advantage.—Thorpe. And we demand judgment, since you do not deny that he had only a fee tail, whether on his seisin you can maintain this writ.—Stouford. No other than our tenant can plead the plea which you plead; and, since you can not be our tenant in opposition to what we have stated, judgment.—And so to judgment.

Novel
Disseisin.

(23.) § Novel Disseisin, before WILLOUGHBY, SADINGTON, and BAUKWELL, against a woman and several others who alleged that the plaintiff was outlawed. And they were told to produce the record. And afterwards the plea was without day through the absence of the Justices. And afterwards the Assise was re-attached before WILLOUGHBY and BAUKWELL by si non omnes. And then all made default except the woman and one H. The woman was admitted as to parcel, and pleaded to the assise. H. produced a release of all manner of actions, and the plaintiff said that he should not be received to plead that, and since he had failed to produce the record [of outlawry] prayed the assise for the damages. H. alleged that he was under age; wherefore they were adjourned. And on the day given WILLOUGHBY did not come, but SADINGTON and BAUKWELL came, and they adjourned the parties on that point into the Bench.—Thorpe. One Justice by himself cannot record what took place before his companion and himself; wherefore BAUKWELL alone can not record what took place before WILLOUGHBY and himself; so the whole is discontinued.—This was not allowed, because what was done on that day was entered, and WILLOUGHBY, with whom the record remained, sent it under the seals of himself and his companions; wherefore it was held good enough. A.D. 1340. besides we shall not be able to have an issue on the question whether he was Prebendary or not, for, even though it were found that the vacancy was through another cause, the King would still have a writ to the Bishop, and for that reason we have tendered a general averment which comprises every matter that could give this presentation to the King; wherefore we understand that this averment is admissible.—Stouford. If so much were found in favour of the King by a jury as shall now be not denied by you, we understand that we should have a writ to the Bishop for the King; wherefore, &c. —WILLOUGHBY. Nothing shall be held as not denied by any one except that which could make an issue between you and the person who is party with you, and which the party could traverse; but now the questions whether he was Prebendary or not, or whether he was created Bishop or not, could not make an issue between you; and this issue which he tenders here is more to the advantage of the King than any other, for he traverses the point which you take for title to have this presentation for the King, and also every other; therefore, will you accept the averment?—Stouford said as above. Besides, if the action were between other parties, and one counted of several presentations, issue would be taken on one of them, but the others would be held as not denied; so also it seems in this case for the King that, when the cause of the vacancy in this instance is not denied by the defendant, he shall not have the averment which he tenders as it is absolutely contrary to that cause. And, Sir, we have seen, before yourself, issue taken on the cause of a vacancy.—WILLOUGHBY. Very likely; but, perhaps, that was by consent of the parties; but in the present case it appears

We do not admit that he was Prebendary, but we tell you that the prebend did not become vacant nor was it vacant while the temporalities were in the King's hand ; ready, &c.—Stouford. Since he does not deny that he was Prebendary nor that he was created a Bishop, which matter per force proves the King's title, judgment whether the averment lies.—WILLOUGHBY. It may be that he was not Prebendary, and that question will not make an issue against the King, for the King's title will not be thereby traversed, and the issue which he tenders is in disproof of the King's title to all intents ; wherefore it seems to us that the issue is good.—Stouford. And, if it be found ["Stipenhith"], they tell you that they have committed no tort. And, as to Richard, he tells you that he has nothing in this land except jointly with Thomas de C., who is named in the writ, and with W. de D., who is not named, &c.; judgment of the writ; and as to the joint-tenancy he produced a charter.—Stouford. The assise is awarded against Thomas de C. for his default, and, if this plea is to avail you, it will give advantage to him as well as to you; and, since you do not say anything else, we demand judgment and pray the assise.—W. Thorpe. It is not reasonable that I should lose my plea through his default, and if I had had no deed, and had pleaded the plea in abatement of the writ to the assise by the words, "if it be found," and this exception had been found true by the assise, the whole writ would have abated; where-

A.D. 1340. fore it seems in this case, when I have a deed in hand which proves the joint-tenancy, that the plea ought to avail me, and that being found would abate the whole writ.—SCHARDELOWE. According to the Statute¹ there shall not be process except on the plea of him who is tenant; now you have shown that Thomas, who does not appear, is tenant as well as you; wherefore, &c. And if your plea were allowed you, and the exception were found false, you would incur the penalty provided by the Statute; and it would not be reasonable that T., who is not a party to this exception, should incur that penalty.—*W. And, Sir, as to the second point, if a writ be brought against one, and he allege joint-tenancy with two, and one of those two come by process upon the Statute, and avow the exception, and will maintain it, and the other come and disavow it, and the exception be found false upon inquest had, the two [who maintained the exception] will incur the penalty, and the third will be free from it; so also it may be in this case; wherefore, &c.—See some like matter in Easter term in the eighth year, in the assise of Beverley².—On the morrow WILLOUGHBY said:—Will you say anything else in order to have this assise?—Stouford. That cause shown is not the substance of our voucher, for when the vouchees come into Court we can bind them by another cause, and the cause we have assigned shall not come upon the roll. Wherefore, since your counterplea is not warranted either by common law or by special law, we demand judgment and pray our voucher.—Rokell, gratis. We say that neither they nor their ancestors, as above.—W. Thorpe. This averment is not admissible, for inconvenience might result from it, because, if the averment be accepted, it may, perhaps, be found that the ancestor of one was seised, and the ancestor of the other not, and that verdict will, perhaps, be faulty; and we understand that the counterplea is to be admitted only where one alone is vouched.—HILLARY. You understand the Statute ill, for the counterplea is good though twenty were vouched.—ALDEBURGH, ad idem. If two parceners were vouched the counterplea would be good, and we cannot know whether they are vouched as parceners or in some other manner; wherefore will you accept the averment?—And afterwards W. Thorpe pleaded, in bar of the action, a deed of one who was heir of the assignee of the demandant's ancestor, which deed was denied.—And note, the writ was in this form:—Command, &c., which J. de T. gave to R. de E. and W. de S. and A. his wife, and the heirs issuing from the bodies of the same W. and A., and which after the death of the aforesaid R., and W. and A., ought to descend, &c.—And exception was taken to the writ, and afterwards it was adjudged good, &c.

A.D. 1340. And it was said that this counterplea was good without mentioning their ancestor, because the tenant vouched on account of their own seisin; for if one vouches as assignee, it is a good plea to say that the person whose assignee he makes himself never had anything.—Afterwards Bokell said, gratis, that neither they nor their ancestors ever had anything.—Thorpe. You cannot say that, for you heretofore brought a writ against them as tenants, on which you appeared. — This exception was not allowed.—Wherefore Thorpe waived his voucher and pleaded in chief.

Trespass. (35.) § Trespass, for the Abbot of Furness, brought against Robert de Radclyf, Sheriff of Lancaster. And he counted that his predecessors for some time had a franchise such that no one should meddle on the King's behalf, except themselves, within their lands of Furness, and afterwards his predecessor, in an Eyre, lost their franchise¹ as against King Henry, which King gave the county and sheriffwick of Lancaster to his son Edmund, &c.; and then he counted how Henry Earl of Lancaster, son and heir of Edmund,² gave, by the King's license, to the Abbot who now brings this writ the Sheriff's Turn and whatever belongs to the Turn, that is to say, presentments of bloodshed and of all resiants within his lands of Furness, rendering half a mark by the year. And he said that the Sheriff had distrained his men of Furness to present matters which were presentable at the Court of the Sheriff's County, so that the Abbot could not have his Turn. Whereupon he sued a writ to the Sheriff that the latter should not meddle within his liberty, and should appear before the King on a certain day. And the Sheriff did not cease on account of that writ from distraining as before, in contempt of the King and to the damage, &c.—Pole. He supposes a contempt in that the Sheriff did nothing on the King's command, and also in that he did not return any writ into the King's Bench, which matter cannot be tried in

² Henry was son, but not heir of Edmund. He was heir of his elder brother Thomas, who died without issue, and is so described in the Great Rolls of the Exchequer.

¹ Robert de Radeclif's plea, which is not very clearly brought out in either of the reports, was, according to the record, as follows. He said:—“Dominus Henricus, quondam Rex Angliæ, proavus domini Regis nunc, fuit seisisus de toto Comitatu Lancastriæ et fecit Vicecomites in eodem Comitatu pro voluntate sua, ante quod tempus nullus Turnus Vicecomitis tenebatur in eodem Comitatu infra terram de Fourneys nec alibi. Et dicit quod tunc, et semper ante a tempore quo non extat memoria, ballivi Wapentachiorum Comitatus prædicti et eorum sub-ballivi in Comitatu præsentarunt effusionem sanguinis, et Vicecomites executionem inde fecerunt. Et dicit quod quidam Edwardus de Neville dominus de Kellert est ballivus de Lonesdale in feodo, infra quam ballivam terra de Fourneys est. Et dicit quod tempore prædicti Regis Henrici, et post, et simili liter ante, a tempore quo non extat memoria, ballivi de Lonesdale qui pro tempore fuerunt venerunt ad Comitatum Lancastriæ et ibidem præsentaverunt effusionem sanguinis quæ emergbat infra ballivam prædictam tam in terra de Fourneys quam alibi.” He also said that Henry III. gave the county of Lancaster with the office of Sheriff to Edmund

A.D. 1340. First of all you must plead to an issue to which you cannot be a party, and that you have not done; for, if he were summoned and did not come, you would not plead then. — Pole. In a manner I have pleaded; and if the matter alleged be done it is in right of him who is Sheriff in fee.—Thorpe. He justifies the act in right of the Earl whose right is extinguished by his deed; judgment. — And by assent of the party the COURT granted the aid; and in the roll it is entered "that to this writ he cannot answer, &c."

Contempt. § The Abbot of Furness brought his writ against Robert de Radecluf, Sheriff of Lancaster, and counted, by W. Thorpe, that, whereas King Henry by divers his charters had granted to the Abbot of Furness, the present Abbot's predecessor, and his successors, &c., to have the Sheriff's Turn within the land of Furness, so that neither the Sheriff nor any other officer of the King should intermeddle within the same land, yet the said Robert, &c., on such a day, &c., entered the land of Furness, and there held his Turn, and caused certain people of the same liberty (and he said who they were) to present matters presentable at the Sheriff's Turn, and they presented blood-shed (and he said by whom shed), whereupon the said Robert distrained the persons against whom the presentment was made to come to his Turn in the County of Lancaster, and there make a fine, until they did come and make a fine to him, each

If we adjudge this writ good, perhaps, after damage shown by reason that the other party has done what is supposed in the writ, we shall then adjudge damages to him whose writ does not suppose him to be damaged, for the writ purports that he cannot hold his Turn, and it is clear, for anything that has yet been shown, that he can hold it to-morrow, if he will. — *W. If I have a Court Leet and View of Frankpledge in a vill, and you have one also, if you distrain my tenants to come to your Leet or to your View, I shall certainly have recovery against you, and so also shall my tenants have good recovery against you, for the tortious distress. Moreover, I can, nevertheless, hold Court Leet or View of Frank-pledge of my tenants; so also here; wherefore say something else. Besides, if a lord of a liberty have full return of writs, and the Sheriff usurp upon his liberty without sending a precept to the bailiffs of the liberty, and execute office himself, the lord shall have a good recovery against the Sheriff; and in that case, when a precept comes anew on another occasion, he shall have again the use of his liberty; so also it appears in this case; wherefore answer.—Pole. Again, judgment of the writ, for we tell you that Henry Earl of Lancaster here is Sheriff of Lancaster, and Robert is his Under-Sheriff removable at his pleasure; and the Abbot has described Robert as Sheriff; judgment, &c.—And, because Robert had made his return as Sheriff, this exception was not allowed. — And afterwards Pole said that Henry Earl of Lancaster was Sheriff in fee, and Robert de Radeclif Under-Sheriff deputed by the Earl, and removable at the Earl's pleasure, and prayed aid of the Earl. — And he had not aid without pleading some plea in right of the said Earl, which Robert de Radeclif could not himself try, &c. — And afterwards W. Thorpe assented to the grant of aid.¹

that it was the honour of Lancaster which was granted to his ancestor. In the Great Rolls of the Exchequer of the years 13 and 14 Edward III. Henry Earl of Lancaster is described, under the head "Lancastria" as "Viccomes de feodo," and Robert de Radeclif as "Sub-viccomes."

A.D. 1340. (36.) § A writ of Dower was brought against a tenant, and the demand was for the third part of two parts of the manor of C.—Blaik. As to the third part of your demand we vouch to warranty one J.; and as to the residue we tell you that you are seised in dower of tenements taken in exchange from ourselves by your own husband (and he showed in what manner); judgment whether you can have an action, &c.—W. Thorpe. Let the voucher stand. And, as to the residue, you speak of exchange which is a matter that lies naturally in specialty, and you were yourself a party, so that the deed ought to remain with you; wherefore the law will not put us to answer to anything that you have said, since you do not show any specialty.—Pole. Then you do not deny the seisin which we have alleged.—W. Thorpe. We do not plead in respect of that, but as above, for, if husband and wife aliened the right of the wife for other tenements taken in exchange, it would be necessary that the deed of exchange should be shown when the exchange was pleaded against the wife if she brought a Cui in vita, for otherwise it could not be understood to be the act of the wife; wherefore, &c.—HILLARY. In the case of which you speak if the tenant could fix upon the wife seisin of and satisfaction by the tenements taken in exchange, that would be sufficient for him to oust her from the action even without showing a deed.—W. Thorpe. Our husband was seised of this land simply, without this that there was an exchange; ready, &c.—And Pole said the contrary.

Dower demanded by reason of exchange, as appears in this plea, whereas the woman shall not be endowed of both lands, if the exchange be found, as appears, at common law.

A.D. 1340. § Dower, where it was pleaded in bar that the demandant had received dower of other tenements for which the tenements in demand passed in exchange; and it was said that an exchange cannot be made without a specialty, of which she showed nothing.—This was not allowed.—Thorpe. Our husband aliened simply, without this that he took anything in exchange; ready, &c.—And the other side said the contrary.

Dower where exchange was pleaded in bar, to which exception was taken because no deed was produced, and the exception was not allowed. Then the woman said that her husband aliened simply.

Right of advowson.

This is a writ of Right of Advowson, in which case you shall not have view unless you show cause, as by showing that there are several churches in the same vill.—W. Thorpe. It is a writ of Right, and common right gives us view, for we cannot know whether there be one church, or two, or any, in the vill, except by view, any more than when a manor is in demand, in which case I shall have view, because there may be two manors in a vill; so also it appears in this case.—R. Thorpe. It is old law that view shall not be had upon such a writ as this without cause shown.—W. Thorpe. Upon a writ of Right of Advowson of Tithes view shall be had without cause shown;

A.D. 1340. Avelhurst.—Blaik. John tells you¹ as to coming with force, &c., and as to cutting growing trees, that he is Not Guilty. But as to eight beech trees he tells you that he has a house and a bovat of land in Wysbergh within which vill the wood aforesaid extends, and this John has a profit in the same wood such that, if any tree there be thrown down either by the wind or in any other manner whatsoever, he shall have the branches and outgrowth as far as the trunk of the tree, which in that place is called "Twysshewencartfelghe," if so be that the said John can first seize them before any other tenant of the same vill who has a like profit in the same manner; and of this profit this same John, and his ancestors, and the ter-tenants have been seised, from time whereof memory does not run, as appurtenant to the freehold aforesaid; and because the eight beeches were thrown down by the wind the said John came peaceably and took the branches and the outgrowth, as it was fully lawful for him to do; and (said Blaik) we demand judgment whether, in respect of this, you can assign tort in his person.—W. Thorpe. Sir, you see

" 'Twysshewencartfelghe,' si venerit antequam aliquis alius qui habet tale proficuum in eodem bosco, amputare et asportare pro voluntate sua sine visu forestarii, de quo quidem proficuo capiendum in forma prædicta ipse et omnes antecessores sui et illi qui tenuerunt prædicta tenementa quæ ipse tenet a tempore quo non extat memoria seisisi fuerunt tanquam pertinente ad liberum tenementum suum prædictum"—and that he merely took the branches and "croppum" of eight beeches which were "prostratæ" in the wood. A.D. 1840. as to the common, that is to say to dig, dry, carry, and sell at the pleasure of the plaintiff.—SCHARSHULLE. That would now be an extraordinary plaint. However, it seems to me that they are at issue with regard to this plea, for the defendant has said that as to the cutting he is Not Guilty, and the words of the writ are, “wherefore, &c., he cut down trees lately growing, &c.,” which words he has traversed, and that cutting is the ground of the plaintiff’s action, and that which the defendant has said as to the branches is nothing to the purpose, for in respect of such branches taken and carried away another action would lie, just as in the case of my corn cut when growing and carried off there lies one manner of action, that is to say an assise or other writ, and in respect of my corn taken and carried off when in shocks or stored in a barn there lies another action; so also in respect of a house pulled down there lies one action, and in respect of timber taken and carried away from my house another action; wherefore, &c.—Blaik. Sir, had I pleaded simply Not Guilty, perhaps that would have fallen to my disinherittance in respect of this profit which I have claimed, and for that reason I have justified the act, as above, to which the other side ought to answer, and to that justification he has answered and pleaded with us in law, and so he has departed from his writ; wherefore we demand judgment, and pray that you abate this writ.—SCHARSHULLE. There is no need for him to answer you as to that which you said at first, for it is absolutely necessary that one who is to justify an act should avow the particular act surmised against him, and that you do not do; but that which he surmises—that is to say the cutting of the trees—you have denied, and so traversed his writ. Wherefore you, Plaintiff, will you maintain your writ?—And the Plaintiff said that he would.—Therefore the averment was accepted on the traverse.—Blaik prayed that the whole of his plea might be

That is not law now.—WILLOUGHBY. One more learned than you are adjudged it.—SCHARSHULLE. Your justification does not go to his writ, for you plead as to the trees thrown down by the wind, and his plaint is as to trees cut.—Derworthy. It is necessary to answer as to the carrying away; for if here I traversed the cutting, and the carrying away was found to be without cause, he would recover damages; and the carrying away is avowed for a cause; and if I did not make mention of my profit, I should lose it; and he has pleaded to my justification, waiving his writ; judgment of the writ.—Thorpe. Not so; but when you plead by way of justification you take upon yourself to answer to our plaint, and therefore you ought to answer as to the cutting, and that you have not done.—WILLOUGHBY. You are at a traverse; wherefore his plea shall be entered in evidence.—And so it was.—SCHARSHULLE said that, if the trees were thrown down by the wind and carried away, he would have another writ, for this writ gives an action for trees cut by the defendant.

⁶ This report, also from L., and 25184, though written in those MSS. as the report of a different case, is nevertheless another report of the case next preceding, as appears upon comparison with the record and with the two reports of the same case next following. A brief statement of the pleadings on the roll may render the reports more intelligible. One of the tenants in the writ, Thomas de Coumbe, at first claimed to hold in fee, and it was replied that he held for life, as supposed in the note of the fine levied between Ralph de Coumbe and Margaret his wife, and John de Molyns. Issue was joined on this point.

Afterwards the whole of the four tenants pleaded that John de Castalcumbe was seised of the tenements which they were by the fine supposed to hold in common, and demised them to the four to hold for their lives, and that partition of the tenements was made. The tenant Edward said that afterwards Ralph, son and heir of John de Castalcumbe, assigned the reversion of the tenements "to remain" to Edward, his heirs and assigns (by deed produced), that his three brothers attorned to him, and that so he held a fourth part of the tenements in fee, and that the reversion of the other three parts belonged to him in fee. The three other brothers said likewise. John de Molyns said that the four held in common, for life, on the day of the levying of the note of the fine. Issue was joined thereon.

·A.D. 1340. do not deny that you had only for term of life, at one time, nor that you held of our cognisor, you shall not be admitted to claim a fee without showing how.—SHARDELOWE. Your own writ gives him the answer; wherefore, &c. — R. Thorpe. He held for term of life, of our cognisor, on the day on which the note of the fine was levied, as the note supposes; ready, &c.

§ In a Quid juris clamat which John Molins brought against four persons the Sheriff returned, as to one, that he had nothing. Three came and said that the fourth had nothing, and that they three were tenants, but that they did not hold of the cognisor as the note of the fine supposed.—STONORE. This suit is against all, and in the mouth of the fourth, when he comes, lies the answer whether he has anything or not.—Therefore the Sheriff was commanded to distrain the fourth person in the lands whereof the note was levied.—Idem dies was given to the others.—BASSET. If he have nothing, it would be hard that the others should be distrained in their lands through the default.—Thorpe. Sir, in a writ of Customs and Services against several the distress and issues will run in common as against one person; so also here.—Quære.—Afterwards the four came and said that some time they held for term of life by lease from the ancestor of the cognisor, and that they made partition between them; afterwards the cognisor released to one of them his portion and granted him the reversion of the portions of the others by deed (produced).—Nevertheless John was admitted to aver the note.

And as to the third part we demand judgment whether in opposition to the deed of your ancestor, which proves the tenancy to be in socage, you can maintain this action against us who are the infant's mother. — Stouford. Sir, you see clearly that the ravishment is not denied, and that she has not justified it by any cause; and the plea which she pleads is impertinent here in this writ of Ravishment; wherefore we understand that the law will not put us to answer to anything that she has yet said, and we pray, &c. — Blaik. In respect of the two parts we claim the freehold itself, for had we pleaded, in respect of the whole, as guardians in socage, we should have given the freehold of the whole to the heir, but by the manner of our pleading we have given him the inheritance of the third part and the freehold, save that we have a right in action, and we have shown that we are the infant's mother, and in respect of the tenancy as above by the deed; judgment, &c. — *W. By the manner of your pleading you do not claim right in the wardship by reason of socage-tenure when you claim the entire freehold and nothing else in respect of the heir, and you do not avow the ravishment for any cause, and even though I had no right in the wardship it would not be for you to counterplead my right or for anyone except one who claims right in the same wardship upon this writ of Ravishment; wherefore we have no need to answer to you, &c. Such a plea as he pleads would be a good plea, upon a writ of Right of Wardship, by tenant by the curtesy of England, as to show how he was the infant's father to whom nurture appertained, with the conclusion, "and we demand judgment, &c."; and so also it seems in this case. — And they were adjourned.

§ Ravishment of Ward for Henry son of Hugh was brought against one Alice,¹ in respect of one J. brother and heir of Henry Spryng.—Blaik. We tell you that one E., father of J. and Henry, the wardship of whose heir you demand, held these tenements, that is to say the manor of L., of Hugh your ancestor, whose heir you are, which Hugh ratified and confirmed his estate, by this deed, to hold of him and his heirs by the service of one penny by the year for all services; afterwards a fine was levied between E. and Alice against whom this writ is brought of the one part and W.¹ of the other part, by which W.¹ granted and rendered the same manor to E. and Alice his wife and the heirs of E., &c.; and we hold two parts by force of the fine, and Henry whose heir you demand and J. his brother disseised us of the third part, for which we brought an assise against them and others, and that writ of assise abated by the death of H. who was tenant; wherefore J. his brother entered and is seised of that third part, and we have our assise pending against him and others; judgment whether by reason of that tenancy you can have an action against us who are the infant's mother. We tell you that J. did not hold of B., nor did B. hold of your ancestor, but he held of the Prior; ready, &c.; for it was of our fee. — WILLOUGHBY. You have given a cause for which you entered, which he has traversed; will you have the averment? — Wherefore Stouford maintained it by averment. — And the other side said the contrary. — And WILLOUGHBY said that if the land was once amortised in the hand of the Prior, and aliened, and afterwards purchased, that purchase was not contrary to the Statute.¹ — Quere.

A.D. 1340. (47.) § A writ of Formedon in the Reverter was Formedon. brought against the Abbot of Westminster, and the writ purported that Richard de C. the elder gave to Richard de C. the younger and Alice his wife and the heirs male of their bodies issuing, and that the tenements, after the death of the aforesaid R. de C. the younger, and Alice, and Thomas son of the aforesaid R. de C. the younger and Alice, ought to revert to the aforesaid demandant, because the aforesaid Thomas died without heir male issuing from his body. — W. Thorpe. He supposes this land to be revertible to him because Thomas died without heir male, &c., and the writ does not make him heir in tail; so his writ does not prove his action, for it may be that there is another heir living; judgment of the writ, since, if he survived, and was not seised, there was no need to have made mention of him either in the writ or in the count; wherefore, &c. — BASSET. Even though he had been seised there was still no need to have named him, nor, even had there been twenty seised, one after the other, was there any need to have mentioned any except the donees. — *R. Saving to us this exception, again judgment of the writ, for it ought to have made Thomas dead without heir of his body, inasmuch as he supposes that in law the entail has been fulfilled.—And afterwards he had view, &c.

A.D. 1340. A., and the heirs male of their bodies, &c. — Thorpe. You demand the reversion because Thomas died without male issue, and you have not made Thomas heir in tail by the writ, whereas neither the donor nor his heirs can claim reversion in such case except by default of issue of tenant in tail or of heir in tail, for if Thomas died while R. and A. were living, the writ would be good without making mention of him, and, for anything that your writ supposes, there may be a younger son. — Gaynesford. If there were a younger son you could allege that by way of answer, and though Thomas is named, though he was not seised, the writ is none the less good, and even if he had been seised we had no need to make him heir because we do not claim through him. — And they adjudged the writ good, &c.

Formedon. § Formedon in the Reverter, supposing the gift to have been to W. and A. and the heirs male of his body, and that the tenements, after the death of W. and A. and of Thomas son of the same W. and A., ought to revert to the demandant, because Thomas died without heir male. — Thorpe. Judgment of the writ; for Thomas is not made heir of W. or of A., nor is his seisin supposed, so the writ is not sued according to its nature; for the right cannot revert except by the death of the donee or his heir. — SCHARDELOWE. If he was not seised he should not be made heir; and if there were three or four persons in the descent, there is no need to make mention of all. — And the Court would not abate the writ. — Thorpe. Judgment of the writ; for the writ purports that Thomas died without heir male, whereas the writ should be in the form "because he "died without heir, &c.," for if he had an heir female she would inherit. — And afterwards he demanded the view.

² From T. alone. The case may be that of which there is a record among the Placita de Banco, Mich., 14 Ed. III., R. 377 d. Roger Housewyfe of Frekenham (Norfolk) and Katharine his wife brought a writ of Formedon in the Descender against Alice, late wife of Peter de Nerford, and Ralph, son of Patrick de Tyndale, on a gift to Ralph le Blount and Ellen his wife in special tail. The descent of the right was to William, son and heir of the donees, and from him to Katharine, the seisin of William not being mentioned. The tenants prayed judgment because William was seised. The demandants traversed his seisin, and issue was joined thereon.

A.D. 1340. (49.) § Upon a writ of Entry the franchise of Hereford was allowed. — Afterwards the parties came into the Common Bench by re-summons.—Thorpe counted. — The bailiffs demanded the franchise. — Thorpe. You ought not to have the franchise, for, at the time at which the parties came into your Court, we counted, and the tenant defended and demanded oyer of the transcript which was delivered to you out of this Court; and it was read, and in it there were wanting the words quod clamat esse jus et hereditatem; and the tenant took exception to it, upon which exception the Court adjourned us; so there will be a failure of justice towards us, inasmuch as the demandant cannot sue in this Court to have a good warrant.—R. Thorpe. One has seen a franchise allowed without delivery of transcript. — This was not allowed. — R. Thorpe. The transcript was good, and no such exception was taken as you allege; ready, &c. But you counted of the seisin of your ancestor in the time of King Edward father of the present King, as to which count you were allowed. We imparled, and came back, and then you wished to amend your count, and counted of the seisin of your ancestor in the time of another King. We said that you should not be admitted to that, upon which exception we were adjourned. — Thorpe. Now you have admitted that you have failed in justice towards us, for, before exception has been taken by a party, we are perfectly at liberty to amend our count. — R. Thorpe. He does not maintain his first exception; wherefore we pray cognisance of the plea.—This was not allowed. — The JUSTICES were of opinion that the demandant could not in this case have amended his count. — Therefore the franchise was allowed.

Formedon. (50.) § Peter Nutil brought a writ of Formedon against Edmund Kyllum in the Liberty of the Bishop [of Durham], where the deed of his ancestor was pleaded in bar, and that he had assets by descent in the counties of York and Lincoln, upon which they were at issue. And because the issue could not be tried there, the Court put the parol without day; and afterwards for that reason the record was reversed before the Bishop himself, because the Justices ought to have continued the plea by adjournment. And the Bishop, when he had reversed on this point, gave a day to the parties before his Justices, where the plea was pleaded; at which day the tenant caused himself to be essoined. And afterwards by the King's writ the record was removed to try the issue here. And now the tenant is essoined, and exception is taken because he was essoined in the liberty after the inquest was joined.—This exception was not allowed.—Wherefore the essoin was adjourned.—Blaik. We pray a writ to cause the Inquest to come.—Mallum. When came the plea before the Bishop's Justices after the record had been reversed before him in a higher Court?—Blaik. It was by adjournment, and so they would make an adjournment into this Court out of the King's Bench.—Pole. Never; but they would go on with the plea there.

The Bishop is as a King there, and can adjourn whither he pleases; and it is the custom there.—Thorpe. When the record is removed into this Court out of ancient demesne and reversed, the process of the plea shall be in this Court.—HILLARY. Still in your case it is necessary to allow their custom in this Court; and by the writ which you have put forward we can do nothing, for it does not belong to this Court to adjudge Error.—Afterwards by the consideration of the whole COURT in Hillary term, Venire facias issued to the Sheriff of the County of York¹ on the issue joined at Durham.²

This writ does not lie except as in vill or hamlet, and you have not named in the writ either vill or hamlet; judgment of the writ.—Thorpe. If the place be without vill and hamlet, then our writ is good, wherefore, if you wish to abate my writ, a plea in certain must come from you.—And the COURT held the writ to be good if the defendant could not say anything

A.D. 1340. that, if Peter had not seignory in these tenements, he who now brings this writ could discharge himself against him by plea, as by pleading hors de son fee.—Therefore W. Thorpe tendered the averment that Peter had not seignory as the writ supposed; ready, &c.¹—And the other side said the contrary.—See a like issue taken, in Hilary Term in the twelfth year, on a like writ.²—And note:—W. Thorpe understood at first that Rokell had counted that the plaintiff had been distrained for his own homage, and said:—Sir, you see clearly how he supposes by the writ that the Abbot has a seignory mesne between him and Peter, and supposes by his count that the plaintiff himself ought to do homage to Peter, and that so he is without a mesne lord and is immediate tenant to Peter, and so his count discharges us of his writ; judgment of the count.—And this was not allowed, for the other said that he did not count in that manner, but that the plaintiff was distrained for homage.—And the COURT held that count good, for they said that they could not understand it otherwise than as to the effect that the plaintiff was distrained for the homage of him against whom the writ was brought.—See, as to the like matter, Easter Term in the fifth year,³ &c.

Mesne. § Mesne.—Blak. Whereas you suppose that we are meane between you and B., we tell you that B. has neither fee nor seignory; ready, &c.; judgment of the writ.—Kelshulle. Ready, &c., that he has.—And it seemed to the COURT that the issue was good.

¹ According to the record the Abbot pleaded that the tenements were "extra feodum et dominium prædicti Petri." The plaintiff replied that they were within Peter's "feodum et dominium," and issue was joined thereon. The jury found that the tenements were not within

Peter's fee and seignory, and judgment was given for the Abbot.

And we tell you that this J. is cousin and heir of R. de S., and for such cause we vouch him. (And W. Thorpe produced a part of the fine, and in the fine there was no warranty.)—R. Thorpe. All this may have been done when the parties were in seisin, and the fine is good enough as between the parties, but he who vouches for a cause ought to show transmutation of possession, and the tenant has not said that he who rendered was seised, wherefore we do not understand that he has said sufficient to have this voucher, for, if he would say that he who rendered was seised, to that we could have a traverse.—HILLARY. A.D. 1340. would have been adjudged a bastard, and so this issue was only to the same effect as the first.

Formedon. § Formedon in the Remainder (on a gift made by A. to J. his son, &c., remainder over) brought against a man and his wife. And the wife, having been admitted, vouched her husband for this cause that her husband acknowledged by fine the tenements to be the right of one J., and J. rendered back to her husband and her, &c., and her husband was cousin and heir of this J. who rendered.—And there was no warranty in the fine, but no stress was laid on that fact.—Pole. J. was a bastard, so he could not have an heir except of his body, and that he had not.—And it seemed to the COURT that he should have that plea, to defeat the cause of the voucher.—Thorpe. J. was the same person to whom the gift is supposed to have been made, and the demandant has called him the son of A. by the writ; judgment whether to bastardise him, &c.—And it seemed to the COURT that the demandant should not be admitted to bastardise him.—Therefore the voucher was adjudged good.—And the fine was levied in D. which is a hamlet of the vill where the writ is now brought.

From Ralph the manor, &c., descended to John, formerly husband of Margery, the plaintiff, as son. This John was under age and in the wardship of Thomas Ercedekene, which Thomas assigned to Joan, who was the wife of Ralph, the third part of the manor, together with the advowson of the church of Pillaton, in allowance for the advowsons of the other churches, to hold in dower. Afterwards John, the husband of this Margery, died, whereby two parts of the manor, with the two advowsons [of Saint Dominick and Dydesham], descended to Joan,¹ who is now the wife of Nicholas Inkepenne, and she was under age and in the wardship of Thomas Ercedekene, who assigned to this Margery the third part of the two parts of the manor aforesaid, together with the third part of the advowson of Saint Dominick to present at every third vacancy. Afterwards the church became vacant, whereupon the said Thomas, in the right of Joan, presented one T., &c. And afterwards the church became vacant, whereupon Joan, being then of full age, presented one S., by reason of whose death the church is now vacant. So it belongs, &c.—Pole. You do not deny our statement that there was no advowson appendant to the manor except that of the church of Saint Dominick, so that, of common right, she could not have had dower as appendant to the third part of the manor except the third part of the advowson of the church of Saint Dominick.—Thorpe. The third part, &c., was assigned to one Alice, the wife of J., the father of the demandant's husband, on a higher endowment. A.D. 1340. Gaynesford, for Alice, denied the taking, and for J. acknowledged the taking as bailiff of one Alice de B., and Katharine de B., for damage feasant.—Pole. This same Alice on behalf of whom you avow is the same person that has denied the taking, so that, if she were to be joined in aid on an aid-prayer, she would never be able to justify this taking; wherefore we do not understand that such a cognisance lies on behalf of Alice.—Gaynesford. We have not said that she is the same person, &c., but we have made cognisance [as bailiff] on behalf of Alice and of another, in which case even though Alice might be willing to admit that the taking was tortious, the other might well justify it. (And to this the COURT agreed.) And since it is a personal act that you surmise against us, and we have excused ourselves, we demand judgment, &c.—Pole. If you had prayed aid of A. and she had come and disavowed the taking, we understand that you would have been convicted; the argument is just as strong in this case.—SCHARDELOWE. This Alice on whose behalf you acknowledge the taking [by bailiff] is the same person as she who has denied the taking, so that on her behalf you cannot make cognisance; for if she were prayed in aid and did not come, you would be convicted. (This, however, was denied.) And in this case, because she is a party, she shall not be prayed in aid. — HILLARY. It is not right that the plea of one should oust others from their advantages; for in a Replevin brought against two persons, if one deny the taking, and the other avow and acknowledge for him who has denied, still the avowry will not abate. — SCHARDELOWE. He has made cognisance for another who is not a party, wherefore his matter is better, and he can have a Return for the other who is not a party; and if he had made cognisance for her who is party [alone] and who has denied the taking, he would not have the Return.—Pole. And after the death of John and Walter he who now avows was seised of the fealty of the plaintiff, and for the plaintiff's homage in arrear he avows, &c.—R. Thorpe. Thorpe*. The commencement of your answer is in abatement of my avowry (for, whereas I have supposed one messuage and one carucate of land to be one entire tenancy held of my grandfather and of me, you have made this land and other land one entire tenancy) and your conclusion is in bar; wherefore hold to one.—SCHARDELOWE. Avowry. § Avowry, because the plaintiff held of the defendant by homage and the services of 5s.—Thorpe. Your ancestor gave that land to our ancestor, and afterwards granted and confirmed that land and other land to our ancestor and his wife, and released all the right which he had in the 5s., to hold by one clove for all services; and the deed contained the words "in feodo et hereditate in perpetuum"; judgment whether for the homage in opposition to the deed, &c.—Thorpe. ¹ According to the record the replication on behalf of the defendant was (shortly) that there were not in the deed any express words by which the tenements were discharged of homage and escuage. But as the grant was "cum wardis, releviis, et escaetis, in quibus verbis homagium et omnia alia servitia sunt intellecta," and as the rent was extinguished, the plaintiff prayed judgment whether the defendant could avow for homage in arrear. Upon inspection of the deed produced the Court held that the defendant had distrained contrary to his ancestor's deed. Judgment was therefore given for the plaintiff, with damages assessed by the Justices at 20s.

We are pleading in discharge.—Thorpe. The deed only extends to change the rent of money into one of a clove, so that the homage remains.—Pole. The deed purports that he granted with "wardships and escheats," &c., and purports that he released to hold by the clove for all services, so that more cannot be demanded.—Thorpe. The grant was made to the husband and the wife, which cannot give an estate to the wife; besides, the deed extends only to the 5s.—STONORE. These are two points; hold you to one.—Thorpe held himself in judgment on the point that the deed extended only to the 5s.—And so to judgment.

It is not so, for if, upon a writ of Warrantia chartæ brought against you, you say that he who brings the writ is not and has not been impleaded, the issue shall be taken and tried at once, although the warranty is admitted, in respect of which he shall leave his judgment; so also upon a Quare impedit, if you say that you have not disturbed; and so also upon a writ of Dower unde nihil habet, if you cannot deny her ground of action, but in order to escape damages say that the husband did not die seised; so also it seems in this case.—And the issue was received and was entered upon the roll.—Therefore it was considered that in future the defendant should acquit the plaintiff.—And it was said that, if the plaintiff will, he shall, upon this judgment, have a writ to distrain the defendant to acquit him.—Therefore quære, &c.

Mesne. § Mesne, where the defendant said that the plaintiff was not distrained by his default; ready, &c.—And the other side said the contrary.—Pole. We pray judgment of the liability to acquit acknowledged, and the inquest for our damages.—Thorpe. That cannot be; for if it be found that you were not distrained through our default, the writ will abate.—Mallum. What you say is wrong; the writ will not abate any more than in a Quare impedit, where if the defendant allege that he has not disturbed, the plaintiff will have a writ to the Bishop and the inquest for the damages; and so here; and it is the common course.—Wherefore it was adjudged that the plaintiff should recover the acquittal, and have a Venire facias for damages upon their issue.

Your replication is double; one part of it lies in fact, as to whether the King and his progenitors have had the escheats or not, &c., and the other in record, &c., as to whether this be the King's free borough or not; wherefore hold you to one.—HILLARY. You oblige him by your answer to plead both.—Thorpe. The answer is accepted as good; and, although they may have accepted a double answer, it does not thereby follow that he should have a double replication.—HILLARY. We will not permit you to go on with two answers, even though they might be willing to accept them; and therefore make your answer with certainty; and you have a day by Prece partium, in which case all that was pleaded before loses its force, and the tenant is at liberty to plead anew.—Thorpe. I do not think so; but our plea is entered on the roll, and it is accepted and cannot be removed.—And afterwards Gayneford said that the King had not had the escheats in that town from all time; ready, &c.; and they have not denied that the tenements are holden of us; judgment; and we pray seisin.—And in this plea HILLARY said that of common right everywhere the King shall have the year and waste, and that, if he give when he is so seised, the lord can only have a writ of Escheat against the tenant. Quære.—Blaik. The King has had the escheats from all time; ready, &c.—And the other side said the contrary.

Escheat. § John de Berkelay brought a writ of Escheat against John de Weston, and demanded a messuage in the suburb of Bristol.—Thorpe. Whereas you demand this escheat on the ground of the felony committed by John Traverner, you cannot demand anything, for Bristol and the suburb are the King's free borough, where the King, as in right of his crown, ought to have escheat of all the tenants in the city, of whomsoever the tenements may be held, and of these escheats the King and his progenitors have been seised since time of memory; and we tell you that our Lord the King entered by reason of the felony committed by John Traverner and enfeoffed us; judgment whether you can have an action.—Pole. We pray that it be recorded that he does not deny that the tenements are held of us. And we tell you that King John purchased the seignory of Bristol from the Earl of Gloucester,

You cannot say that; for a fine was levied between your ancestor and one J., whereby your ancestor acknowledged certain rent, whereof this rent of which you speak is parcel, to be the right of J., and J. rendered back to your ancestor and A. his wife and the heirs of the husband, which A. is still alive and tenant of the rent; judgment whether it lies in your mouth to plead such priority.—And afterwards the averment was received upon the priority.

And there the plaintiff in the writ was charged with a certain receipt, and he produced an acquittance, which was denied; and thereupon they were at issue. And at another day he produced another general acquittance, made since the last continuance; and thereupon they were again at issue, because the defendant in the writ denied the deed. And it was found that it was not the defendant's deed; wherefore it was adjudged that the plaintiff in the writ should be charged with that with which he was charged by the first account, and that he should remain in custody until he had made satisfaction. And it was said that the last deed ought not to have been tried unless by consent.

² There is also an abridgment of this case in Harl. 741.

³ From T. alone, but corrected by the record Placita de Banco, Mich., 14 Ed. III., R^o. 575 d. It there appears that the Quare impedit was brought by the King against John de Colby, in respect of the church of Hadenham (Cambridgehire).

A.D. 1340. the church, against whom the King recovered, and so the church was then vacant, wherefore no one else had anything therein; judgment for the King.—[R.] Thorpe. The church did not become vacant by the King's recovery, unless the King had title; now we tell you that the church was not then vacant, so the King is without title.—Stouford. Within the year the King would have had execution; therefore after the year he can have it by Scire facias.—HILLARY. That does not follow; for in your case the Bishop would excuse himself in a Quare non admisit, but he would not do so where he himself is a party; wherefore it is proper that he should now have the recovery.—Thorpe. If I recover land without title, I shall have execution without pleading my title.—HILLARY. The case is not similar, for the action higher up is saved; not so here.—Thorpe. In a Scire facias it is not the action of the party on the first writ that is to be tried; but, if the opposite party cannot say anything ex post facto to the contrary, execution will by law be made. Besides, if no one occupied the church but he against whom the King recovered, and no one else made contention, and the King recovered, the recovery is good, for the parson by resignation might make the church vacant, and do so in such a manner that the King might present; the case is stronger when he lost by judgment.—Kelshulle. If he was then parson the writ did not lie, so the recovery was null; if another was parson then the church did not become vacant; and this we have offered to aver.—Afterwards, in Trinity term in the 15th year, Thorpe said:—This Scire facias is sued against the Bishop as against him who is to execute the judgment by which the King recovered; wherefore—as to him who does not show that either the judgment or the execution can be charged on him, since he does not allege plenarty in the person of any one but him who was party to the judgment—it seems that he shall not be admitted to aver that the church was not vacant.—R. Thorpe. Nostre averement serreit au Roi a chescun regard ;

A.D. 1340. averment would be to the King in every respect; for, if the same person who was party was then parson, then there was no vacancy, nor, consequently, did the King's writ lie; and, if another was parson, the averment serves him also.—PARNING. It was never heard that in a Scire facias the action on the first Original should be tried; and when the King brought Quare impedit he was patron, and there was no other person against whom to sue except him who was party; and although he might have been parson, still by his plea he lost; then it would be strange if you, who have become possessed of the patronage since, should plead that the first judgment was not good.—R. Thorpe. No one can prove that by plea a vacancy can be adjudged; for this is neither cession, privation, resignation, nor death of the parson; then although he had been parson, the church was not vacant, nor consequently was the recovery worth anything. And again, they have alleged that he was occupier, so that the church cannot be understood as then full, but vacant, and that we traverse. And it is not here as in the case of land, for the land is always freehold which can be demanded, but not so a presentation unless it be on some vacancy.—KELSHULLE (JUSTICE). You allege that it was not vacant; why then will you not say in whose person it was full?—R. Thorpe. Because plenarty is not to be alleged against the King, and also because this Court cannot take cognisance of plenarty: but we offer to aver what can make an issue and be tried.—More afterwards of this plea in Trinity term in the 16th year.—The case was that John de Colby, against whom the King recovered, was at the time of the bringing the Quare impedit, according to the judgment given, parson imparsonée of the same church, and by consent pleaded with the King.¹

¹ The following is an abstract of the case, as it appears upon the record. Simon, Bishop of Ely, prayed and had oyer of the record

¹ From T. alone, as far as the point at which the larger type ends, but corrected by the record Mich., 14 Ed. III., R^o. 547. It there appears that the action was brought by John son of John Adryan against John de Stratfeld and Alice his wife, in respect of waste alleged in the manors of Brockham and Farncombe and other lands in Surrey. The plaintiff counted, according to the record, that the defendants, holding the lands "in custodia" during his minority, committed waste in cutting and selling trees, &c., with this remarkable addition, "et exulando per graves et intolerabiles districtiones quendam Gilbertum Hogeman tenentem unum mesuagium et medietatem unius virgatæ terræ cum pertinentiis in villenagio, et quendam Emam Brokyld tenentem unum

"mesuagium et medietatem unius virgatæ terræ cum pertinentiis in villenagio, in prædictis maneriis, ad exheredationem ipsius Johannis filii Johannis."

² The jury found, as appears by the record, that the whole of the tenements were held in socage, that the defendants were seised "nomine custodiæ, ratione minoris ætatis prædicti Johannis filii Johannis," the defendant Alice being his mother and next friend, and that the defendants did cut certain trees "ad exheredationem prædicti Johannis filii Johannis." They were asked what his age was, and said "Fifteen." They were also asked the value of the tenements, and said "40*l. per annum*." There were several adjournments afterwards, but no judgment appears.

A.D. 1340. § A writ of Waste was brought against a guardian in socage. Waste. —W. Thorpe, as to parcel, claimed to hold in dower, and demanded judgment of the writ. And as to the residue, he demanded judgment whether such a writ lay against him, for he said that the whole shall fall under account, and so also in the case of tenant by Elegit, and the like. And he said also that the guardian was, as it were, in the place of bailiff against whom a writ of Trespass lies, and not a writ of Waste. And afterwards he pleaded over gratis.

Trespass. (89.) § Trespass against two persons, for three pots, one pan, and two tables carried away in the third year of our Lord the King. — Gayneford, for one of the defendants,¹ said :—As to the pots and tables, you heretofore brought a writ of Trespass against us for one pot and one small cup which are the same goods in respect of which you now complain by another description, and for one table, on a taking made in the seventh year of the King, whereon it was found that we did not carry them away ; judgment whether you can now have an action therefor.—Thorpe. We are complaining in respect of a different thing from that to which you answer, and of a different time ; so you answer nothing. — BASSET. If the taking should be found to have been in a different year from that of which he has counted, he will take nothing ; wherefore you are not subject to mischief, even if you answer to his writ.—Gayneford. (90.) § A tenant for term of life prayed aid of the reversioner, and said that he was under age, and prayed that the parol might demur, &c. — The demandant said said that he was of full age, and prayed that he might be viewed by the Court. — The Venire facias issued. — The Sheriff returned that he had nothing; so also to the Alias Venire; so also to the Pluries Venire. — Therefore SCHARSHVILLE, with the assent of the whole COURT, said to the tenant, who appeared by attorney: — Forasmuch as we see that this Aid-prayer is for the purpose of delaying the demandant, and will never come to an end if the Venire facias be not served (for otherwise the prayee will not be distrained, and so will not lose any issues), therefore sue to cause him to come at your peril; and this shall be entered on the roll, so that if he do not come, &c., you shall answer alone, &c.

Just as the tenant was aggrieved by the loss of his freehold, so you were equally aggrieved by the loss of your remainder, which was dependent on his estate; and consequently you shall have an Attaint.—Derworthy. That cannot be, because we are acquitted of the disseisin, and for that reason not in any way aggrieved either by the judgment or by the verdict; wherefore, &c.—W. Thorpe. You were a party to the original writ, and might have denied the plaintiff's seisin and have had your challenges of the Assise; and your right was lost by verdict when the disseisin was found; so you were aggrieved; wherefore, &c. And even though a tenant be acquitted of the disseisin, and the disseisin be found as having been effected by others named in the writ, still he shall have an Attaint on account of the grievance of his loss; so also in this case.—WILLOUGHBY. There is nothing wonderful in that; but it appears that when the person who now sues this writ was acquitted of the disseisin, and could not, in the assise have pleaded any plea in bar of the assise, she shall have the Attaint, for otherwise you might name in the writ of Assise every one who has any right to any land and so oust them from their action.—SCHARSHULLE, ad idem. Even though she who sues this writ had not been named in the writ of assise, that writ would have been sufficiently good; then, as she was acquitted, the case with regard to her is just as if she had not been named; and, if she had

A.D. 1340. not been named in the writ, it is clear that she would have had the averment which she tenders; therefore it seems to me that the naming of her in the writ shall not oust her from it.—W. Thorpe. Sir, every one who is named in the writ of assise can deny the plaintiff's title, that is to say, the seisin, and is therefore a party to the plea; besides, since the fine upon which her estate was dependent was pleaded to the assise by one who was tenant, and that fine was rendered of no avail by the verdict, and so her right was lost, it seems to us that she shall have the Attaint; wherefore, &c. — WILLOUGHBY. It cannot be so, because when an assise passes in point and in matter of assise, although the verdict may set forth a long narrative, the attaint shall not be had upon that, but only upon the verdict, that is to say "seised and disseised," for the rest is not parcel of the verdict. And since she was acquitted it appears as above. — Pole. Yes, Sir, an Attaint shall be had in respect of everything which is said in the verdict and which can prove a disseisin, and since the Assise said as above, and that verdict has disproved your right, we understand that she shall have the Attaint. — WILLOUGHBY. As to your first point, you say what is true, but since she could not have barred the assise if she had wished, and since she was afterwards acquitted, it seems as above. And we have seen this adjudged—a similar recovery on an assise of Novel Disseisin was pleaded against one who brought a writ of Formedon, in which assise he had himself pleaded to the assise by bailiff, and because the assise passed in point of assise, and the entail cannot fall within the competence of the assise to discuss, it was adjudged that he should be answered [as to a like

A.D. 1340. averment]. — SCHARDELOWE. It seems to me that on account of the loss of the remainder she should have the Attaint, for she cannot now be admitted to defend her right, nor shall she have a writ of Waste, and, if I recover by a right elder than the commencement of an entail, it seems to me that every lower action is taken away. — R. Thorpe. Sir, it is not so, for if the entail be by fine, a Scire facias can very well be had, and, if by deed in pais, a writ of Formedon. — And to this WILLOUGHBY, SCHARSHULLE, and ALDEBURGH agreed, and ALDEBURGH said: — Even though the tenant of the land who was aggrieved by the judgment had sued the Attaint, and the oath [of the jurors] had been found true as between him and them, still I think that she who sues this writ might maintain her action. — R. Thorpe. Yes, Sir, certainly, for we do not understand that we can have any other recovery, if not this, &c.; and, since he refuses the averment which we tender, we demand judgment and pray execution. — And then, after the COURT had asked the Abbot whether he would accept the averment, W. Thorpe said, Whereas you have said that he had not anything before the fine, ready, &c., that he had. — R. Thorpe. You shall not be admitted to that, since heretofore you abode judgment on the other point; wherefore, &c. — WILLOUGHBY. He did not abide judgment absolutely, but “if it should appear to the Court, “&c.” And this averment which he now traverses came from you. And he demanded judgment because you did not pursue that which you had previously offered to aver in maintenance of your action. — R. Thorpe. Sir, he shall not now be admitted to plead a new plea in order to oust us from execution; wherefore, &c. — And afterwards he accepted the averment, &c.¹

We cannot give any other judgment but one in accordance with the terms of the verdict; and, if you wish to have any other judgment, you must wait until it be inquired as to what you have said; and therefore consider what you will pray.—W. Thorpe. Sir, we pray judgment on the verdict, and also conditional judgment in respect of the matter which has occurred since, and a writ to the Sheriff to enquire, as upon a writ of Dower, where the heir of the husband is vouched, for otherwise we shall be put to mischief, because if we were now to pray judgment on the verdict simply, we should accept it that the infant is unmarried, and, in that case, we should not be admitted hereafter to say the reverse.—SCHARSHULLE. What you say on that point is true, and therefore you do well to say it now, so that hereafter you may be aided by plaint.—ALDEBURGH, ad idem. If, between judgment given and execution sued upon a writ of Wardship, the infant marry, the plaintiff shall be aided by plaint just as upon a writ of Waste, in respect of waste committed after the judgment has been given and execution sued, &c.—Stouford. Sir, that is a case in which something has occurred after judgment, but in this case the judgment is still to be given, and if it be given on the verdict it is thereby supposed that the infant is unmarried; therefore we pray that you will enter that which we have said, so that hereafter we may have a remedy.—SCHARSHULLE. Right de
bilibus Divisis.

(94.) The Abbot of Kirkestede brought a writ of Right¹ de rationabilibus divisis against Alesia Countess of Lincoln, and counted, by Pole, that tortiously she refused to allow reasonable divisions to be set between the land of the said Abbot in Coningshy and the land of the said Countess in Bolingbroke, Stikeney, and Sibsey,² as they ought and have been used to be, which divisions and bounds begin towards the South at a certain place which is called Maplebush, descending in a straight line, &c., and in like manner (said he) towards the East and towards the West, beyond which divisions and bounds the said Countess ought not to have anything towards the West, yet the said Countess has drawn to her fee, &c., so many acres of moor, and of marsh, tortiously, &c., and tortiously for this reason that the right is his; and he alleged the taking of esplees as in the sale of moor, and heath, and furze, &c.; and he tendered suit in deraignment. W. Thorpe defended, and said that this land was parcel of the manor of Bolingbroke, which manor the Countess held by gift of the King made to her and to Ebulo Lestrangle, formerly her husband, and to the heirs of Ebulo, and said that Ebulo died without heir of his body,

¹ It appears in the record that the cause was removed from before the Sheriff into the Court of Common Pleas, on the petition of the Abbot.

A.D. 1340. and so the reversion¹ rested in the person of Roger Lestrangle, cousin and heir of Ebulo. And (said he) we pray aid of him.—Pole. We have fixed a tort in your person in that you have drawn our land to your fee; wherefore to maintain that tort you ought not to have aid any more than upon a writ of Intrusion.—SCHARDELOWE. In that case the writ in itself supposes the tort, but this is a writ of Right upon which you have to set the divisions according to the right and in perpetuity, and the Countess cannot be a party to do this. And upon a writ of Admeasurement of Pasture, against a woman who holds in dower, we have seen aid granted; so also in this case.—HILLARY. That was reasonable, and so it is in this case; therefore, let her have the aid, &c.²—See the like in Easter Term in the twelfth year, &c.³

¹ It is called a reversion in the record also.

² Subsequently, as appears by the record, the Countess and Roger Lestrangle jointly put themselves on the Grand Assise against the Abbot, as to the better right, citing the King's charter of grant. The Abbot imparls, and Roger does not return. The Countess then answers for herself, and puts herself on the Grand Assise. After the election of the Grand Assise, and some adjournments, the Countess says that the Abbot and Convent of the one part, and she of the other part, have granted and acknowledged (concesserunt et cognoverunt) by indenture, that certain lands described are parcel of the manor of Bolingbroke and within its soke, and the Abbot and Convent have released their right in the same, saving their right of common. The deed (in French)

is recited at length. The Countess then prays judgment whether the Abbot can have action against her, contrary to his deed. The Abbot cannot deny his deed, and judgment is given for the Countess as to the matters therein included. The Abbot then prays the Grand Assise as to the residue. The Court doubts whether it should proceed to take the Grand Assise, and gives a day. On the day the Countess does not appear, and judgment is given for the Abbot as to the residue. Because, however, there might be collusion, the Sheriff was commanded to summon a jury (Nisi prius, &c.) "ad recognoscendum qualejus, &c." They found the title of the Abbot and Convent, and found that there was no collusion.

A.D. 1340. (95.) Sir Gilbert Talbot brought a writ of Cosinage against Ralph de Wilynton and Eleanor his wife, and demanded against them the castle of Caer Kenny and the commote of Iskenny, &c., and alleged the taking of the esplees as in "lowage" of the castle, and in homage, and rent, and arrears of rent, fines, and amercements, and other kinds, &c.—Stouford produced the King's charter whereby the King had given to the tenants the same castle and the same commote (and it was mentioned in the charter that the said tenements came into the King's hand through the forfeiture of John Maltravers) and prayed aid of the King.—And he had the aid.—And now Stouford, for Ralph and Eleanor, vouched to warranty one Margery Giffard, desiring that she should be summoned, &c.—R. Thorpe you shall not be admitted to that, for heretofore, in this same plea, you prayed aid of the King, which aid you have, and that is in lieu of voucher; wherefore, &c. Besides, it might be that Margery enfeoffed the King, and bound herself to warrant to him, and to his heirs, and to his assigns, and that we shall have the warranty against her as assignees of the King; wherefore, &c.—SCHARSHULLE. Then that ought to be shown by special cause, for, when you have had aid of the King, that is in lieu of vouching another; and if you had vouched another, and the voucher had been permitted, and the vouchee had entered into warranty, you would not afterwards have had another voucher; so also it seems in this case.—Stouford. Sir, in that case I should have placed my answer in the mouth of another, but in this case I am still a party myself; wherefore it seems, though the King has signified his pleasure to you, that I am at large to plead what plea I will.—SCHARSHULLE (with the assent of the whole COURT). You shall not have the voucher unless you show cause. (Quære the case in the third year.¹ But this agrees with the case in the ninth year² on a writ of Formedon per HERLE.)—Stouford. We understand the voucher to be sufficiently good without showing cause, but, to expedite the matter, we tell you that it was ordained that all those who were of the quarrel of the Earl of Lancaster should be disinherited and that their lands should be seized into the King's hand; and we tell you that one J. Giffard, father of this same Margery whom we vouch, was of the same quarrel (and at that time was seised of this land), for which reason his lands were seized into the hand of King Edward, the father, &c. And afterwards in the time of the present King it was ordained by Statute that all those persons and their heirs should be restored; and by reason of that ordinance, the said Margery, as heir of the said John Giffard, sued to the King and had

Thorpe*. These are two causes; wherefore hold you to one.—And to this the COURT agreed.—And Stouford did hold to one, that is to say, to the confirmation made to the King.—R. Thorpe. Sir, you see clearly how the law compels him in this case to show a cause for his voucher, in which case he ought to show a cause such that I can have an answer to it; and now he has shown his cause by means of a deed which was made while the tenements were in a seisin which we cannot traverse. Besides, he does not show the deed of which he speaks in order to have this voucher as assignee, whereas the law is such that one who has to vouch as assignee must show both the deeds. Besides, the deed that you have produced, that is to say, the King's charter, proves that at the time at which the gift was made to you the King was seised by virtue of a cause other than the deed of Margery, and so this warranty of which you speak, according to the supposition of the charter, is of no avail; judgment, &c.—Stouford. These are several pleas; wherefore hold you to one.—R. Thorpe. They occur naturally in law, wherefore we should have them, though there were twenty of them, and one of them we take upon your own count; wherefore, &c.—Stouford. As to the first point, when the restitution was ordained, the freehold immediately became Margery's, for when any one has a right to any one's claim of freehold it shall be adjudged to be his. And when she executed such a deed as she did in the King's favour that is equivalent to a feoffment. And, as to the second point, we tell you that such deeds made in the King's favour ought legally to remain in his possession. And, as to the third point, the charter and that which is Neither by the ordinance alone, nor by suit, could she be restored, unless she had corporal restitution out of the King's hand, for, if the King had aliened to another before suit, it would have been necessary to have had a writ to have the same tenements re-seized into the King's hand, and that livery of the tenements should have been afterwards made to the party; and by your own charter we cannot understand anything else but that the King had the tenements by some course other than the deed of Margery; therefore your cause is insufficient; therefore answer.—Stouford traversed the ancestor's seisin.¹—And the other side said the contrary.

A.D. 1340 in the time of the present King those who were of the quarrel of the Earl of Lancaster and their heirs were restored to their inheritance, and, after that restoration by statute, this Margaret, cousin and heir of John Giffard, granted and confirmed these tenements to the King, and to his heirs, and to his assigns. Afterwards, this same Margaret released the tenements to us with warranty, by this deed, while they were in our seisin. (But he did not show the deed granting and confirming the tenements to the King.) Thus we vouch Margaret.—Thorpe. You show two causes; therefore, hold to one.—And they were compelled to do so.—And they held to this that they vouched as assignees.—Thorpe. Put the matter with certainty whether Margaret was seised by means of the restoration given by the statute or not, because if you say that she was seised and enfeoffed the King, then we can have a counter-plea by the Statute¹ but otherwise not.—Stouford. Even though she might not have been seised by corporal possession, yet by the operation of the statute the King was ousted from the fee and right of the freehold, and so the estate which he had afterwards was by the confirmation.—SCHARSHULLE. In virtue of that estate he could not have had assise.—Thorpe. You shall not be admitted to say that the King had the tenements by Margaret's deed, because the charter in virtue of which you have prayed aid of the King proves that the King had the tenements through the forfeiture of John Maltravers.—Stouford. Even though the King had them through the forfeiture of John Maltravers, nevertheless, when restoration was made by statute, all the mesne estates were defeated.—Thorpe. By general words of the statute the King's estate, which he had by another title, was not defeated. And you do not show that you have restoration by process sued against the King; and you cannot vouch as assignee of the King, if the King's estate was not through this person, &c.—Besides, you do not show the deed [of confirmation made] to the King.—Stouford. The deed which was made in the King's favour ought never to be delivered to any other, but will remain with him. Besides, you counter-plead our voucher for divers causes; therefore, hold to one.—SCHARSHULLE. He takes the whole on the matter which you have given him; therefore, &c.—Pole. One John Salwey, as heir of John Giffard, had restoration.—Stouford. Margaret was found to be heir by Diem clausit extremum, and the King held her to be heir when he accepted the confirmation.—SCHARSHULLE. Inquest of office is not proved, and you do not show that

And we tell you that by the former writ we demanded four acres and a half of land, whereof these three acres now in demand are parcel, by virtue of a gift made to our father and our mother, whereupon the tenant came, and as to one acre and a half he could not deny the gift, and as to the three acres he traversed the gift, whereupon at that time we admitted with him that with regard to that portion the gift was different, wherefore as to those three acres our writ abated, and now we have resuscitated this writ in order to demand the same three acres of land; wherefore, &c.—SCHARDELOWE. Now it seems that he shall have the view, for this writ now brought is on a title other than that on which the first writ was brought; and as to what you say that these are the same tenements, he cannot know that except by view, for without view he cannot know whether they are the same tenements as those comprised in the first record or others.—*W. A.D. 1340. § In a Formedon in the Descender the tenant demanded view.
 View. —Thorpe. Heretofore we brought a writ against you in respect of these tenements and of others, upon which you had view and said that two acres were not given as the writ supposed, and as to the residue you confessed our action, wherefore, we recovered parcel through your confession, and with respect to the residue we could not deny your allegation; and in respect of that parcel in respect of which our writ then abated, we now bring this writ; judgment whether you ought to have view. — Stouford. You prove that this writ is brought in respect of a different quantity and on another title, and in that case we cannot know whether these tenements are parcel of the tenements previously demanded except by view.—Thorpe. So you might say even though the writs agreed in the quantity of the demand.—Afterwards view was granted by judgment.

Trespass. (100.) § One John brought his writ against three persons in order that they might be summoned to answer to him, &c., as tenants of certain tenements, &c.—And the writ purported that they and the tenants of the same tenements had made and repaired the walls on the shores of the sea within certain bounds, and that the plaintiff, through default in the repair of the said walls, had lost thirty acres of land by overflow of water from the sea, &c. And the plaintiff's writ purported that there was a title by prescription.—And on the first day one came and would have pleaded, and he was not admitted to do so in the absence of the others.

Execution of Statute Merchant. (101.) § Amice Polin sued execution of a Statute Merchant against John de Chiltern, on his own recognisance, and was seised.—Afterwards John sued a writ to cause Amice to come to answer wherefore she had sued execution contrary to her deed.—She came.—John showed an indenture which purported that if he paid twenty marks on a certain day, and if he caused one Alice to be made a nun within a certain time, and found sustenance for her in the meantime, then the Statute Merchant should be held for null. And he produced an acquittance for the twenty marks, and said that

And as to the rest (it was said on behalf of Amice) Alice has her sustenance at our cost and not at yours. —Thorpe. You cannot have two issues, for, if one be found in your favour, you have attained your purpose, and, if the other be found against you, we cannot have the advantage of it, nor you the penalty.—Grene. It is necessary for you to maintain both, and, therefore, it is necessary that we should have an answer to both, for otherwise the COURT would hold as not denied by us that one of the two points on which issue is not taken. — SCHARSHULLE (JUSTICE). If all the conditions had been in one county, the whole matter could have been tried by one inquest; not so when they are in different counties.—Grene. If we had produced different acquittances for the twenty marks, you would have had to answer as to them all.—Thorpe. What you say is true; but the issue would be taken only on one, because one found in your favour is sufficient, and you can choose that which is the most to your advantage.

Quare
impedit.

(105.) § Henry, Earl of Derby, brought a Quare impedit against the Master of the Hall of Merton, of Oxford.—On the day that the parties had in Court the General Attorney of the Earl disavowed the suit, and the Master prayed, since he had not come into Court upon process, that the Justices would do according to law, and said that he did not know of the suit except by the summons, so that the deceit was not in him, if any there were.—Afterwards a writ came out of the Chancery to cause the writ of Quare impedit to come into the Chancery.—Thorpe. When process is commenced before you, you ought not to send writ or record until the processes be terminated by judgment.—Nevertheless the writ was sent into the Chancery, and the Master prayed that this matter might be entered on the roll.—So it was.—In this case it would be a great mischief to the Master in case he were disturbed from his presentation by such a writ.

A.D. 1340. John, whom you assert to have had a fee tail, continued that estate and died without issue, and, after his death, we, as cousin and heir of Gerard the donor, entered, and were seised, until, &c.—Thomas and Emma. Now we demand judgment, since you make title as heir of Gerard, whether, in opposition to his release, you ought by virtue of such title to have assise.—The Plaintiff said that it was not the deed of his ancestor.—The other side said the contrary.—Afterwards, at another day, the husband made default. The wife was admitted, and pleaded the same plea to the assise, and, as to the residue, she pleaded in bar on the ground that Gerard Del Ile, uncle of the plaintiff, whose heir he is, acknowledged, by fine, the tenements to be the right of John Del Ile by his gift, to hold to John and Maud, and to the heirs of John, whose estate Emma had, and demanded judgment whether, in opposition to the fine by which the plaintiff's ancestor disinherited him and his heirs, he who is heir ought to have assise.—Richard. Willoughby arraigned.

(109.) § R. Willoughby was arraigned before PARNING, SADINGTON, and SCOT, JUSTICES for this purpose; and he came in custody of mace-bearers. — PARNING said to him that the King, trusting in the highest degree in his loyalty and discretion, made him his Lieutenant in the King's own Court, when the King went over sea, and that he had then perverted and sold the laws as if they had been oxen or cows, whereof, by clamour of the people about the same, matter was shown to the King. Therefore, said PARNING, you shall hear our Commission, and what shall be said to you. — And when the Commission of Oyer and Terminer, &c., was read, Willoughby said that he was Chief in the highest Court of the land, wherefore they ought not, in a lower Court, to take cognisance of trespass done there. — PARNING. You say truly as to error in such a matter; but if you have trespassed against the King you shall answer where he pleases. — Willoughby. The King will not be admitted without having been informed by indictment or by suit of a party with pledges to prosecute. — PARNING. He is informed by the clamour of the people. — Willoughby had counsel, by assignment of the COURT. — And several bills were read which were not affirmed by pledges, to which there was no suit. And amongst others the commonalty of the county of Nottingham complained that, whereas many were indicted there for breach of the forest laws, of whom some were fined to the King half a mark and some 10s., Willoughby took of some 10 marks and of

They remained a long time in custody, and had purchased their deliverance ; wherefore, with the consent of SCROPE, who was then Chief Justice, they were fined, because otherwise the King would not have had anything. And he said, moreover, that he did not take anything on that account.—Another bill by the commonalty of the county of Lancaster was to the effect that, whereas he procured people to be indicted, and said first to the indictors that no deliverance should be made without them, yet he took beasts and other gifts for deliverance of the persons indicted by others who were insufficient. — PARNING. In such case an inquest should have been taken by the indictors and others. — Willoughby. The Sheriff is commanded to make a good jury come ; wherefore the affair must be conducted in that way. — PARNING. Certainly, if the indictors be not there, it is not well for the King.—Willoughby. It is error then, and not malice on the part of the Justice.—Thorpe. You cannot say that, for you did the reverse at that time between others.—Willoughby. It is the custom for the Justice to go to the indictors, to encourage and inform them ; and as to the presentation of gifts, I took nothing.—Another bill was at the suit of a party, namely, Laurence de Lodelowe, knight, for that Willoughby took of him 10 marks to reverse a judgment, and took from another 20 marks to affirm it, and did affirm it. And he assigned the receipt in the suburb of London, and the judgment was to have been reversed in Middlesex.—And exception was taken to the bill for that they could not take cognisance of trespass committed in another county.—PARNING. Part was committed in one county and part in another ; wherefore he cannot have any other bill nor before any other persons. — Willoughby. He should then have a writ of trespass on his case.—And afterwards Willoughby threw himself on the King's mercy, because he would not plead with

² From T. alone. The case is probably that of which there is a record in the Placita de Banco, Hilary, 15 Edw. III., R^o. 22. It there appears that an assise was brought by John, son of John Elys, of Staines, against Thomas le Botiler, Joan, daughter of John

Elys of Staines, and Katharine, Juliana, and Agnes, her sisters. The Assise found that all those named in the writ had disseized vi et armis. The judgment was that John should recover seisin and damages and that Thomas should be taken, but that the four others should not be taken, because under age.

Whereas he supposes [by his count] that we hold for term of life by lease from his father, he himself confirmed our estate, by this deed, to hold for our life, and granted that our heirs and executors should hold for one year beyond; judgment of the writ.—Thorpe. The deed proves that he has no higher estate than a term for life; for a term of years, which is a lower estate, cannot vest in him who is previously seised of a freehold, and he cannot make an assignee of that estate; and even though the reversion expectant upon a term [of years] be granted after the death of a tenant of the freehold, that grant does not oust the feoffor from a writ of Waste, nor even, perhaps, if the reversion were granted to another for term of life.—And the COURT was of opinion that the writ is good, whether an estate for a term be saved or not.—Pole. As to one ox-stall there is none; ready, &c. And as to the residue there is no waste.—And the COURT caused it to be entered as to the whole that there was no waste committed, because there cannot be any issue on the averment that there is no ox-stall, because, even though the finding might be for the plaintiff, it would be necessary to enquire over as to the waste.

"dendo pretii quadraginta librarum, et unam boveriam pretii viginti librarum." It was pleaded that after the said demise "idem Johannes, pater, &c. per quoddam scriptum suum voluit et concessit pro se et heredibus suis et suis assignatis quod ipse Petrus teneret mesuagium prædictum et totam terram vocatam Lefdilond ad terminum vite ipsius Petri, et, post decessum ejusdem Petri, cui-cunque ipse Petrus tenementa prædicta in vita sua assignare seu legare per unum annum post ejus mortem tenenda voluerit." The "scriptum" was produced. It was further pleaded that neither at the time of the demise nor since was there "aliqua boveria in

"mesuagio prædicto in qua aliquid quod vastum fieri potuit," and as to the "grangia" (or barn) that it was "absque aliqua deterioratione," and so that the defendant had not committed any waste. Issue was joined thereon. There was an award of Venire, and the jury were to view the tenements. The jury found waste in the barn, and damages forty shillings, but "nolum wastum in prædicta boveria." Judgment was given for the plaintiff to recover seisin "de prædicta grangia vastata . . . et damna sua in triplo, quæ in triplo attingunt ad sex libras," and as to the barn Peter was in mercy, but as to the ox-stall (boveria) John, son of John, was in mercy for his false claim.

(6.) § Diem clausit extremum for the wife of John Thorpe.—It was found that the lady held part of the lands jointly with her husband, who is now dead, for the term of her life. And these lands were delivered to her without taking security from her as to her marriage,¹ because she was not a King's widow by reason of those lands. — And in the Chancery it is the usage, when a woman is endowed of a great inheritance holden of the King, that she shall come in her own person into Court and give security as to her marriage, before she has her dower; and, if the inheritance be small, the Escheator shall take security when he delivers the dower to her.

Thorpe brought against a knight and his wife.—They said, by evidence from the Exchequer, that the five fees, in respect of which he demands the attornment, were parcel of the honour of Huntingdon, which came into the King's hand through the forfeiture of R. Bruce, and that the King gave the honour to the Duke of Cornwall his son, &c., and so they held it of the Duke in right of the King.—And upon this the plea was pending for a year, because it touched the King, notwithstanding that they offered always to aver for Thorpe that the defendants held of his cognisor. — And afterwards, because what they stated did not prove the reverse of the averment, and also because nothing would be lost to the King through the averment, even though this should be tried between them, therefore Rokell, in accordance with an expression of opinion by the COURT, said that he held of the Duke and not of the cognisor as to parcel; and upon that they were at issue; and as to another parcel, he said

Statute
Merchant.

§ Executors, appearing by attorney, had execution on a Statute Merchant. Afterwards the debtor showed a release in Chancery, and had a writ to the Justices quod, vocatis partibus, &c. A writ issued to cause the executors to come, because attorneys could not plead in that case.

Debt.

(11.) § Debt, for a woman. — Pole. Her husband released by this deed. — Thorpe. At the time of the making thereof he was not her husband. — And the other side said the contrary. — And now comes the Inquest. — And note that although there was a date in the deed, which by the form of the plea was, as it were, admitted, still the Court charged the Inquest as to whether he was her husband at the time of the making thereof or not, and not whether he was so at the time of the date. — And it was found that he was not her husband. Therefore it was adjudged that she should recover the debt, and also her damages as laid in her count. — And so note that one will not recover more than one demands in this case.

⁸ From T. alone. The record of this case appears among the Placita de Banco, Hil., 15 Edw. III., R^o. 75. The action was brought by Emma, late wife of John de Chilton, against Richard, son of Hugh de Chilton, in respect of tenements in Little Chilton. Issue was joined at Durham as to whether Emma had been lawfully married, she having asserted that she was married at Welles, near Canterbury. The cause was removed into the Court of Common Pleas, because the issue could not be determined in the Court of the Liberty of Durham. The record and process of the Durham Court having been sent into the Court of Common Pleas, Emma said as before. Thereupon the Archbishop of Canterbury was directed to enquire as to the truth and make a return on a day given. "Ad quem diem . . . prædicta Emma profert hic literas prædicti Archiepiscopi quæ testantur quod idem Archiepiscopus, con-vocatis coram eo omnibus con-vocandis de jure super contentis in brevi Regis ei inde directo, inquiri fecit veritatem, per quam inquisitionem invenit quod prædicti Johannes de Chilton et Emma ij Id. And on the Pluries summonneas being returned "late," the COURT granted to the defendant that the Sequatur suo periculo should be entered. The same thing was agreed by the COURT where aid was prayed of one under age, where it was alleged that he was of full age, &c.

It there appears that a Scire facias on a fine was brought by John, son of Odo, against one John de Acton. The fine was levied in the year 16 Edw. I., between one John de Acton the younger, plaintiff, and Margaret de Acton, deforciant, and was sur done, grant, et render, John granting back to Margaret for her life, with reversion to John in tail, remainder to his brother Odo in tail, and remainder to the right heirs of Margaret.

If you alleged non-tenure of the whole, he would have execution; therefore you must answer as to the residue. And HERLE would not abate a writ of this nature for non-tenure; and we have spoken to all the JUSTICES on this point, and we are agreed that this does not abate the writ;¹ therefore, by judgment, answer as to the residue. — Pole. He sues execution upon a fine by which the land was limited to his father, to hold to him and the heirs of his body, &c.; we tell you that his father was seised, and so the entail was executed by the fine; judgment of the writ. — Thorpe. And we demand judgment, since the seisin does not oust us from this suit, and we pray execution. — Thorpe. Suppose land be rendered by fine to me for term of life, and after my death to Stouford and the heirs of his body, and suppose the fine was not ever executed in me, and Stouford be subsequently seised by execution of the fine, if his issue cannot afterwards have execution, they are without action, for a Formedon does not serve them, because the tenant for life was not seised. — Blaik. It does; the issue will have a good writ in the Descender, supposing the gift to have been immediate to their father. — This was denied. — Stouford. It has always been settled law that it is a good answer in a Scire facias that the fine was executed, if the party would not answer otherwise gratis.—Afterwards, in Easter term, Pole said:—His father entered and was seised; judgment of the writ; for in that case he will have a writ in the Descender, though a writ in the Remainder is abatable.—Thorpe. The issue is, as it were, purchaser; for if under age he would be admitted; judgment whether you can on that ground abate the writ, for, where an entail in remainder vests by fine, the words are that the tenements shall remain to such an one and the heirs of his body, so that the heirs are as much purchasers as the ancestor is; and the issue, by judgment, has had execution in a case where his father was seised.—Scot. The party then waived his exception gratis. And, if you were seised, would not your entry be by your father? And you would be in wardship, because your ancestor was seised and you were under age. And it is more reasonable that you should be put to delay, where the entail was executed, than that he should be ousted from voucher and other advantages.—Thorpe. The entail and the action are admitted, and he can bar here as well upon this writ as upon any other, if he have matter so to do; and it is unreasonable that the deed of our ancestor, who had only by entail, should be prejudicial to us.—Afterwards, in Trinity term, Stouford said:—Our plea is always to the writ, which purports that the land ought to remain to him as heir of his father, by the fine, whereas he has admitted that his father was seised; for we understand that through his admission we shall have the same advantage as if we had been at issue, and by the verdict the finding had been against him.—Blaik. What writ should he have?—Stouford. Formedon in the Descender.—Blaik. Then will you say nothing else to this Scire facias? And one has seen the writ maintained in this Court, in a like case.—Stouford. Never by judgment, where the entail had been executed.—Thorpe. Of an annuity recovered, and of a way, one may have execution more than once, and yet one can here have another recovery. —SCARDEBURGH. If land be rendered in fee simple, only one execution shall be had; why more than one of land entailed? —Thorpe. Because the issue in tail commences higher than the seisin of his ancestor, and always takes an action from the entail. —SCOT. You take your exception in a way which may now be regarded from different points of view; one is that the Scire facias does not lie because his father was seised and so the entail was executed, for which reason a Scire facias cannot serve, and from that point of view your plea is to the action; another is that his father was seised according to the form [of the gift], and the Scire facias purports that the land is to remain, whereas it ought to purport that the land is to descend, and from that point of view your plea is only to abate the writ.—Pole. Whether you can regard it in one way or the other, if by the manner of admission the writ is false, you will abate it. —SCOT. Take your plea with certainty, or we will take it in the strongest sense, and that is to the action, and then you will have no other answer afterwards. —Blaik would have taken the exception that the writ should be in the Descender and not in the Remainder; and it was said that he should not be admitted to this, because his first plea went generally to oust the party from execution. Therefore they took another plea to the action, because they did not dare to abide judgment on the first plea; and he alleged exchanges, partly in demesne and partly in reversion descended from his father who was party to the exchanges. —Thorpe. As to what was alleged to have descended to him in demesne, and of which it was alleged that he was seised, he never had anything; ready, &c.; and as to that in reversion, we have nothing, but we disclaim in the reversion; judgment whether of a Fine.

§ The transcript of a fine was caused to come into the King's Bench, upon which fine one John, son and heir of Odo, sued a Scire facias against the tenant, who came and said by Blak :— This record is caused to come at the suit of one Odo, and not at your suit, wherefore we have no need to answer to this writ which is sued by you. — Thorpe. The person at whose suit the transcript came into this Court was our ancestor, and he is dead, and through his death the suing of execution is given to us by law. — Nevertheless the party who was tenant was not put to answer to his suit. — Therefore it will be necessary for him to sue to cause another transcript to come.

and was sent into the King's Bench by reason of error, at the suit of John and his wife. And the record was sewed to the writ by virtue of which it came into the Chancery.—Geoffrey de Staunton sued another writ, and caused the record to come into the King's Bench in order to have execution.—Geoffrey de Staunton was warned to hear the errors, and he took exception to the writ for that there were two records, and one could not know upon which it issued.—And note that the writ by which the record was sued to allege the errors was of later date by two days than the other writ by which the record came to have execution. And it was said that the last was only a transcript, because the Justices could not record twice ; but because they both agreed, it appeared to the COURT that it was all one record. And the point was touched upon, that one could not know by the date of the writs which record was first made, but this was not done with any spirit.—R. Thorpe assigned the errors :—the first was that when the wife, having been admitted, vouched her husband, and shewed cause (viz., for that her husband acknowledged by fine the tenements to be the right of Thomas Cranthorne as those which Thomas had of his gift, and Thomas rendered back to her husband and her, and so she vouched her husband as assignee of Thomas), thereupon the demandant was admitted to aver that Thomas never had anything, though he did not deny the sole seisin of the husband before the fine, nor the joint tenancy of the husband and his wife, which could only be understood to be by the fine. The second error :—We offered to aver that Thomas was seised, and they fore-judged us of the averment because they said that we refused it before, whereas in the record you will find that we were always ready ; for the words of the record are “and if it appear to the Court,” &c. The third error :—when it appeared to the Court that the averment should be refused, they awarded seisin, whereas they

Et fust dit qe le darcine nest fors transcript, pur ceo qe les Justices ne poaint ij. foitz recorder; mes pur ceo qil acorderent bien sembloit a COURT qe cest tout un record. Et fust touche qe homme ne poet saver par la date de brefs quel record fust primes fait, mes nient vyvant, &c.—*R. ought to have put us to give another answer. The fourth error:—when it appeared to the Court that the averment was admissible, we were ready to accept it, and they did not permit us, though this was only upon a dilatory plea, but they awarded seisin; in that respect they erred.—Pole. The judgment was given with the assent of Parliament; wherefore in a lower Court you can not escape from or redress error.—This objection was not allowed, because the judgment was not given in Parliament.—W. Thorpe answered to the error first assigned, and said:—When the wife was compelled to shew cause for her voucher, the cause was traversable, wherefore the judgment as to that was good. And as to the protestation which was entered on the record, the protestation was contrary to law; wherefore that cannot be a cause of error. And as to the third error,—that seisin was awarded whereas he ought to have been put to give another answer over—this is not law, except in the case of the Statute where the voucher is counterpleaded by averment which is given by Statute,¹ but this counterplea was at common law. And as to the fourth error, the judgment was good, for he took his delays and did abide judgment whether the averment was admissible or not.—Afterwards in Trinity term in the 16th year, Pole rehearsed, and said:—The writ issued without warrant, for the first record which came to you was sued by the demandant, to have execution, and when the other came afterwards, to assign error, it was only a transcript and not a record which could warrant Scire facias.—R. Thorpe. The two writs by which the two records came were returnable at one day; and it cannot be known, although one be of earlier date than the other, by virtue of which of the writs the Justice made the record, and therefore the Court here has entered only one record by force of

And suppose that there was no record but that which came for the purpose of having execution, that would be a warrant for this Scire facias; and this I prove to you; for if the demandant sued execution, the Court, although without the party, would delay awarding execution, and would not particularly remark the record for that cause of arrest.—W. Thorpe. But the judgment will not be reversed without a writ from the Chancery to give warrant to the Court in such case.—Stouford said he had often seen a Scire facias ad audiendum errores issue against the party, although the record did not come by reason of error, and without any other warrant from the Chancery.—W. Thorpe. I do not think so; and (always saving this point for us) as to the errors, we tell you first that whereas they say that the sole seisin of the husband before the marriage was the cause of the voucher, that could not be the cause of voucher without the fine, which fine he who uses it must always maintain as good; and by the averment that Thomas, who was supposed to have rendered, had nothing, the fine, which was the principal cause of the voucher, was avoided, for by the intermediate possession, which was supposed in Thomas by the fine, she made the supposed conveyance of the tenancy to herself; wherefore it is sufficient to destroy that.—PARNING. Your writ made her tenant, which can only be understood as by the fine, since you do not show any other title in her; and if she had not been named, your writ would have abated by the fine; then to aver that he who rendered had nothing was not an issue.—W. Thorpe. It is not necessary for me to show how a tenant against whom I bring a writ has come into possession; but even if my writ had been abated by the fine because the wife was not named in the writ, yet upon another writ I should have been admitted, if the tenants had vouched, to aver that the vouchee, who was supposed to have rendered by the fine, never had anything, &c.—Stouford said, as to the other error, that when the Court ousted him from the voucher and awarded seisin it ousted him, without answer, from his land.—PARNING. I never heard that, although the party tendered a peremptory averment and the tenant demanded judgment whether the averment was admissible, the Court gave judgment without first asking him whether he would plead anything else.—And then there was touched the point that the judgment according to the new Statute¹ was agreed to in Parliament, and that it was there commanded to the Justices to make such a judgment, wherefore, if they had not given such a judgment as they gave, it would have been a clear error.—Stouford. Judgment was given only in the Common Bench, and that which was done there can be redressed here, and what was agreed to in Council in the absence of the party can not be binding. — And note that SCARBURGH said (and PARNING, Thorpe, and many others agreed to it) that, if voucher be counterpleaded, by Statute,² by averment, and the tenant will not answer over gratis, but is adjourned on his abiding judgment whether the averment be admissible or not, then, if the averment be admissible he will lose the land.—PARNING. If a woman were disseised by a man and she released to him with warranty, or, e contra, if the man were ousted by the woman and had warranty, and either of them were counterpleaded, he would have warranty from the other; then it is unreasonable that by marriage either of them should lose that advantage.—Thorpe. They will lose it; for after marriage neither shall have voucher of the other without a cause, which cause may be traversed; but before marriage the voucher would be good if it

Possibility of feoffment, though without actual feoffment, gives voucher, and this is proved by the Statute¹ which gives the averment that the vouchee, &c., never had anything, &c.—Thorpe. Sole seisin of the husband before the coverture never gave a cause for the wife to vouch him; and, if an assignee vouch, it is a good answer that he never had anything by the assignment.—Quære post.

Error.

§ John de Staunton and Amy his wife caused a record to come out of the Common Bench into the King's Bench for the assignment of errors, where the record of the writ that Geoffrey de Staunton brought against the said John and Amy showed how Amy was admitted to defend her right and vouched John, her husband, and showed, as the cause of her voucher, that John, her husband, was sometime solely seised and enfeoffed Thomas de Cranthorn, between which Thomas and the said John and Amy a fine was levied, whereby John [acknowledged] the tenements, &c. to be the right of Thomas as those which Thomas had of his gift, for which acknowledgment Thomas granted and rendered to John and to Amy, &c., and so, as assignee of Thomas, she vouched John her husband. Geoffrey offered to aver that Thomas never had anything, which averment was counterpleaded by virtue of the fine, and thereupon the parties were adjourned. Afterwards by decision of Parliament a writ was sent into the Common Bench to proceed to judgment for the demandant, and therefore judgment was given for him on the ground of the refusal of the averment.—Afterwards in the King's Bench it was alleged that the Court below had erred in giving judgment for the demandant when in fact the tenant did not refuse the averment except conditionally, that is, by saying that in case it should appear to the Court that the averment was admissible, he was ready to say sufficient. Another error assigned was that they had given judgment that the demandant should recover, whereas on counterplea of voucher the judgment should be that the tenant answer over and be ousted from his voucher. Another error assigned was in that, whereas an averment is not

We are strangers to the fine, and shall not therefore be ousted from the averment. — Stouford. Whether Thomas was seised or not, his seisin was not the cause of the voucher, but the sole seisin of the husband was ; but as to the cause of the warranty, that would come from the seisin of Thomas and his render, but the cause which gives the warranty shall never be tried between the demandant and the tenant. — Thorpe. It shall be in a case in which the cause of the warranty has to be shown in the voucher, as, for instance, in case you vouch as assignee, the demandant shall say that you have nothing by the assignment.—B. Thorpe. You supposed the wife to be tenant by your writ, which tenancy we took in a certain manner, that is to say, by the fine, whereas, if you had omitted the wife from the writ, she would have abated your writ without this that you would have had any answer as to this point ; no more shall you have one in this case. Besides, the fine is good and executory. Even though Thomas never was seised, still the fine is good. — Thorpe. Even though the fine might have abated the writ for the non-naming of the wife, that proves nothing as to this matter, for the writ will also abate by reason of a charter, at common law. And we pray that the judgment be affirmed.

² The replication, according to the record, was that the Abbot did not hold the tenements as the free alms of the church.

A.D. 1340-1. Wardship. (20.) § Henry, Earl of Lancaster, brought a writ of Wardship against Eleanor, Countess of Ormond, and demanded the wardship of James, son and heir of James le Botiler, and counted that James, the father of the infant, held of him certain tenements by knight-service and died in his homage. — Blaik. Our Lord the King, by this deed, delivered the infant to this Eleanor, who is the infant's mother, to keep and sustain until of full age, taking, year by year, from such a Sheriff, 110 marks. (And the deed purported that the infant was in the wardship of the King.) And we have nothing except at the King's will; judgment whether this writ lies against us.¹ — Fencotes. Your exception is insufficient when you say that you have now nothing in the wardship except &c., without answering as to the tenancy on the day on which the writ was brought. — Blaik. Even though we had the wardship on the day on which the writ was brought, yet, if the King have seized it since, our seisin is defeated. — Thorpe. We will aver that you were tenant of the wardship on the day on which the writ was brought. Besides, you have a day by prece partium; wherefore you shall not be admitted to allege non-granted them back to Thomas and Sibilla for her life, to hold of the Abbot and his successors and their church of St. Kevern, the reversion being to the Abbot and the said church. The Abbot concluded by praying judgment whether the demandant could be admitted to say that the tenements were not the free alms of the said church. After adjournments the demandant failed to appear, and judgment was given for the Abbot.

¹ The plea, according to the record was (without admitting that the infant's father held of the Earl of Lancaster) that the father held of the King certain lands in capite by knight-service, that after his death the King seized the wardship of the heir, and delivered the heir to the Countess of Ormond to keep and support until of full age, "vel quousque idem dominus Rex aliud inde duxerit ordinandum." Afterwards the King granted by Letters Patent (recited in the plea), 110 marks per annum to the Countess until the full age of the infant "vel quousque, &c." She therefore prayed judgment whether, inasmuch as she had nothing in the wardship except the sustenance and nurture of the heir, the Earl ought to be answered as to this writ.

You plead one plea in fact [and another in law] inasmuch as you allege the prece partium; wherefore hold to one.¹—Thorpe. If you will not take issue on this plea which lies in fact, then that shall be held as not denied by you; then both fall in law.²—R. Thorpe. The words of a prece partium on a writ of Wardship are, “between such an one demandant and such an one,” without the use of the word “tenant” or “deforciant.” Besides, the writ lies against any occupant, as does a Quare impedit against any disturber; therefore prece partium cannot affirm tenancy in her person.

Wardship. § Wardship, against the Countess of Ormond.—Derworthy. We tell you that the King committed the nurture of the infant to us to hold at his pleasure, (and then Derworthy recited that by his patent, which is here, as above) and granted us 100*l.* for the sustentance of the infant; so the King is seised; judgment whether the writ lies against us.—Thorpe. That is tantamount to saying that she is not tenant to that intent, although the exception refers to the day of the purchase of the writ. Besides, we tell you that she has taken a prece partium with us, affirming the tenancy; judgment whether to the exception of non-tenure, &c.—HILARY. As to the first point, although the King has become possessed of the wardship, pending the writ, this abates the writ. As to the prece partium, that does not affirm the tenancy on this writ, as it

¹ The words attributed to “Ham” represent the rejoinder as given in the record. It was that the Earl’s pleading was double—firstly, in saying that the Countess did not allege non-tenure on the day of the purchase of the writ, which matter lies in fact and is to be proved by verdict of the jury—and, secondly, in saying that she ought not to be admitted to disclaim after prece partium, which matter lies in law and in the discretion of the Justices. Letters Patent (dated previously to the purchase of the writ) by which the King granted a sum in addition to the 110 marks per annum for the support of the infant were here produced.

² The words attributed to Thorpe appear to represent the surrejoinder in the record. It was that, as the Countess had already affirmed the writ to be good by taking a day prece partium, she could not be admitted to quash it by her allegations. Judgment was prayed for the Earl. There were several adjournments, but no judgment appears on the roll.

(21.) § Novel Disseisin.—The tenant pleaded in bar an acknowledgment of the right made by B., the plaintiff's ancestor, by fine levied to one, A., as that which A. had of his gift, alleging that the tenant had A.'s estate; judgment whether assise, &c.—And note that, by the judgment of the COURT, this was a good bar.—Thorpe. We say that our father gave the tenements to that B., to hold to him and the heirs of his body, &c., saving the reversion, &c.; and we tell you that B. continued that estate, and died seised without heirs of his body; wherefore we entered as upon our reversion, and were seised until we were disseised by you.—Pole. To aver the tenancy is in avoidance of the fine to which your ancestor was party, and supposes that he divested himself.—Thorpe. By my seisin I am ousted from a Formedon in the Reverter; besides, if you were to sue execution against me upon the fine, and I were tenant, I should disturb you; for the same reason I shall have the assise in respect of the possession which I had.

² From T. alone; but see above, No. 107, of Michaelmas Term, 14 Edw. III. There does not seem to be any doubt that this is the case which appears as 14 Li. Ass., 18. There is, however, both in L. and in Harl. 741, a transcript of a record to which has been placed in the margin of Harl. the note "14

"Ass. 18." This record does not agree with the Li. Ass. either in respect of the names of the parties as given in the Michaelmas report of the case, or in respect of some of the other details, as stated in both reports, and was perhaps transcribed in mistake.

¹ From T. alone, but compared with the record Placita de Banco, Hil., 15 Edw. III., R^o. 254 d. It there appears that the action was brought by Agnes, late wife of William de Batheleye, against William, son of John, son of Henry de Suthmuskam. The plea was that the tenant previously brought a writ of Sur cui in vita against William, son of William de Batheleye and Katharine his wife, and Robert, son of William de Batheleye, in respect of the tenements whereof dower was prayed, into which the three had not entry but after the demise which Henry de Suthmuskam (formerly husband of Agnes, daughter of Matilda Pacy, grandmother of the aforesaid William, son of John, whose heir he is), made to Hugh de Codyngton; that upon this writ of Sur cui in vita William, son of John, recovered his seisin upon default of the three tenants named therein; and that the estate which William de Batheleye, the demandant's husband, had was mesne between the demise to Hugh and the judgment, and was altogether annulled by the judgment. In her replication the demandant Agnes prayed that William, son of John, the tenant "ostendat jus secundum formam prioris brevis." In his rejoinder William, the tenant, said that Agnes, the grandmother, was seised, that the right descended from her to John, her son and heir, and from John to William, son of John, who was seised through the recovery aforesaid. In her sur-rejoinder the demandant traversed the demise to Hugh supposed in the writ of Sur cui in vita, and issue was joined thereon.

A.D. 1840-1. Robert had prosecuted a plea in respect [of the services] of divers chanters which he demanded against the Prior, for certain tenements in such a vill, to perform chantings in his chapel of Hull Deverel.—Pole. The King's count proves that the plea was not prosecuted in respect of the Prior's lay fee, for the chantings, according to that which is supposed by the count, shall be the fee and the right of Robert and not the lay fee of the Prior, and so this count is not warranted by the writ; judgment of the count.—Thorpe. We cannot have any other count on the matter, and so your plea is to the action. Besides, the charge which is demanded in respect of Robert's lay fee is accounted in law a demand of the Prior's lay fee, just as much as if the soil were in demand.—Pole. Robert has not prosecuted any plea in respect of the Prior's lay fee, as you have counted; ready, &c.—And the other side said the contrary, &c.

§ Attachment on Prohibition, which a Prior brought against B., for that he prosecuted a plea in Court Christian in respect of the lay fee of the Prior; and the plaintiff showed by his count how he sued for a certain rent to be taken from the freehold of the Prior for the support of four chaplains.—Pole. He has counted that he prosecuted the plea in respect of the lay fee of the Prior; but a rent issuing from the freehold of the Prior can not be a lay fee.—This exception was not allowed.—Pole. He did not prosecute any plea contrary to the Prohibition; ready, &c.—And the other side said the contrary.

It was stated in the count or declaration, according to the record, that Robert Balle had cited the Prior to appear before John de Kyrkeby, Official of the Bishop of Salisbury, "ad respondendum ipsi Roberto de laico feodo, videlicet de servitiis inveniendi quatuor capellanos divina de die in diem celebraturos in capella prædicti Roberti de Hulledeverel," the services being for certain messuages, &c., which Robert alleged that the Prior thereby held of him,

The Eyre is proclaimed at the Tower of London, and we have a writ to adjourn all the London pleas thither; therefore we can do nothing; but take you your suit in the Eyre.—Thorpe. When he comes before you, you can adjourn him.—HILLARY. We will do nothing.—And it was said that the Sheriff ought to return his writs in the Eyre, by force of the Proclamation, though they may be returnable in the Bench. Therefore Thorpe sued in the Eyre, and there had his writ.

If the demandant's husband died seised, then shall the woman who now prays to be admitted be charged with damages, and therefore there will be mischief to her if she be not admitted.—And because the demandant would not admit her gratis, a day was given.—Thorpe. Trespass.

(30.) § Trespass, which R. brought in respect of 25 stones of wool, in a canvas, taken and carried away.—Pole. We tell you that A., B., and C., were appointed by the King's commission to take a moiety of the wools then shorn¹ in the same county to the use of the King, and they, by this deed, made those against whom this writ is brought their deputies; and that in respect of which he complains was the moiety of these wools; therefore we took it by force of our warrant and delivered it to our principals, and they have accounted for it in the Exchequer; judgment whether tort, &c. And, as to the canvas and the coming with force and arms, Not Guilty.—Thorpe. We tell you that you took the moiety of our wools at another time; and, in addition to this, you took the 25 stones, as we complain; ready, &c.—Pole. We tell you that we took one sack and three stones of wool, as wool detained by others who had commission, and so we admit the taking of more than that in respect of which you complain.—Thorpe. In your justification you have spoken only of the commission by which you took the moiety of the wools, and that of which you have now spoken would be another justification, to which you shall not be admitted; judgment.—Pole. Justices of Dublin, against James, Earl of Ormond, and Master Luke de Loundres, for divers errors. And the errors were assigned. — Thorpe, for the King. Sir, you will find there, by the record, that the writ which was sent to the Justices, to cause the record to come before you, was returnable in this Court on the Quinzaine of Saint Michael last past, and the writ and the record were not sent to you during Michaelmas Term, but in this term ; therefore, it has come without warrant.—SCARDEBURGH. There is often hindrance in the passage, and we must therefore admit and accept it as the record. Besides, no record now remains with them, and so, if we would not allow this as the record, the record then would be rendered non-existent both here and there.—Therefore the exception was not allowed.—Thorpe. You will find that the writ is sent to Simon Fitz-Richard, without naming him "Justice," wherefore he had no warrant by this writ to send the record.—SCARDEBURGH. There occur afterwards in the writ the words "before you and your fellows, our Justices of "Dublin."—Therefore the exception was not allowed.—Thorpe. The record is caused to come at the suit of Luke, and the record proves that he did not claim anything in the advowson, and said that he was parson imparsonee, against whom a writ of this nature does not lie ; and this was held as not denied, and the King did not recover any damages ; therefore it seems that this

Besides, if we had a release made by the Earl against whom judgment was given, he would not be admitted to reverse the record on your suit; and, as to that loss of the church which you assign, that is a spiritual matter, in respect of which suit is given you in Court Christian, in case it should happen that the record should be reversed at the suit of the patron.—One error assigned was in that, whereas the parties had pleaded to judgment and had thereupon been adjourned, afterwards on another day, by reason of the default of the Earl, they respited judgment to divers days, and afterwards proceeded to judgment without distraining the Earl to hear his judgment; in that respect they erred, for it is not found by record that the Earl came into Court by distress.—Thorpe. Even if he did come by distress, the enrolment would be in the form “such an one was summoned to answer,” &c. Besides, they pleaded to judgment upon a peremptory exception, in which case, if the party make default afterwards, judgment shall be given immediately. Besides, this judgment was given against another, and by reason of another’s default, and not against you; wherefore it is not for you to assign error in that respect.—Then an error was assigned in that it is supposed in the record that the King supposes by the writ that it belongs to him, &c., by reason of the non-age of the heirs of J.

being in his hand, thereby supposing the non-age to be in the King's hand, which could not be.—Thorpe. The original writ is not here, and that to which you take exception was in the King's count, and, if the original writ be in those words, then will the exception be given as to the writ, and therefore it is necessary that the original writ be caused to come.—Then an error was assigned in that, whereas the King by reason of seignory, as by prerogative, made title to the wardship of the land to which the advowson is appendant, it was said that the seignory came into the hand of King John by escheat, to which there was no reply on behalf of the King, yet judgment was given for the King, and in that respect they erred.—Thorpe. The record proves that the King made title in that Peter de Bermyngham, the infant's father,¹ through whose non-age the King took his title, held in capite of the King the manor of Esker, and died seised of that manor, and of the manor of Knockgraffon, to which the advowson is appendant, and the King seized into his hands both manors, and during that time the church became vacant, in which case it belongs to the King to present, inasmuch as he was, at the time of the vacancy, seised of the manor to which the advowson is appendant, without having regard to the other manor, whether it was held in capite or not.—R. Thorpe. Since the King took his title from the non-age of this same James against whom he brought his writ, while by the King's title the freehold of the manor to which the advowson is appendant was affirmed in the person of James, it suffices for him to show that the King had no right to the wardship, &c.²

and coheiresses the King took his title. See Appendix.

Error.

§ Error, assigned by a parson in a Quare impedit which the King brought in Ireland, when he recovered against the patron. And the parson was named in the writ, and was amerced. And note that the record did not come into the King's Bench on the same day on which they were commanded to have the record there, but a long time afterwards; but they had a writ, notwithstanding that, to proceed. And he assigned error in that, whereas he claimed nothing but as parson, yet he was amerced, and several other errors.—Thorpe. The writ is not here; wherefore you have not the full record, so you can do nothing.—Scot. That is of no consequence, unless defect were assigned in the writ.—Thorpe. At the suit of him who claimed nothing error cannot be assigned except as regards the amercement; and, even though the judgment be reversed on that point, it will stand good as to the principal matter, for to the principal matter he is no more a party than if he had not been named in the writ.—Pole. It is for him who lost by the judgment to reverse it; now by the erroneous judgment he is out of his church; and so, if it were reversed, he could have his church again by process in Court Christian.—And to this the COURT agreed.—One error was assigned in the writ, that it was bad and unintelligible; and that could not be decided without the writ. Another error was assigned in that, whereas it was supposed on behalf of the King that one J. held of the King the manor of Esker, to which, &c., and the other said that Leinster was a great territory holden of King Henry in capite, whereof the manor was parcel, by one A., as mesne between the King and one W., who forfeited, on whose forfeiture the King entered and enfeoffed the infant's ancestor, and that the King had no right to have had the wardship unless it was holden as of his Crown, for in such case the King will enfeoff to hold as of other seignories, and his title in the Quare impedit was by reason of wardship,—yet notwithstanding, they awarded a writ to the Bishop; so they committed error.—Thorpe. The judgment was good; for whether the King was rightfully or wrongfully seised of the manor to which the advowson, &c., it belonged to him to present. Besides, it is not proved or pleaded that it is holden of any other than the King; for perchance the King gave the manor to be holden of him.—Pole. That is not so when others have seignory, but in such case he will always give it to be holden of the lords.—Scot. It is not so; for if the King enfeoff thus, "rendering to him, &c.," the seignory is his, and the lower seignories are extinguished by his possession, but they will have no rent seck; the contrary holds good in case of a lease.—Blaik. At Durham the Bishop came unto possession of land and made a feoffment, and the person who previously had a seignory was ousted from an avowry until the Bishop had revoked the charter; and so in the Quare impedit, it was no plea to say that the manor was not holden of the King; but in a writ of Wardship that could be pleaded.—And note that in this plea it was admitted to be law that he to whom the reversion belongs can reverse a judgment which passed against the tenant for term of life.—And another error was assigned in that, whereas they had a day at the Quinzaine of St. Michael, the words of the record were "process being continued until the Octaves of St. Martin," without giving a day to the parties, and thus process was discontinued. And another error assigned was that when they had pleaded to the country the defendant made default, and they were adjourned, and, on the day given, without making process on the default, they awarded a writ to the Bishop.—Thorpe. The first point is not error; for, since it was the same term, it was not necessary to give a day to the parties in any other way. And, as to the other point, the judgment was good; for when one has appeared and pleaded in a Quare impedit, on his default afterwards, a writ shall

And he prayed also a Supersedeas as to the damages; and this he could not have.—Quære: for the release was made before the entry, so that the release might prove the entry to be good or bad, on which the party could have Attaint.

A.D. 1340-1. one Peter de St. Laurence, Prior of Bermondsey, held of him the manor of Wydeford,¹ to which the advowson was appendant, which Prior was an alien, wherefore all his lands, fees, and advowsons, by reason of the war between our Lord the King and the French, were seized into the King's hand, and afterwards were given back to the Prior, he rendering a certain rent to the King; and afterwards the Prior, without the King's license, aliened the manor to Richard; wherefore the King seised the manor to which, &c., and so it belonged to the King to present.—Pole. If he do not hold of the King, although he be the King's farmer, the King ought not, on his alienation, to enter ; for if the King give to me land which is holden of you, I rendering to him a certain rent, the King cannot enter, although I alien ; now the apportum which is due to his chief beyond does not prove, although it was reserved to the King, that the manor is holden of the King ; for perchance the Prior did not previously hold of him to whom he paid the apportum.—Thorpe. Every perpetual Prior holds of his superior beyond, for the superior makes the Prior perpetual by his release, the Prior rendering to him a certain rent which must be rent service.—SAD-INGTON. It is not so ; and, even if it were so, still the rent is not issuing from land which he purchased.—Afterwards *Thorpe*¹ said : We abide your judgment on this point

¹ That which is here represented to have been said by Thorpe appears in the replication in the record in the following form : — Ivo de Grentemisiel was at one time seised of the manor of Wydeford, and held it of the King in capite. By his charter which was confirmed by Henry [I.], King of England, he gave the manor to the then Prior and Monks of Bermondsey, in exchange for the manor of Andredesbury, which one William Belmeis had given them. Afterwards the manor of Andredesbury came into the hand of Robert, Earl (or Count) of Mellent ("Com. Mell."), who, by his charter, gave it to the Prior and Monks in exchange for the manor of Wydeford, which the Earl held of the King in capite. Afterwards the manor of Wydeford came into the hand of Robert, Earl of Leicester, son of the Earl (or Count) of Mellent, who also held it of the King, and, by charter, gave it to the Prior and Monks in exchange for the manor of Andredesbury. So the manor of Wydeford, to which the advowson was appendant, was held continuously of the Kings of England for the time being, and of the existing King. The alienation being admitted and no license shown, judgment was, therefore, prayed for the King. Before the part relating to ancient demesne there is interposed, in the record, a rejoinder that the Prior held the manor "in capite de Comite Lan-

for the King. And we tell that one Ivo de Grentemisiel held the same manor in capite of King Henry, and gave it to R. Mellent,¹ Earl of Leicester, which Earl gave the manor to the Prior, for the manor of Andredesbury, and afterwards his son R. took back the exchange and gave the manor of Wydeford back again to the Prior and his successors, which gifts must be to hold of the King. And he said also that it is found in Domesday that this manor is Ancient Demesne, and holden of the King in capite; and we pray a writ to the Bishop.—R. Thorpe. We pray to be discharged from both pleas.—And he could not be.—Therefore he said that what was said on behalf of the King was only evidence; wherefore we will aver that the Prior did not hold the manor of the King.—Thorpe. Since you do not deny the record which we have alleged, you cannot say that the manor is not holden of the King, without stating a cause; and moreover this cannot be an issue that the Prior held of the King; but it is sufficient for the King if the manor be holden of the King.—R. Thorpe. All the land in England is holden of the King in chief. And the record which he alleges is before time of memory, and so it is the secret² of the King which does not lie in our cognisance, and to which we ought not by law to be put to answer; but if there be such a record, you ought to sue it for the King; for neither in an assise of Novel Disseisin nor in a Præcipe quod reddat, if it be alleged that tenements

A.D. 1340-1. are Ancient Demesne, will the Court do anything until it be informed whether there be such a record or not.—W. Thorpe. In the case of Novel Disseisin one is accustomed to try it by assise for the sake of the speedy remedy, unless the whole of a manor be alleged to be Ancient Demesne, and then it is necessary to try it by Domesday; and in a Præcipe quod reddat one can be at issue on that as well as on any other record.—Pole denied this.—HEPPESCOTES. In the case which W. Thorpe puts it is, perhaps, true that the issue between the parties will not be on the allegation of this record, because it is only to the jurisdiction of the Court; but in this case the plea is to the action; for the stress is not whether the manor is Ancient Demesne or not, but whether the manor is holden of the King or not, and to prove this he alleges the record.—Blak. By the manner of this plea it will be held to be not denied that there is such a record.—And then Thorpe produced the record of Domesday,¹ which purported that the Bishop of London held the manor of Wydeford, and answered for three hides, &c., and also another record that the Bishop was in a title, in which those who held of the King are named; and so (said he) the manor is holden of the King. And, besides, the Prior has done fealty to the King in the Chancery before the writ of amoveas manum issued to the Escheator.—Pole. That fealty does not prove it, for he held other lands of the King, by reason of which the King by his prerogative has cause to have the custody of the Priory in time of vacancy; and office by a Diem clausit extremum cannot be had in such case; wherefore the fealty can be understood only to be for the lands which are holden of the King. (And to this the COURT agreed.) And as to the record we tell you that this manor [of Wydeford] was in the seisin of R. Mellent, Earl of Leicester, as parcel of such an honour,¹ who gave that manor,² to be holden of him, &c., in frankalmoign to the predecessor of this Prior; afterwards Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, levied war; wherefore the honour came into the hand of King Henry III., who gave to his son Edmund the whole of the honour as fully as it came into his hand by the forfeiture of Simon de Montfort, of which honour the services were parcel. (And he showed deeds, &c.) And so the manor is holden of the Earl of Leicester³ and not of the King; ready, &c.—W. Thorpe. them by judgment from the general averment without cause, and now we are informed on that point.—R. Thorpe. We do not understand that.—W. Thorpe. Not waiving our first plea, but in order to move you, we tell you that their statement does not prove that the land is not holden of the King; for it is not denied by them that Ivo de Grentemisiel held the manor of the King, and aliened, which alienation must have been to hold the manor of the King, so that when the Earl was seised he could not hold it as parcel of the honour, and, when he aliened, the services reserved could not be parcel of the honour any more than the demesne. Besides, when the King gives an honour, unless express mention be made of fees and advowsons, they do not pass.—Pole. What you say is contrary to law; for, when the King gives an honour or a manor with the appurtenances as fully as it came into his hands by the forfeiture of such an one, everything which is appendant passes; and in that way the gift was made. And as to your statement that, when Ivo, who held of the King, aliened, that alienation must have been to hold of the King, it is not so; for at that time he could aliene to hold of himself; for even as alienation was then permissible without the King's license, so it was then permissible that it should be to hold of himself.—W. Thorpe. That does not follow. Besides, when the manor was holden of the King in frankalmoign through the forfeiture of that Montfort, the King could not divest himself of these services.—

Whereas you would charge us to answer to the two pleas because the taking was effected in both lands, we are ready to aver that it was not.—Blaik. Then you must say with certainty in which of the two lands the taking was effected in order to plead afterwards in discharge of that parcel.—Ham. (ad idem). Since we are at one as to the place, and we plead in discharge respectively by divers pleas, whereof one plea extends to discharge one parcel, one plea extends to another parcel, it is necessary to answer to both.—Thorpe. The issue in this plea ought to be on the taking—whether it was tortious or rightful ; therefore in respect of that parcel in which the taking was effected ought the issue to be taken ; and as to the other parcel protestation may be made in order to save the plea if at another time it should happen that another taking should be effected.

And the plaintiff showed a deed which purported that the common was granted within the metes and bounds of the common of such a vill. It was found by the Assise that the person who granted the common held all his lands in the same vill in severalty, and that the plaintiff was seised. Upon this difficulty the parties were adjourned into the Bench.—Thorpe. It is found that we were seised of the common in a certain place through his deed. The party suing [the writ] said that the person who had execution had aliened; therefore, a writ was granted to cause to come the person who had execution, and his assignee. The creditor came and his assignee made default; therefore the Distress issued, and Idem dies was given. At the return of the Distress the assignee made default—R. Thorpe. We pray that the creditor may be put to answer as to the deed, inasmuch as the tenant who makes default is a stranger to the deed.—HILLARY. Why have you taken your suit against him? The demandant said that he had nothing by descent; therefore the Justices put the parol without day. The demandant caused the record to come before the Bishop, and assigned error, inasmuch as the Justices had put the parol without day, whereas they ought to have continued it until the parol had been removed. Therefore the Bishop redressed that error, and sent the same record to the same Justices to continue process until the parol should be removed, which Justices continued the parol until the King's writ came to the Bishop to record the parol, and send the record into the Common Bench. The Bishop sent the record into the Common Bench of the King.—Thorpe delivered to the Justices of the Bench the King's writ to the effect that, if error there were in the record, they should surcease, and should not make any process, and he said that inasmuch as the Bishop sent back the record to the same Justices that had committed error the Bishop had thereby erred. Therefore, said Thorpe, we pray that you make no process on this record.—Blak. When a record is caused to come before the King, and error is found, he can send the record to whatsoever Justices he pleases to make an end of the business.—Thorpe. The record which has once come into the King's Bench shall never be sent to a lower

APPENDIX.

THE CASE NO. 33 IN HILARY TERM, 15 EDWARD III.

The King's breve clausum (writ of error) dated 1 June, 14 Edward III., was sent to Simon Fitz-Richard, returnable in the King's Bench in England on the Octave of St. Michael.

The proceedings in the first instance at Dublin, and the subsequent proceedings in Error in the Court of King's Bench in England appear among the Placita coram Rege, Hilary, 15 Edward III. R^o. 117, in the following form:—

Jacobus le Botiller Comes Ermonie et Magister Lucas de Loundres summoniti fuerunt quod essent hic ad respondendum domino Regi de placito quod permittant dominum Regem præsentare idoneam personam ad ecclesiam de Cnokgraffan, quæ vacat, et ad domini Regis spectat donationem, ratione minoris ætatis heredum Johannis de Bermyngham nuper Comitis Loueth in manu domini Regis existentis,¹ ut dicitur, et unde iidem Comes et Lucas dominum Regem injuste impediunt.

Et unde Thomas de Westham qui sequitur pro domino Rege dicit quod quidam Petrus de Bermyngham nuper seisitus fuit de manerio de Esker cum pertinentiis et illud tenuit de domino Edwardo nuper Rege Angliæ avo domini Regis nunc in capite, et etiam tenuit manerium de Cnokgraffan cum pertinentiis, ad quod advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ est appendens, et inde seisitus fuit in dominico suo ut de feodo et jure, tempore pacis, tempore prædicti domini Edwardi avi domini Regis nunc, capiendo inde expletia, &c., ad valentiam, &c., et tempore ejusdem Regis Edwardi avi domini Regis nunc præsentavit quendam clericum suum Robertum de Bermyngham ad ecclesiam prædictam, qui, ad præsentationem suam ad ecclesiam prædictam, fuit admissus et per Episcopum loci institutus in eadem, qui quidem Petrus obiit inde seisitus, post cujus mortem prædictus Johannes de Bermyngham nuper

It was alleged by the plaintiff in Error that this mistake occurred in the original writ.

Comes Loueth intravit in prædicto manerio de Esker cum pertinentiis et in prædicto manerio de Cnokgraffan cum pertinentiis, ad quod advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ est appendens, ut filius et heres prædicti Petri, qui quidem Johannes nuper Comes Loueth dedit et concessit cuidam Magistro Roberto de Bermyngham advocationem ecclesiæ prædictæ ad totam vitam ipsius Magistri Roberti. Postea ecclesia prædicta per resignationem prædicti Roberti de Bermyngham clerici vacavit, tempore pacis, tempore domini Regis Edwardi patris domini Regis nunc, et eodem tempore prædictus Magister Robertus, ut in iure ipsius Johannis nuper Comitis¹ Loueth, præsentavit quendam clericum suum Johannem de Bermyngham ad ecclesiam prædictam, qui quidem Johannes clericus, ad præsentationem suam, ad ecclesiam prædictam fuit admissus et per Episcopum loci institutus in eadem, qui quidem Comes obiit, et postea obiit prædictus Magister Robertus, post cujus Comitis mortem prædictum manerium de Esker cum pertinentiis et prædictum manerium de Cnokgraffan cum pertinentiis, ad quod advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ est appendens, seiscita fuerunt in manum domini Regis nunc, ratione minoris ætatis Matillidis, Bertredæ, et Katharinæ filiarum et heredum prædicti Comitis in custodia domini Regis nunc existentium, et prædictis manerio de Esker cum pertinentiis, et manerio de Cnokgraffan cum pertinentiis, ad quod advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ est appendens, sic in manu domini Regis nunc existentibus, prædictus Johannes de Bermyngham clericus obiit, per cujus mortem ecclesia prædicta vacavit, et adhuc vacat, et sic spectat ad dominum Regem præsentare ad ecclesiam prædictam. Et prædicti Jacobus Comes et Magister Lucas ipsum injuste impediunt ad damnum domini Regis mille librarum. Et, si prædicti Jacobus Comes et Magister Lucas hoc velint dedicere, Thomas de Westham, qui sequitur pro domino Rege, paratus est hoc verificare pro domino Rege, &c.

Et prædicti Comes et Magister Lucas, per Martinum Reve attornatum eorum, veniunt et defendunt vim et injuriam ubi et quando, &c. Et prædictus Lucas dicit quod ipse nihil clamat in advocatione ecclesiæ prædictæ nec in ecclesia prædicta nisi ut rector ecclesiæ prædictæ. Et prædictus Jacobus Comes, per prædictum attornatum suum, dicit quod tota Lagenia unde prædictum manerium de Esker cum pertinentiis est parcella nuper fuit in seiscina cujusdam Ricardi Comitis Marescalli, &c., qui quidem Ricardus Comes surrexit de guerra contra dominum Johannem nuper Regem Angliæ progenitorem domini Regis nunc, per quod prædictum manerium de Esker cum pertinentiis et tota Lagenia unde prædictum manerium cum pertinentiis est parcella devenerunt ad manum ipsius domini Regis Johannis per forisfacturam ipsius Ricardi nuper Comitis Marescalli, &c., et ex quo dominus Rex non debet alio modo tenere prædictum manerium de Esker cum pertinentiis, nec ratione illius manerii aliam prærogativam clamare quam prædictus Comes Marescallus seu heredes sui, si manerium illud cum pertinentiis esset in manu ipsius Comitis seu heredum suorum, non intendit quod dominus Rex velit ad talem demonstrationem responderi, &c.

Et prædictus Thomas, qui sequitur pro domino Rege, petit iudicium, desicut prædicti Jacobus Comes et Magister Lucas non dedicunt quin prædictus Petrus tenuit prædictum manerium de Esker cum pertinentiis de domino Edwardo nuper Rege Angliæ avo domini Regis nunc in capite, nec quod tenuit prædictum manerium de Cnokgraffan, ad quod advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ est appendens, nec quod idem præsentavit prædictum clericum suum Robertum de Bermyngham ad ecclesiam prædictam, qui, ad præsentationem suam, ad ecclesiam prædictam fuit admissus, et per Episcopum loci institutus in eadem, nec quod prædictus Johannes nuper Comes Loueth, post mortem ipsius Petri, in prædicto manerio de Esker cum pertinentiis et in prædicto manerio de Cnokgraffan cum pertinentiis, ad quod advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ est appendens, intravit, ut filius et heres ipsius Petri, &c., nec quod prædictus Magister Robertus, ut in jure ipsius Johannis nuper Comitis Loueth, præsentavit prædictum Johannem de Bermyngham clericum suum ad ecclesiam prædictam, qui, ad præsentationem suam, ad ecclesiam prædictam fuit admissus et per Episcopum loci institutus in eadem, ut prædictum est, nec quod post mortem ipsius Johannis nuper Comitis Loueth prædictum manerium de Esker cum pertinentiis et prædictum manerium de Cnokgraffan cum pertinentiis, ad quod advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ est appendens, seisita fuerunt in manum domini Regis nunc, ratione minoris ætatis prædictorum heredum ipsius Comitis Loueth, nec quod ecclesia prædicta post mortem prædicti Johannis de Bermyngham clerici, prædicto manerio de Esker cum pertinentiis, et prædicto manerio de Cnokgraffan cum pertinentiis, ad quod advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ est appendens, in manu domini Regis nunc, ut prædictum est, existentibus, vacabat et adhuc vacat, &c., et petit breve Episcopo, &c.

Et, quia iudicium nondum inde formatum est, dies datus est prædicto Thomæ, qui sequitur pro domino Rege, et prædictis Jacobo Comiti et Magistro Lucæ, de iudicio suo inde audiendo hic a die Sancti Michaelis in xv. dies. Postea, continuata loquela prædicta usque in Crastino Sancti Martini proximo futuro, prædictus Thomas, qui sequitur pro domino Rege, venit hic. Et prædicti Comes et Magister Lucas, per prædictum attornatum eorum, similiter veniunt hic. Et, quia iudicium nondum inde formatum est, dies datus est partibus prædictis de iudicio suo inde audiendo hic in Octabis Sancti Hillarii, &c. Postea in Octabis Sancti Hillarii prædictus Thomas qui sequitur pro domino Rege venit hic, et prædicti Comes et Magister Lucas, per prædictum attornatum eorum, similiter veniunt hic. Et, quia iudicium nondum inde formatum est, dies datus est partibus prædictis de iudicio suo inde audiendo hic a die Paschæ in xv. dies, &c. Postea a die Paschæ in xv. dies prædictus Thomas, qui sequitur pro domino Rege, venit hic. Et prædictus Comes non venit. Et prædictus Magister Lucas, per prædictum attornatum suum, venit hic. Et, quia iudicium nondum inde formatum est, dies datus est partibus prædictis de iudicio suo inde audiendo hic in Octabis Sanctæ Trinitatis, &c. Postea in Octabis Sanctæ Trinitatis prædictus Thomas, qui sequitur pro domino [Rege], venit hic et prædictus Magister Lucas, per prædictum attornatum suum, venit hic. Et prædictus Thomas petit iudicium pro domino Rege. Ideo consideratum est quod dominus Rex recuperet præsentationem suam ad ecclesiam prædictam versus prædictos Comitem et Magistrum Lucam. Et prædicti Comes et Magister Lucas in misericordia pro injusto impedimento, &c.

Et Sciendum quod recordum istud liberabatur in Curia Regis coram domino Rege termino Sancti Hillarii anno regni Regis nunc quintodecimo.

Here follows a writ to the Justices of the King's Bench reciting previous writ of error, "ac jam ex parte ipsius Lucæ
 " intellexerimus quod licet ipse recordum et processum prædicta vobis liberaverit et allegaverit se per maris intemperiem
 " in tantum fuisse impeditum quod ad diem prædictum cum eisdem recordo et processu coram vobis venire non potuit,
 " et ea occasione vos cum instantia requisiverit ut ipsum ad errores in hac parte assignandum admitteretis, et ulterius faceretis quod secundum legem et consuetudinem regni nostri Angliæ in negotio prædicto fuerit faciendum, vos tamen, considerationem ad hoc non habentes, pro eo quod recordum et processum prædicta post terminum prædictum vobis liberata fuerunt, ad procedendum in eodem negotio hucusque procedere distulistis, et adhuc defertis, in ipsius Lucæ grave damnum et præjudicium manifestum, super quo nobis supplicavit sibi de remedio provideri, Nos volentes,

" tam pro nobis quam pro præfato Luca, in hac parte fieri quod
 " est justum, vobis mandamus quod, visis recordo et processu
 " prædictis, ipsum Lucam ad errores in hac parte coram vobis
 " assignandum admittatis, et ulterius in eodem negotio faciat
 " prout de jure et secundum legem et consuetudinem regni
 " nostri Angliæ fuerit faciendum, hoc non obstante quod
 " eadem recorum et processus post terminum illum vobis
 " liberata fuerunt ut est dictum." [Dated 7 Feb., 15 E. III.]

" Et modo coram domino Rege venit prædictus Magister
 " Lucas et dicit quod diversimode erratum est in recordo et
 " processu prædictis, unde petit quod servientes domini Regis
 " vocentur, &c., et quod ipse possit assignare errores in præ-
 " dictis recordo et processu existentes, et quod justitia sibi
 " inde fiat, &c."

Et super hoc, vocatis Willelmo de Thorpe et Johanne de Stowe-ford servientibus domini Regis, &c., in quorum præsentia prædictus Magister Lucas dicit quod erratum est in hoc quod ubi dominus Rex tulit prædictum breve de Quare impedit versus prædictos Jacobum le Botiler et Lucam, de advocacione ecclesiæ Cnokgraffan, et sumpsit titulum suum ratione minoris ætatis heredum nuper Comitibus de Loueth in manu ipsius Regis existentis quod pro titulo ad hujusmodi breve manutenendum esse non potest, et, in hoc tunc quod præfati Justiciarii super hujusmodi brevi concesserunt breve Episcopo pro domino Rege, erraverunt.

Item dicit quod in prædicta demonstratione domini Regis continetur quod, pro eo quod prædictum manerium de Esker, quod de domino Rege tenebatur in capite, fuit in manu ipsius Regis ratione minoris ætatis heredum Comitibus de Loueth existentium, eidem domino Regi permittit¹ præsentare ad ecclesiam prædictam. Et sic in eadem demonstratione sumebatur alius titulus pro domino Rege quam in prædicto brevi de Quare impedit continebatur. Et, in hoc tunc quod præfati Justiciarii super eadem demonstratione per prædictum breve non warrantizata ad judicium pro domino Rege processerunt, omnino erraverunt.

Item erratum est quod ubi dominus Rex cepit pro titulo, &c., videlicet quod ubi prædictum manerium de Esker, quod tenebatur de ipso Rege in capite tanquam de Corona, &c., de quo ipse fuit seiscitus ratione minoris ætatis heredum prædicti Comitibus de Loueth, et sic per prærogativam suam ipsi Regi permittit¹ præsentare ad ecclesiam prædictam, eo quod fuit de hereditate heredum prædicti Comitis de Loueth, ad quod prædictus Jacobus tunc dixit quod actio domini Regis per prærogativam suam in hac parte manuteneri non potuit, eo quod prædictum manerium de Esker fuit parcella Lagenæ, quæ nuper fuit in manu prædicti Comitis Marescalli, quæ devenit in manu Johannis Regis, &c., progenitoris ipsius Regis, &c., per forisfacturam dicti Comitis Marescalli, per quod non intendit quod dominus Rex virtute hujusmodi domini aliquam prærogativam inde habere debuit, quod dominum domino Regi sic accretum prædictus Thomas, qui sequebatur pro domino Rege, non dedicens, versus prædictum Jacobum replicavit dicendo quod ex quo idem Jacobus non dedit quin prædictum manerium de Esker tenebatur de ipso Rege in capite ut de Corona, &c., et sic ipsi Regi per prærogativam suam ad ecclesiam prædictam pertinuit præsentare, petiit judicium pro domino Rege, ubi in prædicto recordo expresse est deductum quod prædictum manerium de Esker tenebatur de domino Rege ut de Corona sua, super quo non deducto præfati Justiciarii reddiderunt judicium pro domino Rege, et in hoc erraverunt.

Dicit etiam quod in recordo et processu prædictis continetur quod loquela prædicta continuata fuit de die Sancti Michaelis in xv. dies anno regni Regis nunc undecimo usque in Crastino Sancti Martini tunc proximo sequente, absque aliqua mentione facta in eisdem utrum partes prædictæ coram præfatis Justiciariis comparuerunt necne, seu quod aliquis dies datus fuit eisdem partibus, et sic loquela illa omnino tunc extitit discontinuata. Et in hoc tunc quod præfati Justiciarii postea processum inde continuaverunt, et ad judicium inde processerunt, erraverunt, &c.

Item dicit quod ad aliquos dies quos dominus Rex et prædicti Jacobus et Lucas habuerunt in Curia postquam placitaverunt intratur in recordo prædicto Dies datus est partibus prædictis, ubi ipsi qui sequebatur pro domino Rege dies dari debuerat, prout mos est. In hoc tunc quod præfati Justiciarii dederunt domino Regi diem in loquela prædicta, ut alii personæ terræ, ubi mos est per legem terræ in hujusmodi placitis dare diem illi qui sequitur pro domino Rege et non ipsi Regi, ut parti, &c., erraverunt, &c.

Dicit etiam quod non continetur in eisdem recordo et processu quod præfati Justiciarii, postquam prædictus Jacobus coram præfatis Justiciariis fecerat defaultam, recordati fuerunt illam defaultam nec iidem Justiciarii præceperunt Vicecomiti distringendum ipsum Jacobum audiendum inde judicium suum. Et sic processus ille versus ipsum Jacobum ad tunc omnino erat discontinuatus. Et in hoc tunc quod præfati Justiciarii postea ad iudicium inde reddendum pro domino Rege processerunt omnino erraverunt.

Dicit etiam quod in recordo et processu prædictis continetur quod prædictus Lucas nihil clamavit in advocacy ecclesiæ prædictæ, et quod in iudicio inde reddito consideraverunt quod idem Lucas esset in misericordia. In hoc tunc quod præfati Justiciarii amerciaverunt præfatum Lucam, qui nihil clamavit in advocacy prædicta erraverunt, quos idem errores et alios in dicto recordo et processu compertos petit corrigi necnon recordum et processum prædicta ac iudicium inde redditum tanquam erronea revocari et annullari et ulterius justitiam sibi inde fieri, &c.

Et Johannes de Lincolnia, qui sequitur pro domino Rege, dicit quod non intendit quod dominus Rex ad aliqua in dicto recordo contenta, quæ prædictus Lucas assignavit pro errore, teneatur respondere, quia dicit quod, per prædictum breve per quod prædictum recordum mittitur hic in Curia, &c., supponitur recordum illud fuisse retornatum coram domino Rege in Octabis Sancti Michaelis ultimo præteritis, et, illo termino Michaelis jam transacto, modo isto termino Sancti Hillarii recordum illud liberatur hic in Curia, ita quod pro recordo, ex quo non extitit liberatum tempore per prædictum breve, &c., limitato, teneri non debeat. Et licet dominus Rex postea, per aliud breve suum, mandasset hic in Curia quod, non obstante quod prædictum recordum post terminum Sancti Michaelis prædictum extiterit liberatum, præfatus Lucas ad errores in hac parte assignandum admitteretur, Curia tamen hic ipsum Lucam ad aliquos errores in hac parte assignandum admittere¹ non debet, quia dicit quod in rotulo hic misso per præfatum Simonem Fitz Richard continetur quod prædictus Lucas nihil clamavit in advocacy ecclesiæ prædictæ nec in eadem ecclesia nisi ut rector ejusdem, et, ex quo ipse tunc nihil clamavit in eadem ecclesia, per iudicium prædictum nihil amittere seu in aliquo deteriorari potuit, unde petit iudicium, pro domino Rege, si ipse Lucas, qui per prædictum iudicium aliquod damnum non habuit, ad aliquos errores in hac parte assignandum admittere debeat.

Et prædictus Lucas, quoad hoc quod pro domino Rege ei objicitur pro eo quod prædictum recordum non liberatur hic in Curia eo tempore per prædictum breve, &c., limitato, immo postea in alio termino, et ea de causa teneri pro recordo non debere, dicit quod quocunque tempore aliquid recordum

liberatur in Curia Regis per breve Regis, &c., et Curia inde reissitur, teneri debet pro recordo, et cum hoc dicit quod, per prædictum breve quod dominus Rex hic in Curia postea inde mandavit, idem Rex voluit quod eo non obstante quod illud recordum extitit liberatum Curie isto Terminio Hillarii quod Justiciarii hic facerent inde justitiæ complementam, ita quod pro alio quam pro recordo teneri non potest. Et quo ad hoc quod, pro domino Rege, eidem Lucæ obijcitur quod ipse ad aliquos errores inde assignandum admitti non deberet ex quo ipse nihil clamavit in advocacione ecclesiæ prædictæ, et per hoc nihil potuit inde per prædictum judicium amittere seu aliquod damnum habere, idem Lucas dicit quod ipse per judicium prædictum amotus extitit a possessione ejusdem ecclesiæ et in tantum per judicium illud damnum habuit et multum amisit, ita quod ad errores prædictos assignandum admitti debet, unde petit justitiam sibi inde fieri, &c.

Et prædictus Johannes qui sequitur pro domino Rege, salvis eidem Regi rationibus suis prædictis, dicit quod; ubi prædictus Lucas assignavit pro errore in hoc quod dominus Rex super prædicto brevi de Quare impedit sumpsit titulum suum ratione minoris ætatis heredum nuper Comitis de Loneth in manu Regis existentis qui non est titulus per legem terræ [ad] manutenendum hujusmodi breve, et per hoc quod Justiciarii prædicti tenuerunt inde placitum et reddiderunt judicium pro domino Rege errasse debuissent, præfati Justiciarii in hoc non erraverunt, quia dicit quod prædictum breve de Quare impedit non fuit tale quale supponitur per prædictum rotulum hic missum, &c. Et licet actio Regis sumpta esset super hujusmodi brevi, et prædictus Lucas nec præfatus Comes tunc præsentem in Curia ad tunc breve illud non calumniaverunt, immo illud acceptaverunt, et Justiciarii illi postea placitum super eodem brevi tenuerunt, et ad judicium processerunt, rite et bene fecerunt et non erraverunt.

Et quo ad hoc quod prædictus Lucas assignavit pro errore in hoc quod dominus Rex in demonstratione sua sumpsisset debuit alium titulum quam continebatur in prædicto brevi, &c., in hoc non est erratum, quia dicit quod ille idem titulus quem prædictus Lucas modo allegat in demonstratione Regis non fuisse warrantizatum per prædictum breve de Quare impedit, illud idem in eodem brevi continetur de quo brevi Curia nondum certioratur, &c. Et quamvis ita esset quod alius titulus in prædicta demonstratione Regis specificaretur quam in prædicto brevi continebatur, prædictus Lucas nec præfatus Comes, tunc plene ætatis existentes, illud non calumniaverunt, per quod præfati Justiciarii in hoc quod placitum inde tenuerunt et ulterius ad iudicium processerunt non erraverunt, &c.

Et quo ad hoc quod præfatus Lucas assignavit pro errore quod præfati Justiciarii reddidisse debuissent iudicium super eo quod non erat dedictum quod¹ prædictum manerium de Esker tenebatur de domino Rege de capite et de corona, &c., ubi in dicto rotulo hic misso continetur quod illud omnino erat dedictum, ex quo prædictus Johannes Rex in manerio illo ut parcella Lageniæ prædictæ postquam ad manum suam devenit per forisfacturam prædicti Ricardi Comitis qui de Lagenia illa fuit seisisus aliam prærogativam habere non potuit in eodem quam habuit prædictus Ricardus Comes dum illud tenuit, præfati Justiciarii in hoc non erraverunt, quia dicit quod tempore quo dominus Johannes quondam Rex Angliæ seisisus fuit de manerio de Esker, ut parcella prædictæ Lageniæ, per forisfacturam prædicti Ricardi Comitis, idem Johannes Rex potuit tunc inde seisisi in dominico et servitio, &c., et ex quo prædictus Lucas et prædictus Comes Ermonæ non dedixit quin prædictus Petrus de Bermyngham tenuit prædictum manerium de Esker de domino Edwardo nuper Rege Angliæ avo domini Regis nunc in capite, nec quod etiam tenuit prædictum manerium de Cnokgraffan ad quod, &c., nec quod dominus Rex nunc seisisus fuit de prædictis maneriis² de Esker et Cnokgraffan ratione minoris ætatis heredum prædicti Comitis de Loueth, &c., prout in demonstratione Regis continebatur, et sic, utrum eadem seisisina Regis nunc fuit justa vel injusta, ad ipsum Regem, ratione maneriorum prædictorum sic in manu sua existentium, ad ecclesiam prædictam pertinuit præsentare, per quod Justiciarii prædicti in hoc quod placitum inde tenuerunt non erraverunt, immo rite et legitime fecerunt.

Et quo ad hoc quod prædictus Lucas assignavit pro errore in hoc quod præfati Justiciarii processerunt ad iudicium reddendum in loquela prædicta, postquam loquela illa deberet discontinuari per hoc quod loquela illa continuata fuit de die Sancti Michaelis anno regni Regis nunc undecimo usque in Crastino Sancti Martini tunc proximo sequente, absque hoc quod partes aliquæ tunc comparuerunt aut aliquis tunc dies datus fuit eisdem partibus, Justiciarii illi in hoc non erraverunt, quia dicit quod quando in aliquo recordo inter aliquas partes fit mentio de continuatione, et maxime de uno die ad alium diem in uno et eodem Termino, non potest aliter intelligi quam de die in diem. Et otiam continuatio nunquam potest esse sine apparentia partium, et, ex quo illo eodem Termino Michaelis partes prædictæ comparuerunt et datus fuit eis dies usque ad alium Terminum, prout patet in eodem recordo, non est erratum, &c.

Et quo ad hoc quod præfatus Lucas dicit quod erratum est in hoc quod præfati Justiciarii dederunt diem partibus prædictis ad aliquos dies postquam dominus Rex et prædicti Comes Ermonia et Lucas placitassent, &c., videlicet domino Regi ut alii personæ terræ, ubi mos est dare diem illi qui sequitur pro Rege, &c., et non domino Regi ut parti, &c., in hoc Justiciarii non erraverunt, quia dicit quod prædicti Comes Ermonia et Lucas fuerunt ut duæ personæ et per hoc duæ partes, et in hoc quod dies datus fuit eis ut partibus, &c., dominus Rex habuit diem per eorum adjornamentum, ita quod non oporteret quod dies aliter daretur quam partibus prædictis, &c., et ex quo ipsi erant prænominati, &c.

Et quo ad hoc quod præfatus Lucas assignavit pro errore quod præfati Justiciarii non præceperunt Vicecomiti distringere prædictum Jacobum Comitem, postquam fecerat defaultam, de audiendo iudicio suo, nec defaultam illam recordati fuerunt, sed postea super huiusmodi processu sic discontinuato ad iudicium processerunt, et in hoc errasse debuerunt, Justiciarii illi in hoc non erraverunt quia dicit quod, cum aliquis placitaverit cum domino Rege in placito Quare impedit, et postea facit defaultam, nihil aliud tunc consideratum est nisi quod procedatur ad iudicium, &c., et in hoc tunc quod præfati Justiciarii postea fecerunt dilationem in negotio illo et non processerunt in continenti ad iudicium hoc fuit in proficuum prædicti Lucæ, ita quod in hoc ipse Lucas nullum errorem assignare potest, &c.

Et quo ad hoc quod prædictus Lucas dicit quod erratum est in hoc quod præfati Justiciarii americiaverunt per iudicium ipsum Lucam, ex quo ipse superius nihil clamavit in advocatione ecclesiæ prædictæ, in hoc non est erratum, quia dicit quod ipse Lucas venit per magnam distractionem et ea de causa americiatus fuit, et sic iudicium inde redditum bonum est, et non erroneum, quod pro domino Regi petit affirmari et pro bono teneri, &c.

Et quia Curia vult certiorari super brevi originali super quo dominus Rex recuperavit præsentationem suam ad prædictam ecclesiam de Onokegraffan antequam ulterius procedatur, &c., ideo mandatum est Custodi Brevium domini Regis in Communi Banco apud Dublinum quod, scrutatis brevibus

Regis sub custodia sua existentibus, et¹ de eo quod inde invenerit Regem a die Paschæ in quinque septimanas ubicunque, &c., sub sigillo suo reddat certiores,¹ &c.

On the day given the said Custos Brevium "non misit breve." There were several further adjournments and several pluries writs to the Custos Brevium, and several entries of "non misit breve;" but no other conclusion to the case appears on the roll.

INDEX OF MATTERS.

ABATEMENT OF PLAINT:

(Assise of Novel Disseisin.) Plaint abated in respect of plough-service, 124.

ABATEMENT OF WRITS:

(Formedon in the Descender.) If a demandant make himself heir to his grandfather, and it be alleged that his father was seised, he must traverse the alleged seisin, or otherwise his writ will abate, 138.

The tenant, an Abbot, was not described in the writ as parson of a church, and he alleged that he held the tenements in frank-almoign as the free alms of that church. This was denied. The Abbot alleged a fine in support of his contention, and prayed judgment whether the demandant could be admitted to deny the tenure. The demandant afterwards failed to appear. Semble that the writ abated, 300-302.

(Formedon in the Reverter.) A writ reciting a gift in special tail male, and the death of the donees and of their son, and claiming the reversion because the son died without heir male of his body, does not abate because he is not therein described as heir or as having been seised, nor because the son is not therein supposed to have died without heir of his body, 136-138.

(Jurata utrum.) The writ is good, under the Statute 14 Ed. III. Stat. 1, c. 17, for the Warden of a Hospital not having a college and common seal at the time of the purchase of the writ, 42, 46-48.

(Præcipe quod reddat.) If a writ be purchased against A. and B., and B. die, and a new writ be purchased against A. alone, and it be shown that there was continuance on the first writ after the purchase of the second, the second abates, 191.

If the writ be in respect of the manor of A. and the castle of A., and it be alleged that the castle is parcel of the manor, the writ does not abate, 208.

(Quare impedit.) When the writ is brought against several persons, and one dies, it does not therefore abate, 158-160.

If in Quare impedit brought by the King, the words "by reason of the Bishopric being in the King's hand," be used instead of the words "by reason of the temporalities of the Bishopric being in the King's hand," the writ does not therefore abate, 358.

(Right of Advowson.) If the writ is brought in respect of a church in a vill, and there are two churches dedicated to one Saint in the same vill, the writ will abate unless determination be made therein as to which church is in demand, 104.

(Scire facias on Fine.) If the transcript come into court by Mittimus at the suit of A., who dies, and the Scire facias is at the suit of B., his son, the writ does not therefore abate, 280-282.

If tenant allege non-tenure of parcel, the plea does not go to the abatement of the whole writ, 282.

(Trespas.) If the writ be brought without mention of vill or hamlet in which the alleged trespass occurred, it may be good because the place may be without vill or hamlet, 144-146.

(Wardship.) Plea in abatement of writ and subsequent pleadings, 302-304.

A plea of non-tenure of the body is not sufficient to abate a writ of Wardship of body and lands, 368.

(Waste.) If tenant hold for life with power of disposal by assignment or legacy for one year beyond, the writ against him is good, 270.

She and her husband lease the manor for life to D., the reversion being to her husband and her and her heirs. On a writ of Entry she and her husband are vouched by D., but she dies, and D. then vouches her son E., who warrants and prays aid of her two sisters and co-parceners. The aid-prayer is counterpleaded because, as argued, the fee tail was discontinued by the reservation of the reversion in fee, but the objection is not allowed and the aid is granted, 122-124.

The alienation was admitted, but E. produced a release of all actions by C. The plaintiffs said there was no release as to the 1,000*l.*, and issue was joined thereon, 68-70.

Action of Debt was brought by an executor in respect of the several sums of 100 marks and 25 marks, the former sum representing an obligation, after release of a certain portion, and the latter sum a loan made by the testator to the defendant. DIEM CLAUSIT EXTREMUM :

DISCONTINUANCE :

If one be vouched by the name of A. B. of X., and process be continued by that name until he come into Court, and if he enter into warranty as A. of X., and be so described subsequently, there is no discontinuance, because the process was good as against the tenant until the vouchee entered into warranty, and good against the vouchee by the name in which he so entered, 250-252.

DOMESDAY BOOK :

Cited to prove tenure in Ancient Demesne, 346, 348.

Cited to prove tenure of the King in capite, 346.

DOWER :

When the husband has aliened lands in exchange for other lands, the wife shall not have dower of both, and, when the exchange is pleaded in bar of dower of the lands aliened, there is no need to show a specialty,

but issue may be joined as to whether the husband aliened simply without taking anything in exchange, 100-102.

The heir of the husband was vouched in one county, as being in the wardship of one person, and appeared, and said that part of the tenements were in the wardship of another person in another county who was not named in the voucher. Issue was joined as to whether there was a second guardian or not, and, if not, the demandant would recover against the heir, 170-172.

Voucher of two guardians in action of Dower, 188.

In action of Dower it was pleaded, as to two parts of the demand, that the wife had eloped and lived in adultery, and, as to the residue, that the husband had never been seised so that he could endow. (Objection was taken that the latter part of the plea admitted the ability of the demandant to demand dower, and that therefore the first part of the plea should be discharged. This was not allowed, but the tenant was compelled to hold to one plea or the other, and averred the elopement, 222-224.

If elopement be found, demandant shall not have dower, 222, side-note.

A writ of Dower having been brought against a guardian, he made default, and maintained that the demandant could not hold to the default because he was not tenant of the freehold, but this contention was not allowed, 242.

Tenant pleaded that demandant and her husband took, in exchange for the land in respect of which dower was demanded, other land of which she was now seised. She, however, prayed judgment and seisin because the husband's seisin of the land in demand so that he could endow was not denied, and she was a purchaser by the alleged exchange. She afterwards had judgment on tenant's default, 268, 269, note 1.

The action having been brought in the Court of the Liberty of Durham, and the tenant having there alleged that the demandant had not been lawfully married, and the demandant having stated where she was married, the cause was removed into the Court of Common Pleas. The allegations having been there repeated on either side, the Archbishop of Canterbury, within whose diocese the demandant alleged the marriage, was directed to enquire and certify, 277-279, 278, note 8.

The tenant pleaded a recovery of the tenements by default in a previous action, and that the estate of the demandant's husband was mesne between a demise which was the ground of the previous action and the judgment thereon. The demandant prayed that the tenant might show his right in accordance with his writ in the previous action. In the end issue was joined on a traverse of the demise alleged in the previous action, 308, 309, note 1.

If, in Dower unde nihil habet, the demand be for twelve messuages and 40s. of rent, and the rent issue from the same messuages, semble that the tenant must answer as to the messuages even though the demand be abated as to the rent, 362.

DURHAM:

A writ of Formedon having been brought in the Court of the Liberty of the Bishop of Durham, issue was there joined on the plea (in bar) of a deed and of assets by descent in the counties of York and Lincoln. After various proceedings in the Bishop's Courts, the cause was removed into the Court of Common Pleas, whence jury process issued to the Sheriffs of York and Lincoln to try the issue joined at Durham, 142-144, 364-366.

fee, as the writ of Entry in consimili casu given by the Statute Westm. 2, c. 24, is applicable only during the life of such alienor, 114-116.

(Ad terminum qui prateriit.) A deed was pleaded whereby the demandant gave the tenements to A. and B. his wife, "et eorum heredibus de ipsis exeuntibus vel eorum assignatis in perpetuum." It was replied that nothing passed by the deed, and issue was joined thereon, 202-204.

(Dum fuit infra aetatem.) If a husband aliene the right of his wife, who is under age, and the wife be named in the deed and make livery with him, they shall have their recovery by writ of Entry dum fuit infra aetatem (per Willoughby, J.), 24.

(In consimili casu.) See ENTRY (ad communem legem).

(Sur disseisin.) The writ being against a Prior, he alleged that the estate in respect of which the action was brought was meane between a disseisin effected on him and execution sued on his recovery by assise. It was alleged in reply that the demandant's ancestor, who was lord paramount, had subsequently entered upon the tenements because the inferior lord who held of him had omitted so to enter when the tenants of the latter aliened them, without license, in mortmain, and that the Prior's recovery had thus been annulled and defeated. The Prior rejoined that the alienors held of him and not of the meane lord mentioned or of the demandant's ancestor, and thereupon issue was joined, 132-134.

who alleged that he had leased to A. for life, was thereupon admitted to defend, and vouched. The vouchee entered into warranty and pleaded the demandant's release of actions, which, however, was found to be not the demandant's deed. Judgment was thereupon given that the demandant should recover against A., and that A. should recover over, to the value, against the vouchee, to hold in the right of B., 188-190.

ERROR:

If, before judgment in the Court of Common Pleas, the matter be brought before Parliament, and it be there agreed that a certain judgment is to be given, the judgment is that of the Court of Common Pleas and a writ of Error thereon, returnable in the Court of King's Bench, lies as in other cases, 292.

Quare, if Parliament agree, in accordance with the Statute 14 Ed. III., c. 5, that a particular judgment is to be given in the Court of Common Pleas, and the Court do not give the judgment directed, whether there is ipse facto error, 296.

A. brought a writ of Escheat against B. in respect of tenements in Bristol, on the ground of a felony committed by C. B. did not deny that the tenements had been held of A., but pleaded that Bristol was the King's free borough, that all escheats were the King's, of whomsoever the tenements might be held, and that the King had entered and enfeoffed him. A. denied that the King had had the escheats from all time, and issue was joined thereon, 184-188.

ESTOPPEL :

In a Jurata utrum, brought by the Warden of a Hospital, there was pleaded the deed of the plaintiff's predecessor, and of the Brethren and Sisters under their common seal, by which the tenements were aliened in fee to one whose estate the defendant had. The plaintiff replied that the Warden was appointed at the King's pleasure, and that at the time of the alienation the Brethren and Sisters were not perpetual, but persons who bought corodies and who abode in the Hospital and departed at their pleasure. Issue was joined as to whether they were perpetual Brethren and Sisters or not, 48-50, 51, note 1.

If A. bring a writ against B. in respect of certain tenements, and, pending the writ, C. bring a writ against B. in respect of the same tenements, and to the latter writ B. answer as tenant, B. is not precluded from pleading as against A. that he is not tenant, 76.

The Sheriff having returned that the obligor in a Statute Merchant was dead, the obligee had execution in respect of all the lands which the obligor had at the time of the recognisance or at any time since. Husband and wife cannot by fine grant and release their interest to A., for the life of the wife, and have grant from A. of a rentcharge for the life of the wife, because a fine must be final, and must show what becomes of the remainder of the estate, 74-76.

If a fine sur don grant et render be alleged in support of a voucher, and it be not stated that the renderer was seised, the intendment will nevertheless be that there was transmutation of possession by the render, but the seisin can be traversed, 152.

Though there be no clause of warranty in a fine, it will nevertheless give a tenant a voucher, and the plea as to no warranty will lie in the mouth of the vouchee, 152-154.

(Assise of Novel Disseisin.) Defendant in assise, having pleaded in bar the outlawry of the plaintiff, subsequently, after an adjournment, pleaded a release of all actions executed by the plaintiff. It was objected that he could not be admitted to plead the second bar and must maintain the first by record. It was held that he could plead the deed, because he was under age at the time at which he pleaded a record of outlawry in bar, 6-14, 66-68.

A defendant pleaded joint-tenancy with A. who was named in the writ, and with B. who was not named in the writ, after the assise had been awarded against A. by default. Notwithstanding the possible consequences to A., the plaintiff's averment that B. had nothing in the tenements was admitted, and process issued against B. under the Statute De conjunctim feoffatis 80-84.

(Writ of Escheat.) It is not sufficient to plead that a tenant attainted for felony did not hold of the lord on the day on which the felony was committed, but it is necessary to add "nor at any time since," 32.

Though it may not be necessary to allege the taking of esplees, the count is none the less good if it be alleged, 58.

A fine was levied whereby A. acknowledged the right of B., and B. granted and rendered to A. in tail, remainder to C. in tail, remainder to the right heirs of A. D. as remainder man, as right heir of A., enfeoffs E. It is alleged that A. in fact died without heir, being an alien by birth, and having no issue. Quare can E. plead the entail to save the escheat? 58-66.

(Mesne.) It is a good plea that the tenements are without the fee and seignory of the supposed lord paramount, and issue may be joined thereon, even though the mesne may have bound himself to acquit the plaintiff against all persons, 146-148.

If the defendant plead that the plaintiff was not distrained through his default, it is an admission of liability to acquit, and judgment shall be given accordingly, 178-180.

(Trespas.) A defendant cannot justify without avowing the particular act surmised against him, 110.

A writ having been brought against three persons for non-repair of sea-walls, one came on the first day, and would have pleaded, but was not admitted to do so in the absence of the others, 246.

(Wardship.) If the wardship both of the lands and of the body be in demand, and the defendant plead as to the lands that the tenure is in socage, the plea affects the whole demand, and he cannot as to the body vouch a lessor who is alleged to have leased the wardship to him and of whom the infant's ancestor is alleged to have held in knight-service, 76-78.

(Waste.) If waste be alleged, inter alia, as to an ox-stall, and the existence of the ox-stall be traversed, and "No Waste" be pleaded as to the rest, the plea will be taken as one of "No Waste" as to the whole, because if the finding were for the plaintiff as to the existence of the ox-stall, it would be necessary to enquire over as to the waste, 270.

The King brought Quare impedit in respect of a prebend, which, as alleged, became vacant because the prebendary was elected Dean and there was another prebend annexed to the Deanery. Issue was joined as to whether there was such another prebend annexed. The jury found that there was, and it was held that by the election of the prebendary as Dean the first prebend became vacant in law and in fact, and judgment was given for the King, 36-38.

The King brought Quare impedit in respect of a prebend, which, as alleged, became vacant because the prebendary was created Bishop, and was vacant when the temporalities of the Bishopric came into the King's hand. Issue was joined on the general averment that the prebend was not vacant at the time at which the temporalities were in the King's hand, and it was held that there could not be an issue as to whether the person created Bishop was prebendary or not, 70-74.

When the plaintiff confessed certain presentations alleged by the defendant, and avoided them on the ground of his ancestor's non-age at the time of the presentation, issue was joined on the question of non-age, 160.

In Quare impedit brought by a woman (A.), she counted that her husband (B.), deceased, was seized of a manor to which three advowsons were appendant, and that the third part of two parts of the manor, together with the third part of the advowson of C., was assigned to her in dower so that she should present on the third vacancy which had now occurred. For the defendant it was pleaded that a third part of the manor with a third part of the advowson of C. had previously been assigned in dower to D., the widow of E., the father of the plaintiff's husband, which D. had since died, and so the reversion had accrued to the defendant whose descent was traced from E. The plaintiff replied that the advowson, not of C. but of F. (another of the churches appendant to the manor), had been assigned in dower to D., and thereupon issue was joined, 160-166.

Process in Quare impedit against husband and wife, when the husband appears and the wife makes default, 200, 274.

The plaintiff disavowed the suit of the writ. The defendant thereupon said he had not committed any deceit, and knew nothing of the suit except by summons. The writ was afterwards removed into the Chancery, though it was objected that when process was commenced in the

Court of Common Pleas, writ or record ought not to be removed before judgment, 252.

Quare impedit was brought against several persons. One was alleged to be a minor whose lands were in the wardship of the plaintiff, and another was alleged to be the parson of the church. With regard to the former, issue was joined as to whether he was of full age at the time at which the church became vacant; with regard to the latter, issue was joined as to whether he had committed disturbance or not, though Hillary, J., said that he could not be adjudged a disturber in a case in which others were named in the writ, 256-258.

Quare impedit for the King in which his titles were stated as that an alien Prior held of him the manor to which the advowson was appendant, that the Prior's lands, fees, and advowsons were seised on account of the war with the French, and subsequently given back to the Prior to hold at a certain rent, and that the Prior afterwards aliened the manor without license, for which reason the King again seized it. Pleadings thereupon, and judgment for the King, 340-354.

RAVISHMENT OF WARD :

The plaintiff alleged that the infant's brother, to whom the infant was heir, held of him a certain manor. The defendant (the infant's mother) pleaded that a deed was executed by the plaintiff's father releasing all right in the manor to her husband's father (from whom it descended to her husband) at a certain rent in lieu of all services, that a fine sur don, grant, et render, was subsequently levied, by virtue of which she and her husband held in special tail of the chief lord, that, after the death of her husband, the infant and his brother, to whom the infant was heir, disseised her of a third part of the manor, that she brought an assise, and that the writ abated through the death of the brother, that the plaintiff could not have the wardship by reason of the other two parts of the manor because she was tenant by virtue of the fine, nor by reason of the third part because it was shown to be held in socage by the deed. The plaintiff was not allowed to aver, in opposition to the deed, that the infant's ancestor held of him by knight-service; he therefore denied the deed, and issue was joined thereon, 124-132.

RECEIPT:

If an action of Dower be brought against husband and wife as guardians of the land and of the heir, and the husband make default, the wife shall not be admitted to defend, because wardship is only a chattel interest, 312-314.

RECOGNISANCE:

A recognisance was conditioned to be in force if the obligee's wife should be convicted of adultery with the obligor, and otherwise to be null, 266-268.

See EXECUTION.

RENT:

If A. by fine render land to B. in tail, with remainder to C. in fee simple, he cannot reserve a rent thereon, 34.

REPLEVIN:

Pleadings in, where the action was brought against A. and B., when A. denied the taking, and B. made cognisance of the taking as bailiff of A., 168-170.

The avowry was for homage, escuage, and rent in arrear for certain tenements, and a deed was pleaded whereby the defendant's ancestor granted certain other tenements with the rent to the plaintiff's ancestor in special tail, to hold with wardships, reliefs, and escheats, by one clove per annum, in fee and inheritance for ever. It was replied that there were not in the deed any express words by which the tenements were discharged of homage and escuage. It was rejoined that in the words "with wardships, reliefs, and escheats" homage and other services were included, and the rent was extinguished. It was held that the defendant had distrained contrary to his ancestor's deed, and judgment was given for the plaintiff, 172-178.

Defendant avowed for rent-charge with a clause of distress in two manors. The plaintiff pleaded as to parcel of the two manors that the person who charged had by fine a joint estate with his wife, who had since become the plaintiff's wife, and pleaded as to the residue a release executed by the defendant's father. A question thereupon arose as to whether the place in which the taking was effected was parcel of the land comprised in the fine or of that comprised in the release, 204-206. See also 354-356.

Defendant (an Abbess) avowed for (inter alia) the services of 25s. per annum, whereof 5s. were to be paid at a certain term at her larder. The plaintiff alleged a release as to the 5s. The defendant replied that the release was in respect of 5s. which the steward had been in the habit of extorting, and not to the 5s. in respect of which she avowed. Issue was joined thereon, 320-326. Judgment in Replevin, 354.

Double Plea in Replevin, 204-206, 354-356.

REVERSION:

If in a lease by deed, made by three persons, the reversion be saved to the three and the heirs of one of them, the words applying to the one are void, and the reversion is to the three as of common right (per Willoughby, J.), 20-26.

RIGHT, WRIT OF:

Where the demandant laid the seisin in her grandfather, A., and traced the descent, through her father, to herself, it was alleged by the tenant that the demandant's father was a younger son of A., and that the tenant had entered as son and heir of A.'s elder son, who had been seised. Issue was joined as to whether the demandant's father was the elder son of A., 200-202.

The mise was joined upon two deeds, by the first of which the demandant had enfeoffed a third person, and by the second of which the demandant had released to the tenant who was the feoffee of the third person, 242.

Writ of Right in the Guildhall of London, and count thereon as on writ of Formedon, 248.

RIGHT OF ADVOWSON, WRIT OF:

Issue joined on, as to alleged grant of the church in frank-almoign to a religious house by an ancestor of the demandant, 102-104.

RIGHT (CLOSE), WRIT OF:

Brought in Court of Ancient Demesne, and removed into Court of Common Pleas, after suggestion in Chancery that the tenant held the tenements as frank fee, 50-54.

Protection allowed for the tenant, 50-54.

RIGHT (PATENT), WRIT OF:

When, after removal by Tolt, there was an adjournment into the Bench, the patent was not sent by the Sheriff, but produced by the party, 114.

RIGHT DE RATIONABILIBUS DIVISIS, WRIT OF:

Aid may be granted on this writ, 230-232.

The demandant executed a release of part of his demand after the mise has been joined, and after the election of the Grand Assise, and judgment was given for the tenant in respect of that part. The demandant then prayed the Grand Assise as to the residue. The Court was in doubt whether it could take the Grand Assise, and adjourned, but the tenant did not appear on the day, and judgment was given as to the residue for the demandant, 230, note 2.

S.SCIRE FACIAS:

Against executors of obligee (after they had sued execution on Statute Merchant) to answer as to deed of defeasance, 30.

In a Scire facias on a recognisance, where two persons sued, the moneys were delivered to one and to the attorney of the other, 30.

A Scire facias was brought on a Quare impedit in which the King had recovered because the temporalities of a bishopric were in his hand. The Bishop, nevertheless, tendered the averment in the Scire facias that the church was not vacant at the time at which the temporalities were in the King's hand. Although it was argued that, inasmuch as the King's title had not been denied in the Quare impedit itself, this averment could not be admitted in the Scire facias, the averment was, nevertheless, admitted, and issue was joined thereon, 194-198.

Answer of bailiff of Liberty to a Scire facias as returned by Sheriff, 242.

(Ad audiendum errores), 292-294.

(On Fine.) It was pleaded that the plaintiff in the Scire facias had been named as defendant in a writ of assise of Novel Disseisin, by which the tenements had been recovered, and, though acquitted of the disseisin, had remainder after the disseisors, and that the fine was mesne between the disseisin and the recovery. Against this was tendered the averment that the supposed disseisee never had anything in the tenements. Notwithstanding the record of the assise, the averment was accepted, 214-220.

Issue may be joined as to non-tenure of parcel, but, in that case answer must be made as to the residue, 282.

If the fine was sur don, grant, et render, to A. for life, reversion to B. in tail, remainder to C. in tail, remainder to the right heirs of A., and if C. was seised, semble that, the fine having been executed, a Scire facias does not lie, for C.'s son and heir, 280-288.

STATUTE MERCHANT :

Execution having been sued upon a Statute Merchant, the Sheriff returned that the obligor was dead. The ter-tenant subsequently produced a writ from the Chancery setting forth that there was a deed of defeasance, and thereupon a Supersedeas issued to stay execution, and a Scire facias against the obligee's executors to cause them to answer as to the deed, 30.

If the executor of the obligee be outlawed and subsequently sue execution, and the ter-tenants who have been ousted pray restitution, they cannot have it, as the outlawry does not discharge the lands or enure to their advantage, 38-40.

SUIT OF COURT :

If avowry be made for suit to the court of a manor, it is not necessary to mention any particular place at which the suit is to be done, 326-328.

One may be charged with suit to more courts than one, notwithstanding the fact that the divers suits might have to be done on the same day, but, in the case in which the question arose, one suit was suit royal, and another suit service, 322, 326.

The defendant alleged a prescription that those seised of his freehold had a profit in a certain wood such that they might (if the first comers) take and carry away the branches, up to the trunk, of any tree blown down or felled. Issue joined thereon, 104-114.

VIEW :

When a tenant who has brought an action of Replevin has, upon an avowry for services for certain lands, &c., disclaimed holding of the avowant, he cannot afterwards, when a writ of Right on Disclaimer is brought against him by the avowant in respect of the same lands, &c., have view, 14–18.

Not allowed upon writ of Right of Advowson of Tithes without cause shown, 102.

In Formedon in the Descender, view was demanded and granted by judgment, though it was alleged that a writ had previously been brought in respect of the same tenements and abated. The previous writ, however, had included a greater quantity, and was brought on a different title, and the case was therefore held not to fall within the Statute 13 Ed. I. (Westm. 2), c. 48, 242–246.

View is not granted to tenant on writ of Quare deforciat, 306.

The plaintiff, Warden of a Hospital, counterpleaded, on the ground that E., being a villein of the Hospital, married C. and had issue by her, F., likewise a villein of the Hospital, who had issue G., also a villein of the Hospital, and prayed judgment whether A. and B. could be vouched while G. was living. Issue was joined as to whether there was any such G. living, 46, note 1 ; 48–50.

In Formedon in the Remainder against husband and wife, the wife, having been admitted to defend on default of the husband, vouched the husband, showing as cause that there had been a fine sur don, grant, et render levied between her husband and herself plaintiffs, and one R. deforciant, whereby R. rendered to her husband and her and the heirs of their two bodies, and that her husband was cousin and heir of R. It was alleged by the demandant that R. was a bastard, but as he had been named "son of" S. in the demandant's writ, this plea was not allowed, and the voucher was held good though there was no clause of warranty in the fine, the plea as to which would lie in the mouth of the vouches when he appeared, 150-156.

The Sheriff having returned that one of two vouches had been summoned, and that the other had nothing, the tenant purposed to admit that the latter had nothing. Quare the cause, 182-184.

CALENDARS OF STATE PAPERS. &c.

[IMPERIAL 8vo., boards. Price 15s. each Volume or Part.]

As far back as the year 1800, a Committee of the House of Commons recommended that Indexes and Calendars should be made to the Public Records, and thirty-six years afterwards another Committee of the House of Commons reiterated that recommendation in more forcible words; but it was not until the incorporation of the State Paper Office with the Public Record Office that the Master of the Rolls found himself in a position to take the necessary steps for carrying out the wishes of the House of Commons.

On 7 December 1855, he stated to the Lords of the Treasury that although "the Records, State Papers, and Documents in his charge constitute the most complete and perfect series of their kind in the civilized world," and although "they are of the greatest value in a historical and constitutional point of view, yet they are comparatively useless to the public, from the want of proper Calendars and Indexes." Acting upon the recommendations of the Committees of the House of Commons above referred to, he suggested to the Lords of the Treasury that to effect the object he had in view it would be necessary for him to employ a few Persons fully qualified to perform the work which he contemplated.

Their Lordships assented to the necessity of having Calendars prepared and printed, and empowered the Master of the Rolls to take such steps as might be necessary for this purpose.

THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

[ROYAL 8vo. Price 10s. each Volume or Part.]

On 25 July 1822, the House of Commons presented an address to the Crown, stating that the editions of the works of our ancient historians were inconvenient and defective; that many of their writings still remained in manuscript, and, in some cases, in a single copy only. They added, "that an uniform and convenient edition of the whole, published under His Majesty's royal sanction, would be an undertaking honourable to His Majesty's reign, and conducive to the advancement of historical and constitutional knowledge; that the House therefore humbly besought His Majesty, that He would be graciously pleased to give such directions as His Majesty, in His wisdom, might think fit, for the publication of a complete edition of the ancient historians of this realm, and assured His Majesty that whatever expense might be necessary for this purpose would be made good."

The Master of the Rolls, being very desirous that effect should be given to the resolution of the House of Commons, submitted to Her Majesty's Treasury in 1857 a plan for the publication of the ancient chronicles and memorials of the United Kingdom, and it was adopted accordingly. In selecting these works, it was considered right, in the first instance, to give preference to those of which the manuscripts were unique, or the materials of which would help to fill up blanks in English history for which no satisfactory and authentic information hitherto existed in any accessible form. One great object the Master of the Rolls had in view was to form a corpus historicum within reasonable limits, and which should be as complete as possible. In a subject of so vast a range, it was important that the historical student should be able to select such volumes as conformed with his own peculiar tastes and studies, and not be put to the expense of purchasing the whole collection; an inconvenience inseparable from any other plan than that which has been in this instance adopted.

Of the Chronicles and Memorials, the following volumes have been published. They embrace the period from the earliest time of British history down to the end of the reign of Henry VII.

1. THE CHRONICLE OF ENGLAND, by JOHN CAPGRAVE. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

Capgrave was prior of Lynn, in Norfolk, and provincial of the order of the Friars Hermits of England shortly before the year 1464. His Chronicle extends from the creation of the world to the year 1417. As a record of the language spoken in Norfolk (being written in English), it is of considerable value.

2. CHRONICON MONASTERII DE ABINGDON. Vols. I. and II. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1858.

This Chronicle traces the history of the great Benedictine monastery of Abingdon in Berkshire, from its foundation by King Ina of Wessex, to the reign of Richard I., shortly after which period the present narrative was drawn up by an inmate of the establishment. The author had access to the title-deeds of the house; and incorporates into his history various charters of the Saxon kings, of great importance as illustrating not only the history of the locality but that of the kingdom. The work is printed for the first time.

3. LIVES OF EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. I.—La Estoire de Saint Aedward le Rei II.—Vita Beati Edvardi Regis et Confessoris. III.—Vita Aeduardi Regis qui apud Westmonasterium requiescit. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1858.

The first is a poem in Norman French, containing 4,688 lines, addressed to Alianor, Queen of Henry III., probably written in 1245, on the restoration of the church of Westminster. Nothing is known of the author. The second is an anonymous poem, containing 536 lines, written between 1440 and 1450, by command of Henry VI., to whom it is dedicated. It does not throw any new light on the reign of Edward the Confessor, but is valuable as a specimen of the Latin poetry of the time. The third, also by an anonymous author, was apparently written for Queen Edith, between 1066 and 1074, during the pressure of the suffering brought on the Saxons by the Norman conquest. It notices many acts not found in other writers, and some which differ considerably from the usual accounts.

4. MONUMENTA FRANCISCANA. Vol. I.—Thomas de Eccleston de Adventu Fratrum Minorum in Angliam. Adæ de Marisco Epistolæ. Registrum Fratrum Minorum Londoniæ. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vol. II.—De Adventu Minorum; re-edited, with additions. Chronicle of the Grey Friars. The ancient English version of the Rule of St. Francis. Abbreviatio Statutorum, 1451, &c. Edited by RICHARD HOWLETT, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1858, 1882.

The first volume contains original materials for the history of the settlement of the order of Saint Francis in England, the letters of Adam de Marisco, and other papers connected with the foundation and diffusion of this great body. None of these have been before printed. The second volume contains materials found, since the first volume was published, among the MSS. of Sir Charles Isham, and in various libraries.

5. FASCICULI ZIZANIORUM MAGISTRI JOHANNIS WYCLIF CUM TRITICO. Ascribed to THOMAS NETTER, of WALDEN, Provincial of the Carmelite Order in England, and Confessor to King Henry the Fifth. Edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, M.A., Tutor and late Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 1858.

This work derives its principal value from being the only contemporaneous account of the rise of the Lollards. When written, the disputes of the schoolmen had been extended to the field of theology, and they appear both in the writings of Wycliff and in those of his adversaries. Wycliff's little bundles of tares are not less metaphysical than theological, and the conflict between Nominalists and Realists rages side by side with the conflict between the different interpreters of Scripture. The work gives a good idea of the controversies at the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th centuries.

6. THE BUIK OF THE CRONICLIS OF SCOTLAND; OR, A METRICAL VERSION OF THE HISTORY OF HECTOR BOECE; by WILLIAM STEWART. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, 1858.

This is a metrical translation of a Latin Prose Chronicle, written in the first half of the 16th century. The narrative begins with the earliest legends and ends with the death of James I. of Scotland, and the "evil ending of the traitors that slew him." Strict accuracy of statement is not to be looked for; but the stories of the colonisation of Spain, Ireland, and Scotland are interesting if not true; and the chronicle reflects the manners, sentiments, and character of the age in which it was composed. The peculiarities of the Scottish dialect are well illustrated in this version, and the student of language will find ample materials for comparison with the English dialects of the same period, and with modern lowland Scotch.

7. JOHANNIS CAPGRAVE LIBER DE ILLUSTRIBUS HENRICIS. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGSTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

This work is dedicated to Henry VI. of England, who appears to have been, in the author's estimation, the greatest of all the Henries. It is divided into three parts, each having a separate dedication. The first part relates only to the history of the Empire, from the election of Henry I. the Fowler, to the end of the reign of the Emperor Henry VI. The second part is devoted to English history, from the accession of Henry I. in 1100, to 1446, which was the twenty-fourth year of the reign of Henry VI. The third part contains the lives of illustrious men who have borne the name of Henry in various parts of the world. Capgrave was born in 1393, in the reign of Richard II., and lived during the Wars of the Roses, for which period his work is of some value.

8. HISTORIA MONASTERII S. AUGUSTINI CANTUARIENSIS, by THOMAS OF ELMHAM, formerly Monk and Treasurer of that Foundation. Edited by CHARLES HARDWICK, M.A., Fellow of St. Catharine's Hall, and Christian Advocate in the University of Cambridge. 1858.

This history extends from the arrival of St. Augustine in Kent until 1191. Prefixed is a chronology as far as 1418, which shows in outline what was to have been the character of the work when completed. The author was connected with Norfolk, and most probably with Elmham.

9. EULOGIUM (HISTORIARUM SIVE TEMPORIS): Chronicon ab Orbe condito usque ad Annum Domini 1366; a Monacho quodam Malmesbiriensi exaratum. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by F. S. HAYDON, Esq., B.A. 1858-1863.

This is a Latin Chronicle extending from the Creation to the latter part of the reign of Edward III., and written by a monk of the Abbey of Malmesbury, in Wiltshire, about the year 1367. A continuation, carrying the history of England down to the year 1413, was added in the former half of the fifteenth century by an author whose name is not known. The original Chronicle contains a history of the world generally, but more especially of England to the year 1366. The continuation extends the history down to the coronation of Henry V. The Eulogium itself is chiefly valuable as containing a history, by a contemporary, of the period between 1366 and 1368. Among other interesting matter, the Chronicle contains a diary of the Poitiers campaign, evidently furnished by some person who accompanied the army of the Black Prince. The continuation of the Chronicle is also the work of a contemporary, and gives a very interesting account of the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV.

10. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE SEVENTH: Bernardi Andreæ Tholosatis Vita Regis Henrici Septimi; necnon alia quædam ad eundem Regem spectantia. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1858.

The contents of this volume are—(1) a life of Henry VII., by his poet laureate and historiographer, Bernard André, of Toulouse, with some compositions in verse, of which he is supposed to have been the author; (2) the journals of Roger Machado during certain embassies on which he was sent by Henry VII. to Spain and Brittany, the first of which had reference to the marriage of the King's son, Arthur, with Catharine of Arragon; (3) two curious reports by envoys sent to Spain in 1505 touching the succession to the Crown of Castile, and a project of marriage between Henry VII. and the Queen of Naples; and (4) an account of Philip of Castile's reception in England in 1506. Other documents of interest are given in an appendix.

11. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE FIFTH. I.—Vita Henrici Quinti, Roberto Redmanno auctore. II.—Versus Rhythmici in laudem Regis Henrici Quinti. III.—Elmhami Liber Metricus de Henrico V. Edited by CHARLES A. COLZ, Esq. 1858.

This volume contains three treatises which more or less illustrate the history of the reign of Henry V., viz.: A life by Robert Redman; a Metrical Chronicle by Thomas Elmham, prior of Lenton, a contemporary author; Versus Rhythmici, written apparently by a monk of Westminster Abbey, who was also a contemporary of Henry V. These works are printed for the first time.

12. MUNIMENTA GILDHALLÆ LONDONIENSIS; Liber Albus, Liber Custumarum, et Liber Horn, in archivis Gildhallæ asservati. Vol. I., Liber Albus. Vol. II. (in Two Parts), Liber Custumarum. Vol. III., Translation of the Anglo-Norman Passages in Liber Albus, Glossaries, Appendices, and Index. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1859-1862.

The manuscript of the Liber Albus, compiled by John Carpenter, Common Clerk of the City of London in the year 1419, gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of that City in the 12th, 13th, 14th, and early part of the 15th centuries. The Liber Custumarum was compiled probably by various hands in the early part of the 14th century during the reign of Edward II. The manuscript, a folio volume, is preserved in the Record Room of the City of London, though some portion in its original state, borrowed from the City in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and never returned, forms part of the Cottonian MS. Claudius D. II. in the British Museum. It also gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of the City of London in the 12th, 13th, and early part of the 14th centuries.

13. CHRONICA JOHANNIS DE OXENEDES. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS, K.H. 1859.

Although this Chronicle tells of the arrival of Hengist and Horsa in England in 449, yet it substantially begins with the reign of King Alfred, and comes down to 1293, where it ends abruptly. The history is particularly valuable for notices of events in the eastern portions of the Kingdom, not to be elsewhere obtained. Some curious facts are mentioned relative to the floods in that part of England, which are confirmed in the Friesland Chronicle of Anthony Heinrich, pastor of the Island of Mohr.

14. A COLLECTION OF POLITICAL POEMS AND SONGS RELATING TO ENGLISH HISTORY, FROM THE ACCESSION OF EDWARD III. TO THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1859-1861.

These Poems are perhaps the most interesting of all the historical writings of the period, though they cannot be relied on for accuracy of statement. They are various in character; some are upon religious subjects, some may be called satires, and some give no more than a court scandal; but as a whole they present a very fair picture of society, and of the relations of the different classes to one another. The period comprised is in itself interesting, and brings us through the decline of the feudal system, to the beginning of our modern history. The songs in old English are of considerable value to the philologist.

15. THE "OPUS TERTIUM," "OPUS MINUS," &c., OF ROGER BACON. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1859.

This is the celebrated treatise—never before printed—so frequently referred to by the great philosopher in his works. It contains the fullest details we possess of the life and labours of Roger Bacon: also a fragment by the same author, supposed to be unique, the "Compendium Studii Theologici."

16. BARTHOLOMÆI DE COTTON, MONACHI NORWICENSIS, HISTORIA ANGLICANA; 449-1298: necnon ejusdem Liber de Archiepiscopis et Episcopis Angliæ. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1859.

The author, a monk of Norwich, has here given us a Chronicle of England from the arrival of the Saxons in 449 to the year 1298, in or about which year it appears that he died. The latter portion of this history (the whole of the reign of Edward I. more especially) is of great value, as the writer was contemporary with the events which he records. An Appendix contains several illustrative documents connected with the previous narrative.

17. BRUT Y TYWYSGOGION; or, The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

This work, also known as "The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales," has been attributed to Caradoc of Llancarvan, who flourished about the middle of the twelfth century. It is written in the ancient Welsh language, begins with the abdication and death of Cadwaladr at Rome, in the year 681, and continues the history down to the subjugation of Wales by Edward I., about the year 1282.

18. A COLLECTION OF ROYAL AND HISTORICAL LETTERS DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY IV. 1399-1404. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1860.

This volume, like all the others in the series containing a miscellaneous selection of letters, is valuable on account of the light it throws upon biographical history, and the familiar view it presents of characters, manners, and events.

19. THE REPRESSOR OF OVER MUCH BLAMING OF THE CLERGY. By REGINALD PECOCK, sometime Bishop of Chichester. Vols. I and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1860.

The "Repressor" may be considered the earliest piece of good theological disquisition of which our English prose literature can boast. The author was born about the end of the fourteenth century, consecrated Bishop of St. Asaph in the year 1444, and translated to the see of Chichester in 1460. While Bishop of St. Asaph, he zealously defended his brother prelates from the attacks of those who censured the bishops for their neglect of duty. He maintained that it was no part of a bishop's functions to appear in the pulpit, and that his time might be more profitably spent, and his dignity better maintained, in the performance of works of a higher character. Among those who thought differently were the Lollards, and against their general doctrines the "Repressor" is directed. Pecock took up a position midway between that of the Roman Church and that of the modern Anglican Church; but his work is interesting chiefly because it gives a full account of the views of the Lollards and of the arguments by which they were supported, and because it assists us to ascertain the state of feeling which ultimately led to the Reformation. Apart from religious matters, the light thrown upon contemporaneous history is very small, but the "Repressor" has great value for the philologist, as it tells us what were the characteristics of the language in use among the cultivated Englishmen of the fifteenth century.

20. ANNALIS CAMBRIÆ. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

These annals, which are in Latin, commence in 447, and come down to 1282. The earlier portion appears to be taken from an Irish Chronicle used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster. During its first century it contains scarcely anything relating to Britain, the earliest direct concurrence with English history is relative to the mission of Augustine. Its notices throughout, though brief, are valuable. The annals were probably written at St. David's, by Blegewyd, Archdeacon of Llandaff, the most learned man in his day in all Cymru.

21. THE WORKS OF GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vols. V., VI., and VII. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1861-1877.

These volumes contain the historical works of Gerald du Barry, who lived in the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John, and attempted to re-establish the independence of Wales by restoring the see of St. David's to its ancient primacy. His works are of a very miscellaneous nature, both in prose and verse, and are remarkable chiefly for the racy and original anecdotes which they contain relating to contemporaries. He is the only Welsh writer of any importance who has contributed so much to the mediæval literature of this country, or assumed, in consequence of his nationality, so free and independent a tone. His frequent travels in Italy, in France, in Ireland, and in Wales, gave him opportunities for observation which did not generally fall to the lot of mediæval writers in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and of these observations Giraldus has made due use. Only extracts from these treatises have been printed before and almost all of them are taken from unique manuscripts.

The Topographia Hibernica (in Vol. V.) is the result of Giraldus' two visits to Ireland. The first in 1185, the second in 1185-6, when he accompanied Prince John into that country. A very interesting portion of this treatise is devoted to the animals of Ireland. It shows that he was a very accurate and acute observer, and his descriptions are given in a way that a scientific naturalist of the present day could hardly improve upon. The Expugnatio Hibernica was written about 1188 and may be regarded rather as a great epic than a sober relation of acts occurring in his own days. Vol. VI. contains the Itinerarium Cambrie et Descriptio Cambrie: and Vol. VII., the lives of S. Remigius and S. Hugh.

22. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE WARS OF THE ENGLISH IN FRANCE DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY THE SIXTH, KING OF ENGLAND. Vol. I., and Vol. II. (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1861-1864.

These letters and papers are derived chiefly from originals or contemporary copies extant in the Bibliothèque Impériale, and the Depot des Archives, in Paris. They illustrate the policy adopted by John Duke of Bedford and his successors during their government of Normandy, and other provinces of France acquired by Henry V. Here may be traced, step by step, the gradual declension of the English power, until we are prepared for its final overthrow.

23. THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE, ACCORDING TO THE SEVERAL ORIGINAL AUTHORITIES. Vol. I., Original Texts. Vol. II., Translation. Edited and translated by BENJAMIN THORPE, Esq., Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Munich, and of the Society of Netherlandish Literature at Leyden. 1861.

This chronicle, extending from the earliest history of Britain to 1154, is justly the boast of England; no other nation can produce any history, written in its own vernacular, at all approaching it, in antiquity, truthfulness, or extent, the historical books of the Bible alone excepted. There are at present six independent manuscripts of the Saxon Chronicle, ending in different years, and written in different parts of the country. In this edition, the text of each manuscript is printed in columns on the same page, so that the student may see at a glance the various changes which occur in orthography, whether arising from locality or age.

24. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGNS OF RICHARD III. AND HENRY VII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1861-1863.

The papers are derived from the MSS. in Public Record Office, the British Museum, and other repositories. The period to which they refer is unusually destitute of chronicles and other sources of historical information, so that the light obtained from them is of special importance. The principal contents of the volumes are some diplomatic Papers of Richard III.; correspondence between Henry VII. and Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain; documents relating to Edmund de la Pole Earl of Suffolk; and a portion of the correspondence of James IV. of Scotland.

25. LETTERS OF BISHOP GROSSETESTE, illustrative of the Social Condition of his Time. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1861.

The Letters of Robert Grosseteste (131 in number) are here collected from various sources, and a large portion of them is printed for the first time. They range in date from about 1210 to 1263, and relate to various matters connected not only with the political history of England during the reign of Henry III. but with its ecclesiastical condition. They refer especially to the diocese of Lincoln, of which Grosseteste was bishop.

26. DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF MANUSCRIPTS RELATING TO THE HISTORY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. Vol. I. (in Two Parts); Anterior to the Norman Invasion. Vol. II.; 1066-1200. Vol. III.; 1200-1327. By Sir THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, D.C.L., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. 1862-1871.

The object of this work is to publish notices of all known sources of British history, both printed and unprinted, in one continued sequence. The materials, when historical (as distinguished from biographical), are arranged under the year in which the latest event is recorded in the chronicle or history, and not under the period in which its author, real or supposed, flourished. Biographies are enumerated under the year in which the person commemorated died, and not under the year in which the life was written. A brief analysis of each work has been added when deserving it, in which original portions are distinguished from mere compilations. If possible, the sources are indicated from which compilations have been derived. A biographical sketch of the author of each piece has been added, and a brief notice of such British authors as have written on historical subjects.

27. ROYAL AND OTHER HISTORICAL LETTERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGN OF HENRY III. Vol. I., 1216-1235. Vol. II., 1236-1272. Selected and edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, D.D., Regius Professor of Ecclesiastical History, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. 1862-1866.

The letters contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from the ancient correspondence formerly in the Tower of London, and now in the Public Record Office. They illustrate the political history of England during the growth of its liberties, and throw considerable light upon the personal history of Simon de Montfort. The affairs of France form the subject of many of them, especially in regard to the province of Gascony. The entire collection consists of nearly 700 documents, the greater portion of which is printed for the first time.

28. CHRONICA MONASTERII S. ALBANI.—1. THOME WALSHINGHAM HISTORIA ANGLICANA; Vol. I., 1272-1381; Vol. II., 1381-1422. 2. WILLELMI RISHANGER CHRONICA ET ANNALES, 1259-1307. 3. JOHANNIS DE TROKELowe ET HENRICI DE BLANEFORDE CHRONICA ET ANNALES, 1259-1296; 1307-1324; 1392-1406. 4. GESTA ABBATUM MONASTERII S. ALBANI, A THOMA WALSHINGHAM, REGNANTE RICARDO SECUNDO, EJUSDEM ECCLESIE PRECENTORE, COMPILATA; Vol. I., 793-1290; Vol. II., 1290-1349; Vol. III., 1349-1411. 5. JOHANNIS AMUNDESHAM, MONACHI MONASTERII S. ALBANI, UT VIDETUR, ANNALES; Vols. I. and II. 6. REGISTRA QUORUNDAM ABBATUM MONASTERII S. ALBANI, QUI SÆCULO XV^{mo} FLORUERUNT; Vol. I., REGISTRUM ABBATIS JOHANNIS WHETHAMSTEDE, ABBATIS MONASTERII SANCTI ALBANI, ITERUM SUSCEPTI; ROBERTO BLAKENEY, CAPELLANO, QUONDAM ADESCRIPTUM; Vol. II., REGISTRA JOHANNIS WHETHAMSTEDE, WILLELMI ALBON, ET WILLELMI WALINGFORDE, ABBATUM MONASTERII SANCTI ALBANI, CUM APPENDICE, CONTINENTE QUASDAM EPISTOLAS, A JOHANNIS WHETHAMSTEDE CONSCRIPTAS. 7. YPODIGNA NEUSTELE A THOMA WALSHINGHAM, QUONDAM MONACHO MONASTERII S. ALBANI, CONSCRIPTUM. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Cambridge and Oxford; and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1876.

In the first two volumes is a History of England, from the death of Henry III. to the death of Henry V., by Thomas Walsingham, Precentor of St. Albans.

In the 3rd volume is a Chronicle of English History, attributed to William Rishanger, who lived in the reign of Edward I.: an account of transactions attending the award of the kingdom of Scotland to John Balliol, 1291-1293, also attributed to William Rishanger, but on no sufficient ground: a short Chronicle of English History, 1293 to 1300, by an unknown hand: a short Chronicle Willelmi Rishanger Gesta Edwardi Primi, Regis Anglie, with Annales Regum Anglie, probably by the same hand: and fragments of three Chronicles of English History, 1285 to 1307.

In the 4th volume is a Chronicle of English History, 1289 to 1296: Annals of Edward II., 1307 to 1323, by John de Trokelowe, a monk of St. Albans, and a continuation of Trokelowe's Annals, 1323, 1324, by Henry de Blanford: a full Chronicle of English History, 1302 to 1406; and an account of the Benefactors of St. Albans, written in the early part of the 16th century.

The 5th, 6th, and 7th volumes contain a history of the Abbots of St. Albans, 793 to 1411, mainly compiled by Thomas Walsingham: with a Continuation, from the closing pages of Parker MS. VII., in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

The 8th and 9th volumes, in continuation of the Annals, contain a Chronicle, probably by John Amundesham, a monk of St. Albans.

The 10th and 11th volumes relate especially to the acts and proceedings of Abbots Whethamstede, Albon, and Wallingford, and may be considered as a memorial of the chief historical and domestic events during those periods.

The 12th volume contains a compendious History of England to the reign of Henry V., and of Normandy in early times, also by Thomas Walsingham, and dedicated to Henry V. The compiler has often substituted other authorities in place of those consulted in the preparation of his larger work.

29. CHRONICON ABBATIE EYESHAMENSIS, AUCTORIBUS DOMINICO PRIORE EVE SHAMLE ET THOMA DE MARLEBERGE ABBATE, A FUNDATIONE AD ANNUM 1213, UNA CUM CONTINUATIONE AD ANNUM 1418. Edited by the Rev. W. D. MACRAY, Bodleian Library, Oxford. 1863.

The Chronicle of Evesham illustrates the history of that important monastery from its foundation by Erwin, about 690, to the year 1418. Its chief feature is an autobiography, which makes us acquainted with the inner daily life of a great abbey, such as but rarely has been recorded. Interspersed are many notices of general, personal, and local history which will be read with much interest. This work exists in a single MS., and is for the first time printed.

30. RICARDI DE CIRENCESTRIA SPECULUM HISTORIALE DE GESTIS REGUM ANGLIE. Vol. I., 447-871. Vol. II., 872-1066. Edited by JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1863-1869.

The compiler, Richard of Cirencester, was a monk of Westminster, 1355-1400. In 1391 he obtained a licence to make a pilgrimage to Rome. His history, in four books, extends from 447 to 1066. He announces his intention of continuing it, but there is no evidence that he completed any more. This chronicle gives many charters in favour of Westminster Abbey, and a very full account of the lives and miracles of the saints, especially of Edward the Confessor, whose reign occupies the fourth book. A treatise on the Coronation, by William of Sudbury, a monk of Westminster, fills book II. c. 3. It was on this author that C. J. Bertram fathered his forgery, De Situ Britannie in 1747.

31. YEAR BOOKS OF THE REIGN OF EDWARD THE FIRST. Years 20-21, 21-22, 30-31, 32-33, and 33-35 Edw. I.; and 11-12 Edw. III. Edited and translated by ALFRED JOHN HORWOOD, Esq., of the Middle Temple Barrister-at-Law. Years 12-13, 13-14, 14, and 14-15 Edward III. Edited and translated by LUKE OWEN PIKE, Esq., M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1886.

The "Year Books" are the earliest of our Law Reports. They contain matter not only of practical utility to lawyers in the present day, but also illustrative of almost every branch of history, while for certain philological purposes they hold a position absolutely unique. The history of the constitution and of the law, of procedure, and of practice, the jurisdiction of the various Courts, and their relation to one another, as well as to the Sovereign and Council, cannot be known without the aid of the Year Books.

32. NARRATIVES OF THE EXPULSION OF THE ENGLISH FROM NORMANDY 1449-1450. —Robertus Blondelli de Reductione Normannie: Le Recouvrement de Normandie, par Berry, Hérault du Roy: Conférences between the Ambassadors of France and England. Edited, from MSS. in the Imperial Library at Paris, by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham. 1863.

This volume contains the narrative of an eye-witness who details with considerable power and minuteness the circumstances which attended the final expulsion of the English from Normandy in 1450. Commencing with the infringement of the truce by the capture of Fougères, and ending with the battle of Formigny and the embarkation of the Duke of Somerset. The period embraced is less than two years.

33. HISTORIA ET CARTULARIUM MONASTERII S. PETRI GLOUCESTRIÆ. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. H. HART, Esq., F.S.A., Membre correspondant de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie. 1863-1867.

This work consists of two parts, the History and the Cartulary of the Monastery of St. Peter, Gloucester. The history furnishes an account of the monastery from its foundation, in the year 681, to the early part of the reign of Richard II., together with a calendar of donations and benefactions. It treats principally of the affairs of the monastery, but occasionally matters of general history are introduced. Its authorship has generally been assigned to Walter Froucester the twentieth abbot, but without any foundation.

34. ALEXANDRI NECKAM DE NATURIS RERUM LIBRI DUO; with NECKAM'S POEM, DE LAUDIBUS DIVINÆ SAPIENTIÆ. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., 1863.

Neckam was a man who devoted himself to science, such as it was in the twelfth century. In the "De Naturis Rerum" are to be found what may be called the rudiments of many sciences mixed up with much error and ignorance. Neckam was not thought infallible, even by his contemporaries, for Roger Bacon remarks of him, "This Alexander in many things wrote what was true and useful; but he neither can nor ought by just title to be reckoned among authorities." Neckam, however, had sufficient independence of thought to differ from some of the schoolmen who in his time considered themselves the only judges of literature. He had his own views in morals, and in giving us a glimpse of them, as well as of his other opinions, he throws much light upon the manners, customs, and general tone of thought prevalent in the twelfth century. The poem entitled "De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientię" appears to be a metrical paraphrase or abridgment of the "De Naturis Rerum." It is written in the elegiac metre, and it is, as a whole, above the ordinary standard of mediæval Latin.

35. LEUCHDOMS, WORTCUNNING, AND STARCRAFT OF EARLY ENGLAND; being a Collection of Documents illustrating the History of Science in this Country before the Norman Conquest. Vols. I., II., and III. Collected and edited by the Rev. T. OSWALD COCKAYNE, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge, 1864-1866.

This work illustrates not only the history of science, but the history of superstition. In addition to the information bearing directly upon the medical skill and medical faith of the times, there are many passages which incidentally throw light upon the general mode of life and ordinary diet. The volumes are interesting not only in their scientific, but also in their social aspect.

36. ANNALES MONASTICI. Vol. I.:—Annales de Margan, 1066-1232; Annales de Theokesberia, 1066-1263; Annales de Burton, 1004-1263. Vol. II.:—Annales Monasterii de Wintonia, 519-1277; Annales Monasterii de Waverleia, 1-1291. Vol. III.:—Annales Prioratus de Dunstaplia, 1-1297. Annales Monasterii de Bermundeseia, 1042-1432. Vol. IV.:—Annales Monasterii de Oseneia, 1016-1347; Chronicon vulgo dictum Chronicon Thomæ Wykes, 1066-1289; Annales Prioratus de Wigornia, 1-1377. Vol. V.:—Index and Glossary. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, and Registrar of the University, Cambridge. 1864-1869.

The present collection of Monastic Annals embraces all the more important chronicles compiled in religious houses in England during the thirteenth century. These distinct works are ten in number. The extreme period which they embrace ranges from the year 1 to 1432, although they refer more especially to the reigns of John, Henry III., and Edward I. Some of these narratives have already appeared in print, but others are printed for the first time.

37. MAGNA VITA S. HUGONIS EPISCOPI LINCOLNIENSIS. From MSS. in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and the Imperial Library, Paris. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1864.

This work contains a number of very curious and interesting incidents, and being the work of a contemporary, is very valuable, not only as a truthful biography of a celebrated ecclesiastic but as the work of a man, who, from personal knowledge, gives notices of passing events, as well as of individuals who were then taking active part in public affairs. The author, in all probability, was Adam Abbot of Evesham. He was domestic chaplain and private confessor of Bishop Hugh, and in these capacities was admitted to the closest intimacy. Bishop Hugh was Prior of Witham for 11 years before he became Bishop of Lincoln. His consecration took place on the 21st September 1196; he died on the 16th of November 1200; and was canonized in 1220.

38. CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF THE REIGN OF RICHARD THE FIRST. Vol. I.:—ITINERARIUM PEREGRINORUM ET GESTA REGIS RICARDI. Vol. II.:—EPISTOLÆ CANTUARIENSES; the Letters of the Prior and Convent of Christ Church, Canterbury; 1187 to 1199. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Vicar of Navestock, Essex, and Lambeth Librarian. 1864-1865.

The authorship of the Chronicle in Vol. I., hitherto ascribed to Geoffrey Vincesauf, is now more correctly ascribed to Richard, Canon of the Holy Trinity of London. The narrative extends from 1187 to 1199; but its chief interest consists in the minute and authentic narrative which it furnishes of the exploits of Richard I., from his departure from England in December 1189 to his death in 1199. The author states in his prologue that he was an eye-witness of much that he records; and various incidental circumstances which occur in the course of the narrative confirm this assertion.

The letters in Vol. II., written between 1187 and 1199, are of value as furnishing authentic materials for the history of the ecclesiastical condition of England during the reign of Richard I. They had their origin in a dispute which arose from the attempts of Baldwin and Hubert, archbishops of Canterbury, to found a college of secular canons, a project which gave great umbrage to the monks of Canterbury, who saw in it a design to supplant them in their function of metropolitan chapter. These letters are printed, for the first time, from a MS. belonging to the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth.

39. RECUEIL DES CHRONIQUES ET ANCIENNES HISTOIRES DE LA GRANT BRETAGNEA PRESENT NOMME ENGLETERRE, par JEHAN DE WAURIN. Vol. I. Albina to 688. Vol. II., 1399-1422. Vol. III., 1422-1431. Edited by Sir WILLIAM HARDY, F.S.A. 1864-1879. Vol. IV. 1431-1443. Edited by Sir WILLIAM HARDY, F.S.A., and EDWARD L. O. P. HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1884.

40. A COLLECTION OF THE CHRONICLES AND ANCIENT HISTORIES OF GREAT BRITAIN, NOW CALLED ENGLAND, by JOHN DE WAURIN. Albina to 688. (Translation of the preceding Vols. I. and II.) Edited and translated by Sir WILLIAM HARDY, F.S.A., and EDWARD L. O. P. HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864-1887.

This curious chronicle extends from the fabulous period of history down to the return of Edward IV. to England in the year 1471 after the second deposition of Henry VI. The manuscript from which the text of the work is taken is preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris, and is believed to be the only complete and nearly contemporary copy in existence. It is illustrated with exquisite miniatures, vignettes, and initial letters. It was written towards the end of the fifteenth century, having been expressly executed for Louis de Bruges, Seigneur de la Gruthuyse and Earl of Winchester, from whose cabinet it passed into the library of Louis XII. at Blois.

41. POLYCHRONICON RANULPHI HIGDEN, with Trevisa's Translation. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Senior Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Vols. III., IV., V., VI., VII., VIII., and IX. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH RAWSON LUMBY, D.D., Norrisian Professor of Divinity, Vicar of St. Edward's, Fellow of St. Catharine's College, and late Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. 1865-1886.

This is one of the many mediæval chronicles which assume the character of a history of the world. It begins with the creation, and is brought down to the author's own time, the reign of Edward III. Prefixed to the historical portion, is a chapter devoted to geography, in which is given a description of every known land. To say that the Polychronicon was written in the fourteenth century is to say that it is not free from inaccuracies. It has, however, a value apart from its intrinsic merits. It enables us to form a very fair estimate of the knowledge of history and geography which well-informed readers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries possessed, for it was then the standard work on general history.

The two English translations, which are printed with the original Latin, afford interesting illustrations of the gradual change of our language, for one was made in the fourteenth century, the other in the fifteenth. The differences between Trevisa's version and that of the unknown writer are often considerable.

42. LE LIVRE DE REIS DE BRITTANIE E LE LIVRE DE REIS DE ENGLETERE. Edited by JOHN GLOVER, M.A., Vicar of Brading, Isle of Wight, formerly Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1865.

These two treatises, though they cannot rank as independent narratives, are nevertheless valuable as careful abstracts of previous historians, especially "Le Livre de Reis de Engleterre." Some various readings are given which are interesting to the philologist as instances of semi-Saxonized French. It is supposed that Peter of Ickham was the supposed author.

43. CHRONICA MONASTERII DE MELSA AB ANNO 1150 USQUE AD ANNUM 1406. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by EDWARD AUGUSTUS BOND, Esq., Assistant-Keeper of Manuscripts, and Egerton Librarian, British Museum. 1866-1868.

The Abbey of Melnys was a Cistercian house, and the work of its abbot is both curious and valuable. It is a faithful and often minute record of the establishment of a religious community, of its progress in forming an ample revenue, of its struggles to maintain its acquisitions, and of its relations to the governing institutions of the country. In addition to the private affairs of the monastery, some light is thrown upon the public events of the time, which are however kept distinct, and appear at the end of the history of each abbot's administration. The text has been printed from what is said to be the autograph of the original compiler, Thomas de Burton, the nineteenth abbot.

44. MATTHÆI PARISIENSIS HISTORIA ANGLORUM, SIVE, UT VULGO DICITUR, HISTORIA MINOR. Vols. I., II., and III. 1067-1253. Edited by Sir FREDERIC MADDEN, K.H., Keeper of the Manuscript Department of British Museum. 1866-1869.

The exact date at which this work was written is, according to the chronicler, 1280. The history is of considerable value as an illustration of the period during which the author lived, and contains a good summary of the events which followed the Conquest. This minor chronicle is, however, based on another work (also written by Matthew Paris) giving fuller details, which has been called the "Historia Major." The chronicle here published, nevertheless, gives some information not to be found in the greater history.

45. LIBER MONASTERII DE HYDA: A CHRONICLE AND CHARTULARY OF HYDE ABBEY, WINCHESTER, 455-1023. Edited, from a Manuscript in the Library of the Earl of Macclesfield, by EDWARD EDWARDS, Esq. 1866.

The "Book of Hyde" is a compilation from much earlier sources which are usually indicated with considerable care and precision. In many cases, however, the Hyde Chronicler appears to correct, to qualify, or to amplify—either from tradition or from sources of information not now discoverable—the statements, which, in substance, he adopts. He also mentions, and frequently quotes from writers whose works are either entirely lost or at present known only by fragments.

There is to be found, in the "Book of Hyde," much information relating to the reign of King Alfred which is not known to exist elsewhere. The volume contains some curious specimens of Anglo-Saxon and Mediæval English.

46. CHRONICON SCOTORUM: A CHRONICLE OF IRISH AFFAIRS, from the EARLIEST TIMES to 1135; and SUPPLEMENT, containing the Events from 1141 to 1150. Edited, with Translation, by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1866.

There is, in this volume, a legendary account of the peopling of Ireland and of the adventures which befell the various heroes who are said to have been connected with Irish history. The details are, however, very meagre both for this period and for the time when history becomes more authentic. The plan adopted in the chronicle gives the appearance of an accuracy to which the earlier portions of the work cannot have any claim. The succession of events is marked year by year, from A.M. 1689 to A.D. 1150. The principal events narrated in the later portion of the work are, the invasions of foreigners, and the wars of the Irish among themselves. The text has been printed from a MS. preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, written partly in Latin, partly in Irish.

47. THE CHRONICLE OF PIERRE DE LANGTOFT, IN FRENCH VERSE, FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD TO THE DEATH OF EDWARD I. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1866-1868.

It is probable that Pierre de Langtoft was a canon of Bridlington, in Yorkshire, and lived in the reign of Edward I., and during a portion of the reign of Edward II. This chronicle is divided into three parts; in the first, is an abridgment of Geoffrey of Monmouth's "Historia Britonum;" in the second, a history of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings, to the death of Henry III.; in the third, a history of the reign of Edward I. The principal object of the work was apparently to show the justice of Edward's Scottish wars. The language is singularly corrupt, and a curious specimen of the French of Yorkshire.

48. THE WAR OF THE GAEDHIL WITH THE GAILL, OF THE INVASIONS OF IRELAND BY THE DANES AND OTHER NORSEMEN. Edited, with a Translation, by JAMES HENTHORN TODD, D.D., Senior Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University, Dublin. 1867.

The work in its present form, in the editor's opinion, is a comparatively modern version of an undoubtedly ancient original. That it was compiled from contemporary materials has been proved by curious incidental evidence. It is stated in the account given of the battle of Clontarf that the full tide in Dublin Bay on the day of the battle (23 April 1014) coincided with sunrise; and that the returning tide in the evening aided considerably in the defeat of the Danes. The fact has been verified by astronomical calculations, and the inference is that the author of the chronicle, if not an eye-witness, must have derived his information from eye-witnesses. The contents of the work are sufficiently described in its title. The story is told after the manner of the Scandinavian Sagas, with poems and fragments of poems introduced into the prose narrative.

49. GESTA REGIS HENRICI SECUNDI BENEDICTI ABBATIS. CHRONICLE OF THE REIGNS OF HENRY II. AND RICHARD I., 1169-1192, KNOWN UNDER THE NAME OF BENEDICT OF PETERBOROUGH. Vols. I. and II. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford, and Lambeth Librarian. 1867.

This chronicle of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., known commonly under the name of Benedict of Peterborough, is one of the best existing specimens of a class of historical compositions of the first importance to the student.

50. MUNIMENTA ACADEMICA, OR, DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF ACADEMICAL LIFE AND STUDIES AT OXFORD (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. HENRY ANSTEX, M.A., Vicar of St. Wendron, Cornwall, and lately Vice-Principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. 1868.

This work will supply materials for a History of Academical Life and Studies in the University of Oxford during the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries.

51. CHRONICA MAGISTRI ROGERI DE HOVEDENE. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1868-1871.

This work has long been justly celebrated, but not thoroughly understood until Mr. Stubbs' edition. The earlier portion, extending from 732 to 1148, appears to be a copy of a compilation made in Northumbria about 1161, to which Hoveden added little. From 1148 to 1169—a very valuable portion of this work—the matter is derived from another source, to which Hoveden appears to have supplied little, and not always judiciously. From 1170 to 1192 is the portion which corresponds with the Chronicle known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough (see No. 49); but it is not a copy, being sometimes an abridgment, at others a paraphrase; occasionally the two works entirely agree; showing that both writers had access to the same materials, but dealt with them differently. From 1192 to 1201 may be said to be wholly Hoveden's work; it is extremely valuable, and an authority of the first importance.

52. WILLELMI MALMESBURIENSIS MONACHI DE GESTIS PONTIFICUM ANGLORUM DIBBI QUINQUE. Edited by N. E. S. A. HAMILTON, Esq., of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1870.

William of Malmesbury's "Gesta Pontificum" is the principal foundation of English Ecclesiastical Biography, down to the year 1122. The manuscript which has been followed in this Edition is supposed by Mr. Hamilton to be the author's autograph, containing his latest additions and amendments.

53. HISTORIC AND MUNICIPAL DOCUMENTS OF IRELAND, FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE CITY OF DUBLIN, &c. 1172-1320. Edited by JOHN T. GILBERT, Esq., F.S.A., Secretary of the Public Record Office of Ireland. 1870.

A collection of original documents, elucidating mainly the history and condition of the municipal, middle, and trading classes under or in relation with the rule of England in Ireland—a subject hitherto in almost total obscurity. Extending over the first hundred and fifty years of the Anglo-Norman settlement, the series includes charters, municipal laws and regulations, rolls of names of citizens and members of merchant-guilds, lists of commodities with their rates, correspondence, illustrations of relations between ecclesiastics and laity; together with many documents exhibiting the state of Ireland during the presence there of the Scots under Robert and Edward Bruce.

54. THE ANNALS OF LOCH CÉ. A CHRONICLE OF IRISH AFFAIRS, FROM 1041 to 1590. Vols. I. and II. Edited, with a Translation, by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1871.

The original of this chronicle has passed under various names. The title of "Annals of Loch Cé" was given to it by Professor O'Curry, on the ground that it was transcribed for Brian Mac Dermot, an Irish chieftain, who resided on the island in Loch Cé, in the county of Roscommon. It adds much to the materials for the civil and ecclesiastical history of Ireland; and contains many curious references to English and foreign affairs, not noticed in any other chronicle.

55. MONUMENTA JURIDICA. THE BLACK BOOK OF THE ADMIRALTY, WITH APPENDICES. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by SIR TRAVERS TWISS, Q.C., D.C.L. 1871-1876.

This book contains the ancient ordinances and laws relating to the navy, and was probably compiled for the use of the Lord High Admiral of England. Selden calls it the "jewel of the Admiralty Records." Frynne ascribes to the Black Book the same authority in the Admiralty as the Black and Red Books have in the Court of Exchequer, and most English writers on maritime law recognise its importance.

56. MEMORIALS OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VI.:—OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THOMAS BEKYNTON, SECRETARY TO HENRY VI., AND BISHOP OF BATH AND WELLS. Edited, from a MS. in the Archiepiscopal Library at Lambeth, with an Appendix of Illustrative Documents, by the Rev. GEORGE WILLIAMS, B.D., Vicar of Ringwood, late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Vols. I. and II. 1872.

These curious volumes are of a miscellaneous character, and were probably compiled under the immediate direction of Beckynton before he had attained to the Episcopate. They contain many of the Bishop's own letters, and several written by him in the King's name; also letters to himself while Royal Secretary, and others addressed to the King.

57. MATTHEI PARISIENSIS, MONACHI SANCTI ALBANI, CHRONICA MAJORA. Vol. I. The Creation to A.D. 1066. Vol. II. A.D. 1067 to A.D. 1216. Vol. III. A.D. 1216 to A.D. 1239. Vol. IV. A.D. 1240 to A.D. 1247. Vol. V. A.D. 1248 to A.D. 1259. Vol. VI. Additamenta. Vol. VII. Index. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, D.D., Fellow of Trinity College, Registry of the University, and Vicar of Great St. Mary's, Cambridge. 1872-1884.

This work contains the "Chronica Majora" of Matthew Paris, one of the most valuable and frequently consulted of the ancient English Chronicles. It is published from its commencement, for the first time. The editions by Archbishop Parker, and William Watts, severally begin at the Norman Conquest.

58. MEMORIALE FRATRIS WALTERI DE COVENTRIA.—THE HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS OF WALTER OF COVENTRY. Vols. I. and II. Edited, from the MS. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1872-1873.

This work, now printed in full for the first time, has long been a desideratum by Historical Scholars. The first portion, however, is not of much importance, being only a compilation from earlier writers. The part relating to the first quarter of the thirteenth century is the most valuable and interesting.

59. THE ANGLO-LATIN SATIRICAL POETS AND EPIGRAMMATISTS OF THE TWELFTH CENTURY. Vols. I. and II. Collected and edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., Corresponding Member of the National Institute of France (Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres). 1872.

The Poems contained in these volumes have long been known and appreciated as the best satires of the age in which their authors flourished, and were deservedly popular during the 13th and 14th centuries.

60. MATERIALS FOR A HISTORY OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VII., FROM ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS PRESERVED IN THE PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE. Vols. I. and II. Edited by the Rev. WILLIAM CAMPBELL, M.A., one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools. 1873-1877.

These volumes are valuable as illustrating the acts and proceedings of Henry VII. on ascending the throne, and shadow out the policy he afterwards adopted.

61. HISTORICAL PAPERS AND LETTERS FROM THE NORTHERN REGISTERS. Edited by JAMES RAINES, M.A., Canon of York, and Secretary of the Surtees Society. 1873.

The documents in this volume illustrate, for the most part, the general history of the north of England, particularly in its relation to Scotland.

Henry of Huntingdon's work was first printed by Sir Henry Savile, in 1596, in his "Scriptores post Bedam," and reprinted at Frankfort in 1601. Both editions are very rare and inaccurate. The first five books of the History were published in 1848 in the "Monumenta Historiæ Britannicæ," which is out of print. The present volume contains the whole of the manuscript of Huntingdon's History in eight books, collated with a manuscript lately discovered at Paris.

It derives its name from containing the statutes, rules, and orders made or compiled by S. Osmund, to be observed in the Cathedral and diocese of Salisbury. The first 19 folios contain the "Consuetudinary," the exposition, as regards ritual, of the "Use of Sarum."

With them are included accounts of the other establishments of the Cistercian Order in Ireland, together with the earliest body of Anglo-Irish Annals extant.

WORKS PUBLISHED IN PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY.

DOMESDAY BOOK, or the GREAT SURVEY OF ENGLAND OF WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, 1086; fac-simile of the Part relating to each county, separately (with a few exceptions of double counties). Photozincographed, by Her Majesty's Command, at the Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton, Colonel Sir HENRY JAMES, R.E., F.R.S., &c., DIRECTOR-GENERAL of the ORDNANCE SURVEY, under the Superintendence of W. BASEVI SANDERS, Esq., Assistant Keeper of Her Majesty's Records. 35 Parts, imperial quarto and demy quarto (1861-1863), boards. Price 8s. to 1l. 3s. each Part, according to size; or, bound in 2 Vols., 20l. (The edition in two volumes is out of print.)

This important and unique survey of the greater portion of England* is the oldest and most valuable record in the national archives. It was commenced about the year 1084 and finished in 1086. Its compilation was determined upon at Gloucester by William the Conqueror, in council, in order that he might know what was due to him, in the way of tax, from his subjects, and that each at the same time might know what he had to pay. It was compiled as much for their protection as for the benefit of the sovereign. The nobility and people had been grievously distressed at the time by the king bringing over large numbers of French and Bretons, and quartering them on his subjects, "each according to the measure of his land," for the purpose of resisting the invasion of Cnut, King of Denmark, which was apprehended. The Commissioners appointed to make the survey were to inquire the name of each place; who held it in the time of King Edward the Confessor; the present possessor; how many hides were in the manor; how many ploughs were in the demesne; how many homagers; how many villeins; how many cottars; how many serving men; how many free tenants; how many tenants in soccage; how much wood, meadow, and pasture; the number of mills and fish ponds; what had been added or taken away from the place; what was the gross value in the time of Edward the Confessor; the present value; and how much each free man or soc-man had, and whether any advance could be made in the value. Thus could be ascertained who held the estate in the time of King Edward; who then held it; its value in the time of the late King; and its value as it stood at the formation of the survey. So minute was the survey, that the writer of the contemporary portion of the Saxon Chronicle records, with some asperity—"So very narrowly he caused it to be traced out, that there was not a single hide, nor one virgate of land, nor even, "it is shame to tell, though it seemed to him no shame to do, an ox, nor a cow, nor a swine was left, that was not set down."

Domesday Survey is in two parts or volumes. The first, in folio, contains the counties of Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Cambridge, Chester, and Lancaster, Cornwall, Derby, Devon, Dorset, Gloucester, Hants, Hereford, Herts, Huntingdon, Kent, Leicester and Rutland, Lincoln, Middlesex, Northampton, Nottingham, Oxford, Salop, Somerset, Stafford, Surrey, Sussex, Warwick, Wilts, Worcester, and York. The second volume, in quarto, contains the counties of Essex, Norfolk and Suffolk.

Domesday Book was printed verbatim et literatim during the last century, in consequence of an address of the House of Lords to King George III. in 1767. It was not, however, commenced until 1773, and was completed early in 1783. In 1860, Her Majesty's Government, with the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls, determined to apply the art of photozincography to the production of a fac-simile of Domesday Book, under the superintendence of Colonel Sir Henry James, R.E., Director-General of the Ordnance Survey, Southampton.

FAC-SIMILES OF NATIONAL MANUSCRIPTS, from WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to QUEEN ANNE, selected under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, and Photozincographed, by Command of Her Majesty, by Colonel Sir HENRY JAMES, R.E., F.R.S., DIRECTOR-GENERAL of the ORDNANCE SURVEY, and edited by

* For some reason left unexplained, many parts were left unsurveyed; Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham, are not described in the survey; nor does Lancashire appear under its proper name; but Furness, and the northern part of Lancashire, as well as the south of Westmoreland, with a part of Cumberland, are included within the West Riding of Yorkshire. That part of Lancashire which lies between the Ribble and Mersey, and which at the time of the survey comprehended 688 manors, is joined to Cheshire. Part of Rutland is described in the counties of Northampton and Lincoln.

This work forms a comprehensive Palæographic Series for Ireland. It furnishes characteristic specimens of the documents which have come down from each of the classes which, in past ages, formed principal elements in the population of Ireland, or exercised an influence in her affairs. With these reproductions are combined fac-similes of writings connected with eminent personages or transactions of importance in the annals of the country to the early part of the eighteenth century.

The specimens have been reproduced as nearly as possible in accordance with the originals, in dimensions, colouring, and general appearance. Characteristic examples of styles of writing and caligraphic ornamentation are, so far as practicable, associated with subjects of historic and linguistic interest. Descriptions of the various manuscripts are given by the Editor in the Introduction. The contents of the specimens are fully elucidated and printed in the original languages, opposite to the Fac-similes—line for line—without contractions—thus facilitating reference and aiding effectively those interested in palæographic studies.

In the work are also printed in full, for the first time, many original and important historical documents.

Part I. commences with the earliest Irish MSS. extant.

Part II.: From the Twelfth Century to A.D. 1299.

Part III.: From A.D. 1800 to end of reign of Henry VIII.

Part IV. 1.: From reign of Edward VI. to that of James I.

In Part IV. 2.—the work is carried down to the early part of the eighteenth century, with Index to the entire publication.
